After Westcott set the tone for the three-hour workshop, the consultants, which included architects, a civil engineer, a marketing specialist and town planners, presented their portion of the project.

The most immediate outcome of the project will be a set of bylaws to be brought to voters at the fall Town Meeting, as well as design guidelines to be approved and used by the planning board and long term policy considerations, particularly for parking, said Westcott.

Peter Mahady, a market analyst from FXM Associates, provided a market overview of the village business district, roughly from Carousel Antiques to the Red Lion Inn. He found the village district holds about 17 percent of town-wide business establishment, employment and sales. His findings, however, were heartening for retail business potential.

Residents and business owners met Saturday morning in Cohasset to discuss the business future of the Village.

Their analysis determined there is a significant gap between area spending in a 15-minute drive time radius and sales inside the district. The gap indicates there is room for growth and additional stores in the area (see related story). The research and analysis was limited due to time and budget so it did not take into account planned or proposed projects in the area, like the Hingham Shipyard mixed-use development or the proposed Transit Oriented District shopping and residential development on Route 3A and how they might affect the Village.

"There's a special dynamic in the Village," said Economic Development Committee chairman Peter Brown, with the nearby harbor and Cohasset's upscale reputation that's not specifically factored into the market research. "There's economic value created by being different."

Angus Jennings, principal on the project from Concord Square Development Company, focused his presentation on keeping the village character while encouraging positive new development. Major proposed changes include introducing a floor area ratio for the district, regulating the buildings rather than the use, and moving the special permit granting authority to the Planning Board. The much-debated 40,000 square foot lot size to have apartments in the Village will be a thing of the past. He also proposed addressing parking policies to better regulate the limited parking in the area.

A key component to the success of the Village was creating a second street façade facing the town parking lot. The bylaws will be written so buildings that abut the municipal parking lot are encouraged to establish a village atmosphere and appearance on the land facing the parking lot.

To better visualize what bylaw changes will make possible, the architectural firm, Carr, Lynch and Sandell, drew up hypothetical plans for four lots in the district as a means to evaluate and visualize the written draft bylaws.

The rear of the gas station was drawn with several smaller buildings to create additional open space. It was designed to relate better with the parking way and the parking lot and create a more pedestrian friendly atmosphere. Depot Court, the Village Deli/Cohasset News building and Smith Place were also redesigned.

Creating interesting public spaces, adding plantings, increasing parking and designing different roof shapes were some of the key ideas depicted throughout the designs.

Workshop participants then broke into groups each with a specific focus — zoning bylaws, open space and parking, architecture. For 45 minutes the groups discussed ideas and visions for the village. Maps of the Village Business District were marked up as property owners discussed their plans and residents explained what they would like to see in the Village. Discussion on sustainability and green development, safe pedestrian access, affordable housing and parking were major topics at the tables.

"It seems residents are comfortable with mixed-use development in the Village provided it is done in a way consistent with the character and architecture currently in the area," said Jennings this week. He also walked away knowing the development of the backside of the South Main Street block near the parking area one of the most important pieces to creating a viable business area. He is taking into consideration comments from the meeting to tweak the portion of the bylaws concerning this area.

The planning board has been hesitant to act on any proposed bylaw changes until a professional town planner fully vetted the Village's situation and determined limits for healthy development. Many proposed projects in the village district have been on hold as they wait on zoning bylaw changes. With the hard work reaching an end, zoning bylaw changes will be brought to the fall Town Meeting to see if they can pass muster with voters. All zoning bylaw changes need to be approved by a two-thirds majority vote.

Two zoning bylaw changes were passed at the annual Town Meeting related to the Village district — the village business district was established separate from the downtown district and a bylaw re-instituting a special permit requirement for apartments.

Village consultants get down to business regional shopping center, Cohasset Village has not lost its stake.

"The Cohasset Village Business District has done well to hold the share it has," states the memo.

Much of the data is driven by analysis of the areas within a 5, 10 and 15-minute drive time from the Village. Mahady found the Village lost a substantial piece of the market in the in the 10 and 15 minute drive times.

The consultants determined the Village would support a variety of smaller store types, including women's clothing, computer and software stores, health and personal care stores, specialty furniture stores, and special food services store. Each appeared to be underrepresented in the market area, according to the memo. In addition, the store types trend toward locating in a village or downtown setting, rather than pay the high rent of large shopping centers. FXM Associates findings also show the area could need additional full and limited service restaurants.

"[The market analysis] doesn't rule out any potential stores," or guarantee success to any store type said Mehady, adding any well managed retail store or restaurant with a superior product and superior service could succeed regardless of market analysis.

The memo offered some strategies Village property owners could employ to bring desired businesses to the area. He encouraged property owners or members of the community to use the market analysis to begin discussions with prospective businesses. Mahady suggested developers look around the area, typically in a 30-minute drive time radius and seek out successful and established small businesses.

Chris Ford, owner of 29 South Main St., brought up the impact additional housing could have on the area.

"Housing and retail each creates value for the other," said Mahady. Apartments on the second floor can generate the income needed to make a Village building viable. The influx of residents would also work to create a friendlier atmosphere for retailers, Mahady said.

"There's been a rebound to more authentic, traditional retail experience. More people are looking for an authentic shopping experience. They want to be mingling in a real street," said Mahady. The Village could provide a shopping destination unique from a mall.

However, some residents were concerned about making the Village a "destination spot" because of the environmental impacts. Resident Jim Shipsky was concerned the data was largely based on 15-minute drive area, which is dependent on the assumption the price of gas is not going to rise significantly and deter people from driving the extra distance. The transportation cost index is still below the overall consumer index, answered Mahady.

"Rising gas prices won't influence the 15-minute drive data, especially in this area," because of its affluence, said Mahady.

In small discussion groups in the latter part of the workshop, members of local environmental group, Sustainable Cohasset, further discussed the notion of re-localization and how the village could play a vital role in developing a sustainable community. They envisioned a town center where the residents of Cohasset could purchase daily needs rather than promote regional visitors to drive to the Village.

Bugs force ban on outdoor activity

Due to public health concerns regarding the Eastern Equine Encephalitis Virus, the Cohasset Public Schools made the decision to ban all outdoor activities on school properties between the hours of 6:30 p.m. and 7:30 a.m., effective this past Monday, Aug. 20. This ban will remain in effect until further notice.

Parents are reminded that there are still risks associated with hours not covered by this ban. Parents are urged to use caution and follow the EEE Safety Fact Sheet. Copies of the EEE Safety Fact Sheet will be available at all Cohasset Public Schools and at the following Web site: www.mass.gov/dph/wnv/wnv1.htm

At this writing, students will be allowed to participate in outdoor activities during school hours. As a parent, you have the right to request your student(s) remain indoors during recess and physical education. If you want your student to remain indoors during recess and physical education, make this request by calling the school nurse in the appropriate school.

Rewarding experience

Sci-Coh youngsters participate in football clinic

By Ellen Maher
SPECIAL TO MARINER

"It was great to see the parents, coaches and varsity players all come together and put on a strong display of teamwork and cooperation for the youth players and their respective families."
Pete Afanisaw

SCITUATE – Saturday, Aug. 18, The Friends of Cohasset Football sponsored the first youth football clinic. Over 30 youngsters and 20 Cohasset High School varsity football players met on Lillard Field behind the high school and proceeded to have an excellent day of football skills, drills and lots of fun. The sponsors of the event, head coach Pete Afanisaw and assistant coach Phil Mahoney, were pleased with the turnout for their first Cohasset clinic.

Kids were divided by age group and quickly went through drill stations manned and supervised by the varsity players and coaches. The veterans shared best practices with their young charges, many of whom participate in Scituate-Cohasset Youth Football. Offense, defense, footwork and blocking techniques were all a part of the day's regimen. These campers were privileged to be the first to practice on the brand new blocking sled that was donated anonymously to the Cohasset High School football program.

"It was great to see the parents, coaches and varsity players all come together and put on a strong display of teamwork and cooperation for the youth players and their respective families," Afanisaw said. "On all levels the end result was a rewarding experience. The campers received some fine instruction and drill work on football specific skills that they can take with them to Sci-Coh practices and games. The players that did the instructing really worked well with the younger kids and served more as mentors and big brothers than instructors benefiting from this selfless type of commitment. Overall it helps build a bridge with the youth players in town, and hopefully will result in more of them playing football in high school. For my varsity players, it allowed for some good bonding and establishment of team chemistry."

Coach Mahoney couldn't agree more.

"Not only does the clinic help the kids, but it helps the team and the staff," Mahoney said. "The camaraderie level was outstanding and you could see players coming together as they helped instruct the campers. It's a nice way to give back to the community and make a good name for the school and the football program."

The Cohasset Gridiron Club sponsored a cookout at the end of the clinic. Gridiron club members manned the grills and provided dogs, burgers, chips and drinks to campers and instructors. It was a perfect ending to a great day of football.

COMMENTARY
MARK GOODMAN

Sports writing has been my dream job since I was 13. I love it every bit as much as I thought I would, and the credit for that goes to anyone reading this.

Four years ago, one could describe my knowledge of local high school sports as non-existent.

Braintree girls soccer was just another team as far as I knew, Pilgrim Arena sounded like an exhibit at Plimouth Plantation, and…wait, lacrosse? What's that?

After four years and 12 state championships covered, a lot has changed.

Now is the time for another change, as last week was my last at the Community Newspaper Company office in Marshfield. Monday, I started at my new position as senior sports editor at the Community Newspaper Company office in Concord, where I'll be covering sports in the towns of Reading, Woburn and Tewksbury.

While I'm excited about the new challenge, it was difficult thinking back on the last four years – three of them as sports editor in Braintree, Norwell, Scituate and Cohasset – and realizing all the players, coaches, parents and rivalries I'll be missing.

The rivalries, in particular, come to mind. There were always a couple fixtures each season that I would anticipate over any other. Norwell-Hanover football, Braintree-Marshfield girls soccer, Scituate-Rockland and Norwell-Abington boys basketball, Scituate-Cohasset boys lacrosse, Norwell-Duxbury girls lacrosse…Book it. I'm there.

The rivalries above produced some classic games I won't soon forget. Rarely do I stand at field level to cover games; I prefer to be up in the stands or press box where I can get a better view of the action. But the two times I can recall being on the field – Braintree-Marshfield Division 1 South girls soccer final in '05, Scituate-Cohasset boys lacrosse state final in '07 – were among the best memories I'll take from the last four years.

The combination of the fans bellowing behind me and the great games taking place in front of me made for unforgettable experiences. Watching the likes of Braintree's Amy Caldwell on the soccer pitch, or Scituate's Gary Crowley and Cohasset's three-headed attack on the lacrosse field, it was plain to see that we were seeing some of the best athletes in this region in action.

Of those 12 state champion teams I covered, six came from Braintree: three from the boys gymnastics team, two from the girls soccer team and one girls basketball title. The hoops team's run in March 2006 was unreal, with two of the last four games going to overtime and the other two coming down the last possession. And just being able to say I've covered a game from the floor of the Garden is an honor in and of itself.

I thought for sure I'd be going back to Causeway Street last March with the Scituate boys, until they ran into Medfield, who, on that day at UMass-Boston anyway, had the better team. It wouldn't surprise me in the least if the Sailors made it at least that far again this season, and I regret I won't be around to see it.

One of my first tasks as a freelancer in the fall of '03 was to cover the Cohasset girls soccer team and, my, how that program has grown since then. In four years the Lady Skippers have gone from a team that hoped to make the state tournament to a team that, with all that talent, could very well contend for a Division 3 South title this season.

Anyone who works with me knows that soccer and basketball are my two favorite sports to cover, and I consider watching all the teams above and others a privilege.

But I also like to think I've learned a thing or two about field hockey, wrestling and, of course, lacrosse, and for that I have the coaches, players and parents in all of these towns to thank.

Sports writing has been my dream job since I was 13. I love it every bit as much as I thought I would, and the credit for that goes to anyone reading this.

Outlaws to honor members of 1947 Plymouth Rockets team

By David Wolcott
DWOLCOTT@CNC.COM

PLYMOUTH – The South Shore Outlaws have only been playing out of Plymouth for a handful of years, but the tradition of semiprofessional in America's Hometown is long and storied. A part of that gridiron past will be recognized this Saturday night (Aug. 25 at 7 p.m. at Plymouth South High School) when five members from the 1947 Plymouth Rockets football team will be honored before a game with the Eastern Maine Warriors.

"We may still be fairly new to the area as a franchise, but there is a long history of semipro football teams based in the town of Plymouth. I thought this might be a nice way to say thanks and honor some of the people that have paved the way and helped us get this team off the ground."

South Shore Outlaws general manager Ron Rezendes

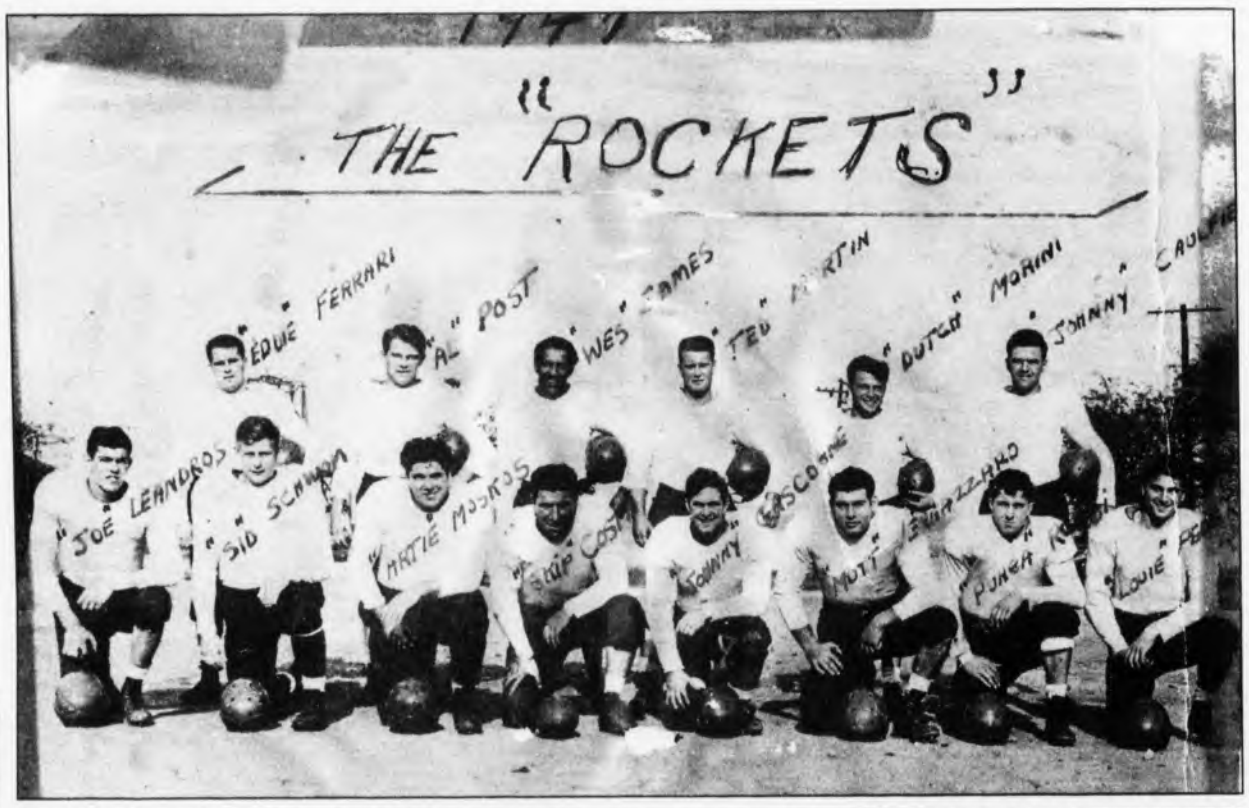
"We may still be fairly new to the area as a franchise, but there is a long history of semipro football teams based in the town of Plymouth," Outlaws general manager Ron Rezendes said. "I thought this might be a nice way to say thanks and honor some of the people that have paved the way and helped us get this team off the ground."

Most of the members of the Rockets were football players from around the Plymouth area who were just returning home from a tour of duty in World War II and were interested in playing a little competitive football with some friends.

"We were all local guys from Plymouth, Kingston and Carver and we got to know one another pretty well," Kingston native Mario Vernazarro said during a February interview. "We had some fun times together."

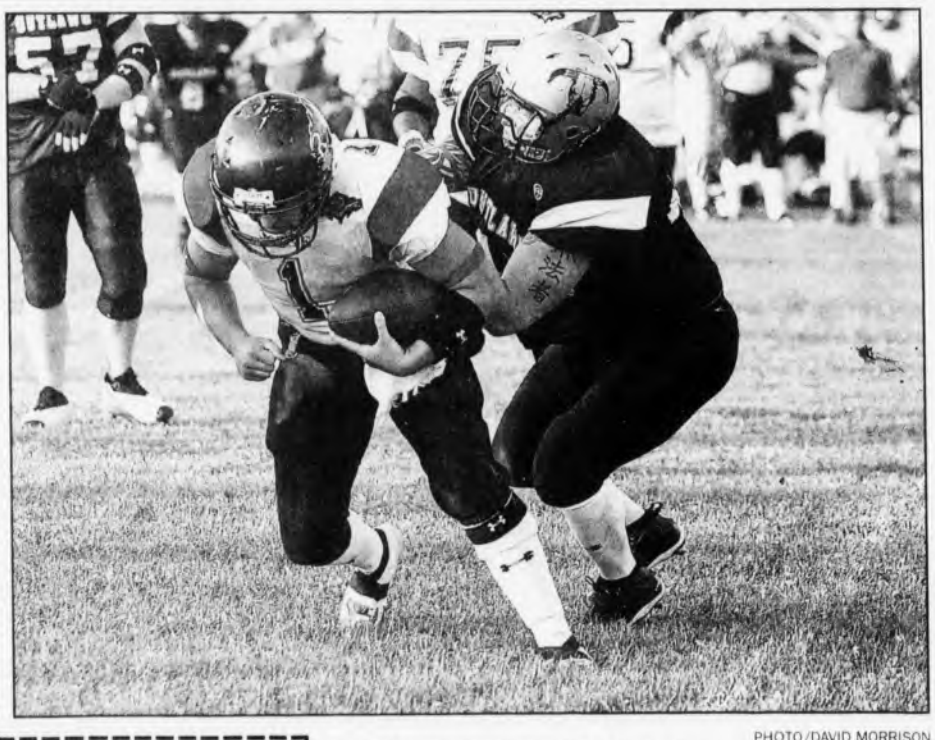
Vernazarro will be one of the former players on hand for the game along with Richard Morini, Joe Leandros, Eddie Ferrari and David Almeida.

"I grew up in the same neighborhood where Richard (Morini) lived, so I've known him in particular for some time now," Rezendes said. "I think they are all looking forward to seeing each other once again and enjoying what I hope is going to be a good football game."



The Outlaws are coming of their best effort of the season; a 22-0 thrashing of the North East Knights, which left South Shore with a 2-3 record heading into the midpoint of the season.

"It was our best effort of the season offensively," Rezendes said about the win over the Knights. "We fumbled a couple times deep in their territory, but it was encouraging to see the way the offense was able to move the football. It looked like things were finally starting to click for us when we had the football."



Running back Luis Gonzalzes (Wareham) led the offensive attack with a pair of touchdown runs for the Outlaws. A Matt Letourneau (Brockton) to Adam Tallman (Malden) touchdown pass put six more points on the scoreboard and the defense chipped in with the team's second safety in as many weeks to close out the scoring.

South Shore's defense has carried the team through the early part of the season. That tradition continued Saturday night as it only allowed an amazing 48 yards on the ground on the way to the win.

Hank Anderson (Duxbury) turned in another great game. He recorded nine tackles – seven of them accounting for a loss of yards. Brian Rezendes (Plymouth), Matt Costello (Wareham) and Joune Frasier (Kingston) all came up with four tackles. Rezendes as well as Peter Kane (Plymouth) added an interception to the winning cause.

The 1947 Plymouth Rockets semiprofessional football team poses for a photo. Five members from this squad will be recognized this Saturday night before the South Shore Outlaws game at Plymouth South High School. The Outlaws host the Eastern Maine Warriors at 7 p.m.

Deutsche Bank Championship

Aug. 28 to Sept. 3, the top names in professional golf including defending champion Tiger Woods, Phil Mickelson, Vijay Singh, Ernie Els and Sergio Garcia are all scheduled to appear at the 2007 Deutsche Bank Championship, one of four PGA TOUR Playoff events, at TPC Boston, 400 Arnold Palmer Blvd., Norton. The tournament features four rounds of championship golf preceded by practice rounds and pro-am tournaments. This year's Championship is part of the inaugural PGA TOUR Playoffs for the FedExCup, a four-tournament post-season playoff in which the top PGA Tour golfers will compete for the single-largest payout in sports, a $10 million first prize. Aug. 28, Deutsche Bank Boston Red Sox Legends and Friends Pro-Am, 7:30-5 p.m.

Aug. 29, Professional practice rounds, 8 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Aug. 29, Deutsche Bank Championship Kids Exhibition, 2-3 p.m.

Aug. 30, Championship Pro-Am Competition, 6:30 a.m. to 7 p.m.

Aug. 31-Sept. 1, Championship rounds 1 and 2, 6:30 a.m. to 7 p.

Sept. 2-3, Championship rounds 3 and 4, 7:30 a.m. to 7 p.m.

The Tiger Woods Foundation is the primary beneficiary of the Deutsche Bank Championship. In 2006, the Championship successfully reached its fundraising goal and raised a record $2.6 million for the Tiger Woods Foundation and New England charities. Since its inaugural 2003 event, the Deutsche Bank Championship has raised a total of $7 million for charity.

Pro-Am and practice round tickets are $25; championship round tickets are $45. Multi-day packages are also available. Tickets may be purchased at www.dbchampionship.com or by calling 1-877-TIX-4DBC.

Clancy-Darling race

Annual SIDS race will occur Sept. 16 in Hingham

Sunday, Sept. 16, the 26th annual SIDS Road Race will be taking place in Hingham to raise funds for the Massachusetts Center for SIDS. All funds raised will go toward research, family support and education.

With the generous support of sponsors, runners, and friends the Road Race Committee has been able to donate more than $272,000 over the last 25 years.

The course starts and finishes at Hingham High School and traverses four miles of beautiful Wompatuck State Park. The Race consists of three events: The 10K Road Race, which is sanctioned by USA Track & Field, includes age categories and is run by competitive and casual runners.

With water stations, three miles of shaded path and one challenging hill, it is a well-balanced course, enjoyed by all. The 10K Walk-a-thon, which follows the same course as the run, attracts both dedicated walkers as well as those participants who wish to gather pledges and support the event. The two-mile Fun Run is an event for all ages, where everyone is a winner. The course is flat and easy and welcomes runners and walkers from youngest to oldest. It is a true family event.

Pre-registration is $15 for all races. Post-registration is $20. Registration opens at 8 a.m. on Sept. 16 with the race times starting at 9:30 a.m. (10K Walk-a-thon & two-mile Fun Run) and 10:30 a.m. (10K Road Race).

For information, call 617-842-9517 or e-mail SIDSroadrace@msn.com. Visit the Web site www.sidsroadrace.org for an application.

Sixth annual Foundation Fifty-Five Charity Bicycle Ride

The Dick Melloni Youth Foundation (DMYF) kicks off the fall season with its annual Foundation Fifty-Five Charity Bicycle Ride to be held Sunday, Sept. 16. The ride begins at the quaint Onset Harbor Pier in Onset and proceeds through 55-miles of Upper Cape Cod's most beautiful cycling beginning with the Cape Cod Canal. After enjoying the view of Cape Cod Bay from Scussett Beach, riders will proceed toward breathtaking vistas of the Plymouth Harbor and waterfront. Then, on to the Myles Standish State Park for a spectacular roll through the unspoiled State Forest, and back to Onset for post-ride check-in and festivities that include therapeutic massage, prizes, and a grand all-you-can eat pizza party. Ample parking, clearly marked routes, maps, sag wagons, mobile tech support and first aid are provided. Rest stops have food, water and rest rooms.

Registration is $40 plus $250 in minimum fundraising contributions. All participants registered prior to Aug. 1 that meet the minimum fundraising requirements receive a professional quality cycling jersey with cool sublimated graphics unique to this year's event and a tote bag filled with useful and fun bicycling items. Late registrations are accepted, however, at that time jerseys are available on a first-come, first-served basis.

A full 100 percent of the proceeds from this fundraising event will directly support established DMYF programs for youths, including the "Lids-4-Kids" bicycling helmet safety program, the DMYF Child Literacy Program, and our "CARBS" (Children Always Ride Buckled Safely) Program to promote child car seat safety to name a few. This is a sanctioned 501-3C charity, and as such all donations are fully tax-deductible. For a registration form or information regarding sponsorship or volunteer opportunities, call Rich or Kim Melloni at 508-295-5035 or e-mail melloni@comcast.net, or visit www.dmyf.org. Riders can register online at www.BikeReg.com or www.Active.com.

OBITUARIES

Lawrence David Ainslie Jr.

Retired from Cohasset Police Department

Lawrence David Ainslie Jr. of Cohasset and North Fort Myers, Fla., 52, died suddenly in Georgia Aug. 11, 2007.

The son of Lawrence D. Sr. and Florence Ainslie of Cohasset, Mr. Ainslie was a sergeant on the Cohasset Police Department prior to his retirement.

Mr. Ainslie was a police officer on the Cohasset Police Department, starting as an auxiliary officer and becoming full time in the mid 1980's until his retirement when he moved to North Fort Myers, Fla. He had always wanted to be a police officer since his childhood, which was evident by his letter in grade school to the then Cohasset chief, Randolph Feola, asking the requirements to become an officer. Prior to joining the Cohasset Police force he worked as a Pinkerton Agent in Boston, where he received a Certificate of Commendation for outstanding service from the Boston Police. He attended Cohasset Public Schools until high school and graduated from South Shore Academy.

While with the Cohasset Police Department he worked on many special projects including the K-9 and Cobweb patrol units. He was a devoted father to both Elizabeth and Adam and worked tirelessly in his support and assistance of his son Adam's band. Mr. Ainslie was known for his quirky sense of humor. He was also an avid dog lover, owner and trainer of guard dogs.

In addition to his parents, he leaves his children, Elizabeth Ainslie of Providence, R.I., and Adam Ainslie of North Fort Myers, Fla.; his sister, Karen Ainslie Crawford of Halifax; the mother of his children, Sarah Blossom of Providence, R.I.; a niece and nephew; and many friends.

A graveside service was held at Woodside Cemetery in Cohasset. Arrangements were handled by McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Home, Cohasset.

Donald F. Beale

Vice president Eastern Insurance

Donald F. Beale, 64, of Cohasset, died Aug. 17, 2007, at Brigham and Women's Hospital.

Mr. Beale was born in Boston and raised in Dorchester. He attended English High School and graduated in 1960. He worked for Kemper Insurance Agency in Boston as district manager covering the South Shore and Cape Cod. Mr. Beale next worked for Mahoney & Wright Insurance for more than 30 years, becoming senior vice president. He then worked for the last 10 years for Eastern Insurance.

An avid golfer, he enjoyed playing golf as a member of Hatherly Country Club. In particular, Mr. Beale enjoyed playing in the Tobin Golf Tournament at Hatherly Country Club, and, had he played this as he intended, it would have been his 31st year in the tournament.

Mr. Beale was a member of the Elk's in Marshfield, as well as a member of the River Club in Bradenton, Fla.

He leaves his wife, Jackie (Coffin) Beale; his daughter, Kelly Beale Swanson of Scituate; his brother, James R. Beale of Scituate; and his grandchildren, Ashley, Kileigh and Bubba.

A funeral Mass was celebrated at St. Anthony Church, Cohasset. Interment in Woodside Cemetery, Cohasset. Arrangements were handled by McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Home, Cohasset.

Memorial donations may be made to Dana-Farber Cancer Institute, 44 Binney St., Boston, MA 02115.

Pauline Keating

Worked for New England Telephone Co.

Pauline Keating, 89, a lifelong resident of Cohasset, died Aug. 17, 2007, at Golden Living Center in Cohasset. The daughter of the late Thomas J. and Helen (Daly) Keating, Ms. Keating was a graduate of Cohasset High School, Class of 1936.

She worked for more than 43 years for New England Telephone Co., and was a member of the Telephone Pioneers.

She leaves her sister, Mary Keating of Cohasset; and 40 nieces, nephews, grandnieces, grandnephews, great-grandnieces and great-grandnephews.

She was the sister of the late T. Gerard Keating and Barbara Keating Rinkavage.

A funeral Mass was celebrated at St. Anthony Church. Interment in St. Paul's Cemetery, Hingham. Arrangements were handled by McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Home, Cohasset.

Memorial donations may be made to St. Anthony Parish Building Fund, 129 South Main St., Cohasset, MA 02025.

The Mariner welcomes photos of your loved ones to accompany obituaries by e-mail to mford@cnc.com or by mail to 73 South Street, Hingham, MA 02043

'Back in Black' tributes AC/DC

Band performs in Plymouth Aug. 24

By R. Scott Reedy
CORRESPONDENT

Lead vocalist Darren Caperna and lead guitarist Mike Mroz perform with the AC/DC tribute band Back in Black.

It's been more than seven years since AC/DC gave its last concert. While some fans of the hard rock band — formed in Sydney, Australia, in 1973 by brothers Angus and Malcolm Young — wait patiently for new product from the group famed for hits like "You Shook Me All Night Long" and "Highway to Hell," others have decided to look to the cover band "Back in Black" for their heavy metal fix.

"The fans really miss seeing AC/DC in concert. Their absence from touring has left a big hole that is very hard to fill. In the tribute band business, we're in demand when the group itself isn't performing anymore," explained Mike Mroz last week by telephone from his home in Dallas. A founding member and lead guitarist of "Back in Black," Mike Mroz and vocalist Darren Caperna, bass player Taylor Smith, guitarist Mike Wagner, and Jay Benzi on drums have been reproducing the high energy of AC/DC in concert since 2001. "AC/DC has fans everywhere, not just in the U.S. and Canada, but worldwide. They have a true force of loyal people behind them. The band hasn't toured since 2000, but they are still together. They keep talking about recording and touring again, but it just doesn't happen. Their fans are still very much with them."

Mroz — who will be with "Back in Black" at Plymouth Memorial Hall on Friday — counts himself among AC/DC's loyal followers.

"I've always been a big fan. 'The 'Power Age,' from 1978, was one of the first albums I ever owned. I've seen them in concert many times and have always thought that they crafted really great songs. Now I listen to them differently, because I am listening for guitar tone. They played with aggression in concert, but the tone was never distorted. I play Angus Young in our group so he is the one I study the most. Angus is a truly great guitarist with roots in the blues. He is just amazing to listen to and to watch. I'm no Angus Young, but I try and deliver the same energy that he had in concert. Each of us in 'Back in Black' has tried to learn all we can from these guys."

> "The fans really miss seeing AC/DC in concert. Their absence from touring has left a big hole that is very hard to fill.
> Founding member and lead guitarist Mike Mroz

Mroz isn't just continuing to learn about his favorite music, he is also teaching it to the next generation with his Texas-based "For Those About to Rock School."

"We teach children 10 and up the ins and outs of rock 'n roll from scales to theory. And every three months or so, we put on a big rock concert that all the students get to perform in."

In addition to teaching and performing with the cover band, Mroz is also part of "Strip Wired," an original rock band which opens for "Back in Black" on the road. The married father of two, however, has no plans to put away the AC/DC song sheets anytime soon. That's a good thing, too, if the reaction of one AC/DC insider is any indication.

"The lead singer for AC/DC, Brian Johnson, was scheduled to come to see us perform in Sarasota, Fla. near where he lives, a few years back," Mroz recalls. "Brian was flying back from the UK, however, and his plane was delayed causing him to miss our show. His wife, Brenda, did come to see us, though, and backstage afterward she gave us a compliment we will never forget. Brenda Johnson said: 'I've seen my husband's band hundreds of times and you guys are every bit as good as they are.'"

"Back in Black: The Ultimate AC/CD Tribute" will be at Plymouth Memorial Hall, 83 Court St., Plymouth at 8 p.m. on Aug. 24. For tickets and information, call 508-747-1340 or go to any local FYE or Strawberries location. For further information, go online at plymouthhall.com.

Movie review

The Countess Celimene (Ludivine Sagnier) has moves put upon her by Moliere (Romain Duris).

Loving in the past

"Moliere" (B+)

By James Verniere
FILM CRITIC

In opening scenes in Laurent Tirard's "Moliere," actors on a 17th-century stage play the stock farcical characters Cuckold and Trollope. Later, Jean-Baptiste Poquelin, also known as Moliere (Romain Duris of "The Beat My Heart Skipped"), and his troupe return to Paris from the provinces, where they have become famous, to a theater reserved especially for them.

But the young Moliere, reminiscent of a certain immortal Preston Sturges character, doesn't want to write farces anymore. He's through with making the groundlings laugh. He wants to be taken seriously as an artist, and for that tragedy is king.

Soon, disguised as a tutor, Moliere becomes enmeshed in a domestic farce in the French countryside, involving Monsieur Jourdain (a very funny Fabrice Luchini), a wealthy merchant besotted with a Countess (Ludivine Sagnier), and Jourdain's beautiful, unfulfilled wife (a stunning Laura Morante) and daughter.

Taking the name, ahem, Tartuffe, Moliere insinuates himself into the rich man's family and confidence, observes how Jourdain is exploited by a greedy aristocrat (a terrific Edouard Baer), tutors Jourdain in writing and acting to help him woo the Countess, all the while courting Jourdain's neglected wife behind his patron's back. If you know Moliere and recognize the character names, you probably know where this is headed. Beautifully shot and scored by Gilles Henry and Frederic Talgorn, respectively, "Moliere" is reminiscent of "Shakespeare in Love" and, occasionally, "Black Adder" and Monty Python and has shots of spectacular beauty.

In one, the Countess, a dilettante with a popular salon, addresses a roomful of rich, female listeners. The tableaux of pastel-colored haute couture resembles nothing more than a living bouquet of flowers. It's good to be the Countess.

On some level, the film is just an arthouse bodice-ripper conspicuously lacking in ripped bodices. It needs more "Tom Jones"-style sexual shenanigans. But it is as well-made and cast. Duris appears to have stuffed his cheeks with cotton a la Brando and his antics are often delightfully Chaplinesque, and Morante ("The Son's Room") is remarkably lovely. In lieu of an actual farce by Moliere, this bit of drolerie will do.

Rated PG-13. "Moliere" contains sexual references and situations.

Quick Flix

Officer Michaels (Seth Rogen) and Officer Slater (Bill Hader) check out the ID of McLovin (Christopher Mintz-Plasse) in "Superbad."

New Releases

"THE INVASION" (C-)

Let's remake "28 Days Later" with Nicole and the new James Bond! That's the conversation I imagine taking place when "The Invasion" got the green light. The fourth movie version of Jack Finney's 1955 story "The Body Snatchers," it's more like "28 Pods Later." As for Kidman, she's the embodiment of a movie star, namely, someone who can go sleepless for days while being chased by zombies and still look totally hot. (Rated PG-13)

"ROCKET SCIENCE" (B+)

Making a bid to be this summer's "Little Miss Sunshine," the film tells the fictional coming-of-age story of Hal, ahem, Hefner, a tongue-tied Plainsboro, N.J., high school student who is in speech therapy, although he is extremely intelligent and his head, as he puts it, is "full of retorts." (Rated R)

"SUPERBAD" (A-)

Far superior to "America Pie," the film brings together much of the talent pool from "The 40-year-old Virgin" and "Knocked Up" for a definitive coming-of-age comedy. The plot is simplicity itself. Seth and Evan are assigned the courtly task of purchasing booze for a party. "Superbad" is so deliriously funny I found myself laughing uncontrollably at times. But what's best about it is in spite of all the profanity and lewdness, it's totally sweet at its core. (Rated R)

Ongoing

"12:08 EAST OF BUCHAREST" (A-)

It's the anniversary of the 1989 "revolution" ousting Communist dictator Nikolae Ceausescu in Romania. But was there a genuine revolution or did some Romanians merely crawl out from under their rocks only after they had heard Ceausescu had fled in the night in his chopper? This is the question no-budget, talk-show host Virgil Jderescu (Teodor Corban) wants answered, and the answers he gets offer an amusingly Kafkaesque glimpse into Eastern European politics. (Not Rated)

"ARCTIC TALE" (B-)

The live-action "Arctic Tale" gives us a newborn polar bear and a walrus cub instead of penguins, Queen Latifah instead of Morgan Freeman and Harvard graduate Kristin Gore among the writers. This perhaps explains why "Arctic Tale" comes across as "An Inconvenient Truth for Polar Bears and Walruses." Melting ice and earlier and hotter summers have wreaked havoc with the "ancient rhythm of the seasons." But do we really need a symphony of walrus farts? Just in case you don't get the message, stick around for the final credits to hear overly made-up and coiffed children tell you, "Stop global warming." Oh, shut up. (Rated G)

"BECOMING JANE" (B+)

Novelist Jane Austen is the Austen-esque heroine of this appealing biographical film. Anne Hathaway ("The Devil Wears Prada") follows in the footsteps of such Americans as Gwyneth Paltrow and Renee Zellweger, to play the British protagonist. Directed by Julian Jarrold ("Kinky Boots") in a "Masterpiece Theater"-like style, the film takes a cue from "Pride and Prejudice" and patches together a life story with James McAvoy of "The Last King of Scotland" as Austen's Darcy-like suitor. Hathaway may not be the most graceful swan in the lake (she actually galumphs). But her Jane is quite becoming and her co-stars shine. (Rated PG-13)

"THE BOURNE ULTIMATUM" (A)

"Casino Royale" upped the ante and "The Bourne Ultimatum" ups it right back. Jason Bourne (Matt Damon), the James Bond of the post-9/11 era, is back, and he's still being hunted. By whom and for what reason hardly needs to be explained in these ultra-violent, paranoid times. They're after us; that's the only thing we know for sure. Distinguishing hunter from hunted is the brain-teasing conceit of the "Bourne Identity" films. Damon and the rest of the cast are all first-rate. "The Bourne Ultimatum" is finally a damning vision of a rogue U.S. government that believes the 9/11 attacks have given it license to surveil, "rendition," torture and kill anyone it likes. Have a ball watching Jason Bourne revoke it. (Rated PG-13)

"DR. BRONNER'S MAGIC SOAPBOX" (B)

A breezy documentary on a true American eccentric. Emil Bronner (1908-1997) was a German-Jewish emigre and self-anointed "doctor" who used his all-purpose liquid soap to spread his philosophy — to live the "Moral ABCs" of his "All-One-God-Faith." Today, Dr. Bronner's organic Castile soap is celebrated as an icon of '60s counterculture. (Not Rated) — Stephen Schaefer

New principal for Deer Hill

deChiara is 'ready to go'

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

The schools are revving up for another year of educating the youth of Cohasset. The hallway floors are sparkling, the classrooms are decorated and curriculums set. All that is left is to do is welcome back the students on Tuesday, Sept. 4. In turn, the students (at least at Deer Hill) will be welcoming a new addition to the Cohasset school administration: Dr. Jennifer deChiara, principal.

DeChiara has spent the summer getting to know the community, the teachers, the curriculum and the school. Now, all she needs to do is get to know the students.

"My first priority is to get to know the people and the programs," says deChiara.

With about 350 students, Deer Hill is half the student body size of her most recent elementary principalship in Canton and exactly what she was looking for in a new job.

"I felt I could be a more effective instructional leader if I focused on a smaller number of students and families," she said. Her desire for a smaller school partly stemmed from her recently completed doctorate studies at Lesley University where she wrote her thesis on ethics in the area of elementary school principalship. Her research took her to interviews with principals from all over the state and got her to think in advance of ethical dilemmas that could very well happen to her.

Opening day is Tuesday

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Come Tuesday morning kids will be riding school buses instead of waves, sporting new sneakers instead of flip-flops and carrying backpacks instead of beach towels. It's time for Cohasset to go back to school. Administrators, teachers and staff didn't take much of the summer off and have been working diligently to improve the schools for the 2007-2008 academic year.

"There is no summer off," says Superintendent of Schools Denise Walsh but she never fails to feel anxious, just like the kids, in the days leading up to the first day of school, "I breathe a sign of relief the day after Labor Day. It becomes out of my control and into the capable hands of the school administrators and teachers."

Although the anticipation and anxiety subsides for Walsh with the first day of school, there is constant work to be done to renew and reform the curriculum, the district goals, teaching methods and infrastructure.

"It's about building and determining how we can make our schools better,"

Second annual triathlon is likely

Proposed date: July 13, 2008

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

There could be a second annual Cohasset Triathlon next July.

Police Chief James Hussey, Harbormaster Lorren Gibbons and Triathlon Race Director Bill Burnett appeared in front of the Board of Selectmen on Monday night to give a post-event report. An "after action" meeting was held last month to de-brief the various public safety officials and brainstorm improvements for a second annual Cohasset Triathlon.

"We felt the event went really well for a first time event," said Hussey, "every public safety department provided assets to the event."

Hussey ran down the list of safety personnel provided to this year's event. The police and fire chiefs, as well as the harbormaster all worked the event. Cohasset Police officers, with the help from surrounding communities, supplied 15 officers on detail (including motorcycles and bicycles) to handle various traffic posts along the route and to man the command post. Seven paramedics manned two ambulances, an engine and the command post. A medical team from South Shore Hospital included a doctor, two paramedics and an ambulance. On the water, the Harbormaster and three Assistant Harbormasters operated three boats off Sandy Beach.

The Cohasset Triathlon success at putting on a well-run event, bringing hundreds of athletes and spectators to Cohasset on July 8 was tempered by the death of a triathlete who was pulled from the water during the first leg of the triathlon.

"We are deeply saddened by the loss of a participant," said Race Director and Cohasset Triathlon founder Bill Burnett, but believed the race was a great event in other aspects. More than $50,000 was donated to the race's charity, Juvenile Diabetes Research Foundation. He estimated 1,000 non-residents came into the community during race day and then many spent the day in Cohasset at restaurants and in the Village. He hopes to get more local business involved in the second annual Triathlon.

Selectman Ted Carr agreed, after the event he saw racers and their families at the Red Lion Inn, Atlantica and walking in the Village, "it was a great community event and I'm delighted to hear you want to do it again."

Each public safety department saw some minor logistical and safety improvements for a second annual triathlon. The police suggested posting

Large home under scrutiny

Stormwater and size are concerns

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Stormwater runoff and the sheer size of a proposed home were paramount concerns brought forth at the first part of a large home site plan review. The Planning Board took a first look at design plans for 18 Little Harbor Road last Wednesday (Aug. 22) evening before a room full of concerned neighbors.

The previous home on the lot, a home with a distinctly "Japanese flair" as described Planning Board Chairman Al Moore, has been demolished. The Large Site Plan Review applicant Oceanside Builders and owners Douglas and Kara Karo have designed an approximately 4,500 square foot home.

The sloped property brought about concerns that the house looks significantly larger from the rear than it does from the front.

"The origins of large home site plan review are to prevent the massing of a house. This property is anything but flat and from the rear is looks like a massive structure," said Moore.

The Large House Site Plan Review was passed at Town Meeting in April 2004 in an effort to preserve the town's character and prevent the "mansionization" of Cohasset. The bylaw came after an uproar about a home proposal at 3 Jerusalem Lane about four years ago. The site plan review insures abutters are notified if a "large house" is going to be built in their neighborhood and that the Planning Board holds a public hearing to air concerns on both sides. Proposed homes exceeding the greater of 3,500 square feet or 10 percent of lot area up to 6,000 square feet must go before the Planning Board.

"Our job is to end up with the best possible project for the applicant and the neighbors through this site plan review."
— Bill Good, Planning Board

Member Stuart Ivimey had more problems with the designs, "the roof is grotesquely large and I feel bad for the neighbors to the rear of the building," he said, pointing to the high roof design at several points during the meeting. He requested the plans be revised to show the elevation chart on the designs. The structures' heights were given on a separate sheet which Ivimey and others Planning Board members found hard to follow.

"There are similar lots and other homes in town like this. In the front of the home it looks like a 2.5 story house but from the rear it looks like a 3.5 story house," said Vice Chairman Bill Good after Ivimey argued the proposed plan was for a four-story home.

Good, a local real estate agent, advised the applicant to consider downsizing the home, "there is a market for sensible houses that fit the neighborhood of Little Harbor Road," said Good and was worried the new home could be considered aggressive and in the extreme, offensive.

"There is a certain amount of proportion and balance in a neighborhood. Our job is to end up with the best possible project for the applicant and the neighbors through this site plan review," said Good.

Member Mike Westcott agreed there could be some detriment when houses are built without paying attention to the scale of the neighborhood. Counsel for the developer, Matthew Watsky and the developer, Douglas Karo said the plans were within all town zoning bylaw regulations.

The developers were unaware of a stormwater drainage problem plaguing the lot and the one behind it until a recent trip to the Conservation Commission. However, Watsky said measures had already been taken to decrease runoff from the site. Six dry wells to collect roof runoff during rain events will be installed west of the proposed house. The prior house had little runoff remediation, said Watsky.

Rear abutter Alfred Slanetz of 14 Nichols Road is concerned about impact to his property that has long suffered from water running down the adjacent property.

"A pretty significant amount of water comes down the hill," said Slanetz, who was accompanied by his own civil engineer consultant, John Chessia. Slanetz described an antiquated catch basin system — likely dating back to the 1950s — to control the water flow and take it to the storm drain in the front of his property.

The property is slated for tie in to the town sewer plant with the Little Harbor sewer expansion project.

The to-be-built home is currently listed on the Gallery 360 Real Estate website for $2.5 million.

A new design plan with the elevations clearly shown will be brought to the continued public hearing on Wed., Sept. 5.

Dedication of Beechwood Ballpark

The Beechwood Ballpark has a whole new look. To commemorate the completion of ballpark renovations the Beechwood Ballpark Committee will hold a dedication ceremony and celebration on Saturday, Sept. 29 at 10 a.m. at the field. The celebration will be packed with activities for the whole family including a homerun contest, an old-timers baseball game, kids games, face painting, a basketball shooting contest, antique cars, food and more. POLICE BEAT

Intoxicated youth taken to hospital

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Police Chief James Hussey said a teenager, who was visiting Cohasset, was taken to the hospital by ambulance after he appeared to be "overly intoxicated."

Police responded to a call at about 10:23 p.m. Sunday (Aug. 26) from a concerned citizen about a large group of youths "acting up" on Highland Avenue. The caller reported one of the teens was passed out and possibly intoxicated. Hussey said police did come across the group. Police did not find any alcohol present and the youths were not forthcoming about where they had been.

One of the teens told police the boy who was intoxicated had drunk vodka. Police were not able to determine where he obtained the vodka or how much he had drunk.

The mother of the boy, who had been spending the weekend in Cohasset, arrived and went to the hospital with her son, police said.

Underwear

Police sent two men who had stopped to do some fishing near Cunningham Bridge on their way last week. The men, whom police described as in their early 30s and whom they believe are European because of their accents, had coolers containing bait. One of the men had taken his pants off and was only wearing his briefs.

Police responded to the area after receiving a call last Saturday (Aug. 25) at about 9:30 a.m. from a concerned citizen who saw the men parking a car, get out with the coolers and walking down on the rocks just in their underwear. The officer told the man wearing briefs that he really needed to put his trousers back on. The man was somewhat taken aback and did not realize that was inappropriate.

Bikes

A police officer that had been working the previous night recovered a stolen bicycle while he was working a detail at the Music Circus on Aug. 23. Chief Hussey explained that by chance the officer was on a detail when he saw the bike on the ground that had been reported stolen from Hull Street while he was on duty the night before. The officer contacted the victim to come and pick up the bicycle.

A Summer Street resident told police last week that a bicycle had been left at the end of his driveway. Police said the bike was in bad shape and had been left outside for sometime; someone had apparently dragged it to the end of the driveway. The DPW was contacted to pick it up.

A mountain bike that was reported as stolen last Friday was found by an officer the following day and the owner retrieved it, police said.

On a related issue, Chief Hussey said police have about 15 bikes at the station. If someone is missing a bike, they should come to the station and see if one of the bikes belongs to them, he said.

Cement mishap

Police said a cement truck lost a lot of wet cement on Route 3A near Pond Street at about 1:40 p.m., last Thursday (Aug. 23). The driver apparently did not realize what had occurred and kept on driving. Witnesses were able to provide identifying markings on the truck and police in turn contacted the truck company, which contacted the truck driver who returned to the location.

Police said there was wet cement on the road and some may have splattered onto the Brown's Auto property, making possible contact with some of the vehicles there. The truck company immediately sent out a crew to clean up the cement and the owner spoke with Brown's Auto about taking care of any cleanup at that business, police said.

ID theft

Two sisters believe their mother, who lives on Elm Street, has been the victim of identity theft, police said. The sisters, who have power of attorney, told police last week that their mother had received correspondence from a bank about a credit card account in her name. Their mother is certain that she does not have a credit card account from that bank. Chief Hussey said it appears that someone opened a credit card in their mother's name and made purchases through that account earlier this year.

Free screenings

The Cohasset Board of Health will offer free health screenings to Cohasset residents at the Annual Health Fair on Tuesday, Sept. 11 from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. at the Second Congregational Church next to Town Hall.

Screenings will include blood pressure, vision and hearing, cholesterol and blood sugar, oral cancer, osteoporosis (bone mineral density) chiropractic and mental health screenings. There will be demonstrations of family emergency and disaster planning, holistic health methods including reiki, nutrition and massage therapy. Refreshments will be available and provided by Stop and Shop, Dunkin Donuts and Atlantic Bagel.

Police took a report on the matter and detectives instructed the sisters on how to file a complaint with the Federal Trade Commission and how to notify the credit bureaus. This is routine police procedure in this type of case, Hussey said.

Calls for help

Police cut the locks at the gate to Wompatuck State Park off Doane Street to look for someone who had been reported as calling for help. A biker called 911 at about 5:43 p.m. on Thurs. (Aug. 23) to say he had heard someone calling for help inside the park. Chief Hussey said police searched the entire area and could not find anyone. Police also notified the environmental police and park officials about the report. "We could not find any indications about anyone being in trouble," Hussey said.

Hanging out

Young teens hanging out near Tedeschi's in the Village after 10 p.m. are posing a problem for the convenience store because congregating youths can make it difficult for patrons, police said.

Officers sent youths on their way a couple of times last week.

In an unrelated incident, an older teen — who allegedly stole a candy bar from the store — could be facing shoplifting charges. He is being issued a no-trespass order, which means he could be arrested if he returns to the store.

Fight

Police responded to report of a fight last week that was called in by a concerned citizen last Thursday (Aug. 23) at just before 6 p.m. in the vicinity of 747 Chief Justice Cushing Highway (3A). Further investigation revealed that the fight, which was over a girlfriend, was over and peace was restored. Both men involved convinced the officer that everything was OK, police said.

Hand injury

A worker injured his hand last Friday when he was trying to take a machine off a flatbed truck on Cedar Street. Apparently the roller, which is used to flatten asphalt, veered off the runway and fell off the back of the truck. A couple of DPW workers going by helped free the man's hand. Police said the injury required stitches but did not appear to be serious.

Behavior issue

Police are working with a local youth and his mother to determine what might be causing his behavior. The teen came into headquarters last week to ask if his keys and wallet were there. When the dispatcher asked if he had lost them, the teen made a derogatory remark and left. The same teen has been exhibiting irrational behavior at the library, police said.

Laptop taken

A Music Circus employee called police last week after noticing the laptop he had left in his car was missing. The employee, who thought he had left the rear windows to his car open slightly, reported the missing laptop both to the Music Circus and to the police. There were no obvious signs that the car had been broken into. Chief Hussey said he noticed the case was not on the backseat as he was driving home.

The victim is getting the serial number of the computer so detectives can look at different locations where the laptop could be sold.

Flare guns

In two separate incidents last week, people notified police about flare guns they had found. Police belief the flare guns, which were found in the same area near Atlantic Avenue and Beach Street, could be lost because no one has reported them as having been stolen. Flare guns can be used as a distress signal at sea, police said.

One of the flare guns had been discharged and had a spent shell casing inside it and the other was in a box with assorted ammunition.

Debris

What was initially thought to be a capsized boat turned out to be a piece of debris, Chief Hussey said. A concerned caller notified police at about 1:30 p.m., last Monday (Aug. 20) about a capsized boat. Further investigation revealed it to be a piece of a dock that later washed up in the vicinity of 400 Atlantic Ave. Police are not sure where it came from. Hussey said the Coast Guard was notified but shortly thereafter, the debris was determined not to be a boat and the Coast Guard did not have to be involved.

Interim director takes helm at charter school

By Tessa Fitzgerald
TFITZGER@CNC.COM

A new leader has taken the helm at South Shore Charter Public School in Norwell.

Braintree resident Prudence Goodale was appointed interim executive director for the coming school year, as the charter school's board of trustees continues its search for a candidate to permanently fill the position.

Goodale's first day on the job was Monday, Aug. 13. Classes started Aug. 29.

Bob Gass, chairman of the school's board of trustees, said the school advertised for an interim director for this school year, as four-five months are needed to do a thorough search for a permanent director and the board did not have the time based on when former executive director Mike Munhall submitted his resignation.

A search committee narrowed down the hunt from 40 candidates to eight, and at the end of the process Goodale was the top choice. "She brings a lot of valuable experience," Gass said. "She brings a lot of energy to the table and people were very much impressed not only with her background and educational experience, but with her ability to get along with all people."

"She brings a lot of energy to the table and people were very much impressed not only with her background and educational experience, but with her ability to get along with all people."

— Bob Gass, chairman of the school's board of trustees

Goodale was selected for the job on July 26.

"The one thing that has been very clear to us is that she has a stellar reputation," said Gass, "both as a person and as an educator."

Goodale began her career as a history and social studies teacher at Randolph High School, a job she held for 20 years. From there, among the titles she's held have been principal of Scituate High School, assistant superintendent of curriculum and instruction in the Stoughton Public Schools and interim assistant superintendent in Falmouth. She's also taught at Bridgewater State College in the same graduate program she was once a student in.

Though she took the early retirement option from Stoughton Public Schools in 2003, Goodale said she still has a lot of energy, and she's continued to work. She figures it's in her genes as her 85-year-old mother, also a retired teacher, continues to tutor students.

Goodale said her husband and youngest son are also teachers. "It's a passion in our family," she said. She joked that since she's gotten into the administrative side of the learning business, her husband, an English teacher at Thayer Academy, helps keep her grounded.

She said she left the classroom because she wanted to be more collaborative.

As a teacher in the 1980s, Goodale said she did not like the effects Proposition 2-1/2 had on the education system in terms of budget cuts.

"I wanted to make a difference," she said. She hasn't forgotten her roots in classroom teaching.

"Although I've worked in administration for the last 17 years, teaching and helping students is my passion," Goodale said.

So far, Goodale said everything has been going well, and she described the atmosphere at the school as family-like. Though she has a lot of experience, this is the first time the Thayer Academy graduate will work at a charter school and she said she's very excited about the opportunity. She added that it's important for students to have options when it comes to choosing a school that's a good fit for them.

Her favorite part about teaching is when the students really become engaged in a particular topic. "Engaging the students and having them have the connection between what we're studying and real life." While it's important to master content, Goodale said it's also important to master the process.

At a charter school, Goodale said, students attend classes 184 days during the year, versus the required 180 that public school students attend. Also, the school has a strong commitment to professional development for its teachers, who work 197 days of the year.

Goodale said she wants people to know that she has a good sense of humor and loves tennis and kayaking. And she truly enjoys working with people.

She applied for the job in June and learned in late July that it was hers. Over the summer, the school business manger, Kristine Shipps, filled in as executive director and is helping Goodale make the transition.

Goodale said Gass, chairman of the board of trustees, has also been a great help.

Some goals for the school for the upcoming year are to continue to make progress in curriculum development, to develop more community partnerships and to keep parents involved in the education process, Gass said.

The school's former executive director, Mike Munhall, announced in late April that he was leaving his position at the end of the school year. Munhall, who had served as executive director for five years, said he was leaving because the school needed leadership in areas that are out of his expertise - fundraising and finance.

Gass said the members of the search committee hope to appoint a permanent replacement by the spring.

Solar possibilities

Committee focuses energy on Middle-High School

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Harnessing the power of the sun isn't a new idea — it's been around for decades — but there's never been a better time to invest in solar technology. There is widespread interest in alternative energy, grants are available and, with many towns, including Cohasset, running a tight budget any possible savings is being investigated.

The Alternative Energy Committee, assisted by their consultants Joanne Sanders and Judeth Van Hamm, are pursuing a solar arrangement for the Middle-High School. As the largest consumer of energy of any town building and with its large flat roof, the Middle-High School is a prime location for solar panels and cost savings.

The consultants will pursue a large onsite renewables initiative grant, or LORI, from the Massachusetts Technology Collaborative. The AEC received a grant from Mass Tech to install a MET tower, a soaring 165 feet, or 50 meters aluminum pole that will record wind speed and direction data for a period of one year. The data collected will help the town determine the feasibility of a wind turbine in Cohasset. The deadline for the next LORI grant round is in February.

"The grants are very competitive but they'd be more likely to make be given the grant if we're doing something [Mass Tech] hasn't done before," said Van Hamm.

To that end, Van Hamm is proposing a combination arrangement of photovoltaic (PV) and thermal panels. With photovoltaic panels alone the efficiency is about 10 percent, but if the two products are married together the total efficiency jumps to 50 percent, said Van Hamm.

With the grant due in February, the consultants have their work cut out for them.

In order to be considered for the LORI grant for photovoltaics, a 10-kilowatt or more solar array must be built. Sanders estimates a 12-kilowatt array might work best for the site. Estimated size of the array would depend on the end design. The LORI design and construction grants are capped at the lesser of $250,000, 75 percent of the project cost, or a calculation based on an incentive matrix. Although firm estimates for a solar array of this type are not yet available, Sanders said a similar array cost more than $100,000.

However, Van Hamm was reluctant to give a ballpark estimate because all the information was not available yet and the cost could not be assessed in context. Last year, the electricity bill for the Middle-High School was around $150,000. Van Hamm plans to evaluate how much electricity can be generated by the solar panels and what the payback to the town (in years) would be to determine if the project has merit. The payback for thermal panels is three to seven years, with the combination array the payback would be an average of the two technologies paybacks, said Van Hamm in a phone interview.

Cohasset may fall into the incentive matrix category where the grant begins at $2 per watt, then there are add-ons. If the project is for a municipality, the grant jumps to $3 per watt. Then, if a major component of the project construction comes from a Massachusetts company, another 50 cents is added. With a 12-kilowatt array, Cohasset could end up with a grant totaling $42,000, or $3.50 per watt.

With the grant due in February, the consultants have their work cut out for them. In order to apply for the grant, nearly all the pieces of the project have to be in place. The project must be put out to bid and a contract awarded, pending the receipt of the grant. An educational component is also required for the grant, which could be as small as a kiosk depicting how the solar panels operate and how much energy they are generating.

"It doesn't have to be just what's going on the roof, it can be what this committee is doing as a whole," said member Mike Bliss, suggesting wind data from the MET tower/possible wind turbine could also be on display.

The AEC passed a motion to move forward with the project as it was outlined. "it's very preliminary but it sounds feasible enough to me, we should move forward," said Bliss. The committee will draft an article to bring before the fall special Town Meeting requesting backing and funding for the project. A more accurate estimate of the cost should be available in the fall.

The library's large flat roof is also a possibility for solar panels, however, Van Hamm said the combination photovoltaic and thermal would not work for the building. The air for the cooling system is located under the building, not on the roof. But, the AEC and the consultants were not ruling the location out for other solar arrays.

Second annual triathlon likely next July additional "no parking" signs on Atlantic Avenue, adding signage along the course indicating "triathlon in progress," closing off North Main Street to vehicles using Depot Court and Ripley Road as a by-pass.

The Fire Department would like to improve radio communication between safety and race officials, adjust logistics planning on the layout of the beach parking lot and develop a procedure to stop the event in the case of weather issues or shark sightings, said Hussey.

Both police and fire officials would like to look closely at where the command post and medical tent are set up next year.

"We're looking to have a central location where medics can meet up with swimmers, runners and bikers," said Chief Hussey in a phone interview. This year, the command center was located close to the beach house near the start whereas distressed swimmers were brought to the shore on the other end of the beach, "we want something out of the way but easily accessible."

Changes in the water portion of the event, where the majority of emergencies occurred this year (four athletes were pulled from the water), were looked at closely. The Harbormaster would like to have access to flat-bottomed boats with low sides, something like a Boston Whaler, to make it easier to bring a swimmer in distress on board. The Harbormasters would operate the boat, with volunteers assisting swimmers if needed. Gibbons recommended a meeting between all key officials a couple of days before the event to review plans and logistics would get everyone on the same page.

Selectman Ralph Dormitzer proposed decreasing the amount of athletes in a given start heat, or wave would ease congestion in the water, "there are so many folks trying to get in position and into the water all at once," said Dormitzer. Burnett said he plans to add another wave to the start specifically for first-time open ocean swimmers and beginner triathletes, other heats are determined by age and sex. The waves will remain five minutes apart.

Chairman Gary Vanderweil and Dormitzer also heard complaints about residents' difficulty in getting to church and to the harbor on Sunday morning. Hussey plans on giving the detail officers, many who came from out of town, a one-page printout of the best ways to get around the triathlon during the morning hours so they can better inform drivers.

Although comments from the three Selectmen present (Selectmen Fred Koed and Paul Carlson were absent) were positive despite the minor expressed concerns, they refrained from taking a vote approving the proposed July 13, 2008 date for the Triathlon so they can do their due diligence with the Sandy Beach Association and confirm there is not a conflicting event.

Expansion of Red Lion Inn on the table

Since the 1704, the Red Lion Inn has been an integral part of Cohasset Village and according to Board of Selectmen Vice Chairman Ted Carr, the Inn is looking to expand and build more hotel rooms. Owner Gerd Ordelheide approached Carr to seek a meeting with the Selectmen to discuss the proposed expansion project and the possible uses of a one-acre town-owned parcel behind the Red Lion Inn and the Teen Center. Currently, the lot is undeveloped.

"Generally, I think it sounds fair to have him come in and talk about plans."
— Selectman Ralph Dormitzer

"Generally, I think it sounds fair to have him come in and talk about plans," said Selectman Ralph Dormitzer, who thought Ordelheide is likely looking to use the land for additional parking. However, he wondered if a parking lot would be the "highest and best" use for the parcel.

Chairman Gary Vanderweil said it would be good to have Ordelheide come in to revisit the manager situation as well. Since May, the Red Lion Inn has been without a reliable contact on the liquor license application.

Town Manager Bill Griffin will contact Ordelheide to come in at the next Selectmen's meeting on Sept. 10.

Cohasset welcomes Ryan Perrone!

AROUND TOWN

JENNIFER PIEPENBRINK

LABOR DAY

Yikes, is it really Labor Day Weekend? As we all know, the answer is yes and I want everyone to enjoy it safe and happy. I am sad that school is here already but some of the kids are ready for a new, exciting year whether they are in preschool, grade school or college. Good luck to all on the first week of classes! Remind everyone of the safety aspects as far as buses, walking, train crossings etc. and we will all have a fun-filled and learning filled year. Thank you to all the teachers, staff and custodians, along with bus drivers and others who help each day go by in a smooth and happy manner.

OH BOY!

We have some new baby news in town to share. Kevin and Jillian Perrone proudly announce the arrival of their baby brother, Ryan Thomas Perrone. Ryan was born on Aug.15, 2007 at 8:35 pm weighing in at 8 pounds 6 ounces. His parents are Jeanine and Marc Perrone of Cohasset. He is the 12th grandchild of Cleida and Jack Buckley of Cohasset and the fifth grandchild for Jackie and Frank Perrone of Ashland, Mass. There is nothing like a new baby to make all of us smile, congratulations to all of you as Ryan receives so much love!

HOLE IN ONE

WOW! This past week, Jack O'Donnell, age 5 of Cohasset, made a hole in one in the USKIDS Golf Tour Championship Tournament in Brookline at Putterham Golf Club. He shot a 1-under par 35 to place second in Boston overall for the summer season in age 6 and under. According to Jack's mom, Kari, hole-in-ones are fairly common but for a 5-year-old, it is extremely rare! Jack, you are a golf pro in the makings, fantastic job!

Kevin and Jillian Perrone show off their new baby brother, Ryan Thomas Perrone.

FIELD HOCKEY

The Cohasset Field Hockey Club will be holding registration for this season on Thursday Sept. 6th at 3:30 at the Deer Hill School Field. Any girls in grades 6-8 are encouraged to come and learn the game! The registration forms can be picked up at the Town Hall and need to be completed along with a check for $100 made payable to the Cohasset Field Hockey Club. We are scheduling games with several other teams and will have the dates and times available at registration. We will have our first practice after registration so girls should bring a mouth guard, protective eyewear, shin guards and stick. (There will be extra sticks on hand for the new girls to try out.) Practice will end at 5:30. All girls are welcome to join- no experience necessary!

Jack O'Donnell, age 5 of Cohasset, made a hole in one in the USKIDS Golf Tour Championship Tournament.

SPECIAL TEA!

The Girl Scout Annual Mother/Daughter Tea will be held on Sunday, Sept. 23rd from 1-3 p.m.. It will be an entertaining fun filled afternoon! The Tea will be at the Black Rock Country Club in Hingham not only for our registered girls but anyone who's interested in seeing what Cohasset Girl Scouts have to offer and are interested in joining. Tickets are $15.00 per person and for reservations or questions, please call Lil Curley 781-383-0695.

TUNA TOURNEY

Calling all fishermen and women! Mark your calendar for the 2007 Mass Bay Football Tuna Tourney on Saturday and Sunday (Sept. 9 & 10)! The event is being sponsored by Belsan Bait & Tackle, 38 Country Way, Scituate. For information, call 781-545-9400.

BOOSTER CLUB

This year's 2007 Field Hockey Team is looking for interested participants to join the Field Hockey Booster Club. Any parents, past team member's parents, former players or persons interested in the sport are welcome to help with fundraising activities, coordinating special events for the team and team support! (Cheer us on at the Games!!) Please join us at our first meeting: Friday Sept. 7 at 10 a.m. (8 Red Gate Lane) Laure Kimla's home. If you are interested call Laure at 781-383-8161, Babette at 781-383-2561 or Gigi at 781-383-9017.

That is it for this week. Send in all of your news, photos etc. no later than Tuesday by 5 pm.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Michael Guerra

Guerra – Good

Julie Elizabeth Good, daughter of Bill and Betsy Good of Cohasset, married Joseph Michael Guerra, son of Angela and Anthony Guerra of Burlington, on Friday evening July 6, 2007, at the Gate of Heaven Church in South Boston. Reverend Brian Flynn officiated at the ceremony.

The bride was given in marriage by her father, Bill Good. The matron of honor was Elizabeth Reynolds of Hingham, sister of the bride. Bridesmaids were Priscilla Donatelli of Providence, R.I, Krista Goodwin of South Boston, Jill Leahy of Hingham, Margo O'Connor of Waltham and Sarah Savas of South Boston.

Gregory and Christopher Guerra, of Burlington, brothers of the groom, served as best men. Bill Good, Jr. of San Diego, Calif., brother of the bride, Mike McGourty of Wakefield and Patrick Reynolds of Hingham, brother-in-law of the bride served as ushers.

The bride is a graduate of Cohasset High School and the University of New Hampshire. She is employed as the manager of recruiting for Winter, Wyman Financial Contracting in Boston.

Her husband is a graduate of Burlington High School and the University of New Hampshire. He is earning his master's degree in business administration at Babson College and is employed as operations manager at Evare LLC in Burlington.

A reception was held in the Wharf Room at the Boston Harbor Hotel.

After a wedding trip to the Hawaiian islands of Kauai and Maui, the couple resides in South Boston.

'Kittendales' calendar to benefit non-profit shelter

Hull Seaside Animal Rescue is about to make 2008 very interesting!

The non-profit cat shelter is releasing it's first ever "Kittendales" calendar for 2008.

The all-volunteer project focuses on some hunky and not so hunky men, who wanted to help the shelter raise money.

The idea of showing the hunks with kittens came from HSAR board member and volunteer Chris Crotty.

"When I was thinking about how to raise much needed money for our shelter, a calendar came to mind" Crotty said. "Everyone loves kittens and the contrast between hunky men and our little furry felines seemed like a unique approach to putting together a calendar."

Along with volunteers Susan Davis who coordinated every shoot, and Shirley Moloney, the project is finally finished over a year later.

"Many of these men went way out of their way and beyond the call of duty in order to get the right shot," said photographer Joanne Berman. "We are grateful to all of the guys who offered to be a part of this project, and more specifically because they wanted to help our shelter."

Every penny raised will go toward the day-to-day care of our feline residents at Hull Seaside Animal Rescue, which is a no-kill shelter.

The calendars will be available starting Sept. 15th with it's kick-off at Hull's Endless Summer Event.

If you would like to purchase one of these limited edition calendars ($20 each), please contact Hull Seaside Animal Rescue for more information: 1-877-378-1195 or hsar @hsar.org

Dog training on the Common

The final dog training class of the season will begin Monday, Sept. 10, at 6 p.m., at the Cohasset Recreation Center on the Common.

Good Manners for Beginners teaches all of a dog's beginner-level commands, such as sit, stay, come, down, take, drop, heel, quickly, slowly, don't touch and watch me. It also teaches dominance exercises such as the long down stay and addresses problem-solving issues such as jumping, mouthing and chewing.

The class takes place once weekly for five weeks, from 6 to 7 p.m. Cost is $110. To register, call Cohasset Recreation at 781-383-4109. For more information or to speak to the trainer, call 781-878-4343.

Re-living history

A group of re-enactors portray the crew of HMS Somerset

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

History teachers do their best to make the past come alive for their students. Derby Academy history teacher Pete Condrick takes it to a whole new level. For 10 weekends a year, Condrick transforms into Lieutenant Peter Condrick of the British Royal Navy, circa the 18th century.

Condrick is a historical re-enactor, a hobby that takes him and about 30 fellow re-enactors to famous Revolutionary War battlefields throughout former colonial America to portray the crew of the HMS Somerset, a British warship stationed in Boston Harbor during the Revolution.

"No one had really researched the British brigade," and they weren't represented at the scores of re-enactment events Condrick had attended over the years, "it wasn't good history not to have the navy presence."

After spending six months aboard the tall ship, Sloop Providence, Condrick returned to Massachusetts to find his friends and fellow re-enactors had named him master and commander of the His Majesty's Ship Somerset with a crew of six and three upcoming events. And there his British Royal Navy re-enacting career began.

However, Condrick historical re-enacting career was born out of an early love of history, particularly the Revolutionary War. At the age of 11 he joined the Hingham Militia, where he would wear a historical uniform, carry a musket and march in local parades.

"Those guys taught me a love of history," he says but his passion for re-enacting couldn't be contained to sporadic parades.

"At 14 I joined the British army and never looked back," he quips. As an example of the depth of his interest, he says instead of a car or a new stereo for his 16th birthday, Condrick asked his parents for a musket — a traditional 18th century gift for a boy turning 16.

While continuing his British army re-enactments, he branched out and learned how to sail tall ships. With sailing expertise and a desire to educate people about the British Navy's influence during the Revolutionary War drove him to trade in his red coat for a navy blue lieutenant's jacket eight years ago.

"It was the perfect marriage of my two interests," says Condrick, a former Cohasset resident.

In 2001, the HMS Somerset incorporated as a ship's company and established bylaws, regulations and a budget. The HMS Somerset was the first British Royal Navy re-enactment company in New England and now is the "flagship of the North American Squadron." There are five other Royal Navy re-enactment companies in the US. In June 2005, Condrick's crew joined the other British Navy officers and seamen in Williamsburg.

"It was the first historical re-enactment that was numerically accurate with a one to one ratio," says Condrick, in 1780 there were about 65 members of the British Royal Navy, almost 225 years later there was again that number in Williamsburg.

Condrick's crew is comprised of 25 warrants and rated seamen, two officers and four marines. Although they portray a British navy crew in uniforms and in skills, they lack a key element of the British Royal Navy — a ship to call their own. A tight budget is the reason — to replicate the eighteenth century warship would cost over $25 million just to build the hull, says Condrick.

"We're progressive in the hobby," says Condrick, which means they try to be as historically accurate as possible. They wear hand-stitched uniforms and try to pick events where the British Navy would have been. It also means they possess the skills members of the British Navy would have possessed. At an event at Fort Tabor, they borrowed ships and landed them on the beach. At a re-enactment of the Battle of Saratoga, they portrayed how the Navy would have moved on a battlefield —"we move very quickly on the field," he says. The Navy personnel were demolition experts too, so they can demonstrate that skill as well.

COURTESY PHOTO

Lieutenant Pete Condrick (left) stands with his Executive Officer Lieutenant Shane Clarke aboard the Sloop Providence, a tall ship based in Rhode Island. The two co-founded the HMS Somerset III historical re-enactment group. Both are donning the typical working, or undress, coats of Royal Navy lieutenants in the 18th century.

Condrick does not take on a British accent, but he does immerse himself in his first lieutenant role during re-enactment.

"We're not just playing guns, there are controlled explosions," he says so there are safety concerns, but mostly he just loves getting into the part, "I'm very aware of my eighteenth century command role, I get into it."

The third HMS Somerset built in 1746 was instrumental in the events leading up to the American Revolution. It served during the French and Indian War as a third-rate ship of the line. She was responsible for the closing of the port of Boston in 1774, and the landing of British troops in Boston and New York. The HMS Somerset III met its end when it ran aground off the tip of Cape Cod while chasing French frigates in 1778.

"The highest compliment a re-enactor can be paid is to be recognized by its British affiliate," says Condrick and that's just what happened in 2005. The Captain of the HMS Somerset IV contacted Condrick after stumbling upon the re-enactors website. Condrick invited the Captain and other members of the current HMS Somerset to come to the US to experience a re-enactment.

The British Royal Navy returned the favor by inviting Condrick and six of his crew to come aboard the HMS Somerset IV. They boarded the ship, a Type 23 frigate built in 1994, in London and went underway through the English Channel with the Royal Navy.

"I was an honorary lieutenant in the Royal Navy for six days," says Condrick with a big smile, "it was amazing."

Getting back in gear

While news never takes a hiatus — the quantity of news slows down somewhat over the summer months.

That should not be surprising given that town boards don't meet as often, schools are out, and lots of residents go away for a week or two. Other townspeople just like to kick back and relax and not think about "issues" or having to take the kids to dance lessons or hockey practice.

But with the start of school next week, that's all about to change.

The town budget season looms on the horizon, Boy Scouts and Girl Scouts meet, houses of worship resume their regular schedules, youth sports get into full swing along with myriad other activities for Cohasseters of all ages.

Here at the Mariner, we're pleased to be the vehicle through which our readers either "get the word out" or "find out about" everything from who's on the dean's list to what is the latest news about Greenbush.

But if you're on the delivery end of the news — in other words you want your club announcement or letter-to-the-editor in the paper — there are some simple "rules to follow."

Here at the Mariner, we're pleased to be the vehicle through which our readers either "get the word out" or "find out about" everything from who's on the dean's list to what is the latest news about Greenbush.

We accept letters, news items and happenings by email, which is one of the most efficient ways to send your news. However, we receive dozens of emails everyday, so it's not a bad idea to follow your email up with a telephone call, just to make sure your message arrived safely and wasn't inadvertently deleted. Or better yet, just ask us to hit the reply button — so you'll get the message that we received your email on your computer. Attachments should be saved as word documents; photographs should be sent as jpg attachments.

We still accept news by fax and the old-fashioned way, through the US mail, or dropped off here at the Cohasset Mariner office, 73 South St., Hingham Square, above the Upper Crust.

News items should be as concise as possible and written in a narrative form. In other words, please write your news items in a "mini-story format" using complete sentences. Try not to send us flyers, which have to be completely reworded.

Here's the scoop on how to get your news in the Mariner:

Email: Mary Ford at: mford@cnc.com

FAX: 781-741-2931

In person: at the Cohasset Mariner office (in the Hingham Journal Building), 73 South St., above the Upper Crust

Mail: The Cohasset Mariner, 73 South St., Hingham, MA 02043

Sports news email: to Joel Racicot at: jracicot@cnc.com

Try to have your news to the Mariner by Wednesday morning for that week's issue, however, earlier is always better. We accept obituaries and letters to the editor until noon, Wednesday. If letters and obituaries come by email we can stretch that deadline a few hours.

We have forms available for wedding and engagement announcements with complete instructions at the Mariner office.

We welcome news tips and story ideas anytime.

Call Mary Ford, editor, at 781-741-2933; or staff reporter Nancy White, at 781-741-2935.

We couldn't do our job without help from the community. So let us hear from you!

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Heartfelt thanks from Ainslie Family

TO THE EDITOR:

The Family of Lawrence Ainslie would like to thank the Town of Cohasset, especially the Cohasset Police Department and the police from surrounding towns for honoring Larry with such respect. They would also like to acknowledge and thank everyone for their thoughts, prayers, and kindness throughout the past few weeks, as they are deeply appreciated.

Larry would have been very grateful for the support you all have shown to him and his family.

Proposed new sunscreen labeling

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

The FDA proposal provides a consumer-friendly ratings system for UVA sunscreen products on a scale of one to four stars.

By now you've heard the buzz about the Aug. 23 Food and Drug Administration proposal for a new regulation that sets standards for formulating, testing and labeling over-the-counter (OTC) sunscreen drug products with ultraviolet A (UVA) and ultraviolet B (UVB) protection.

"For more than 30 years, consumers have been able to identify the level of UVB protection provided by sunscreens using only sunburn protection factor or SPF values," said Andrew C. von Eschenbach, Commissioner of FDA. "Under today's proposal, consumers will also now know the level of UVA protection in sunscreens, which will help them make informed decisions about protecting themselves and their children against the harmful effects of the sun."

Sunlight is composed of the visible light that we can see, and ultraviolet (UV) light that we cannot. There are two types of UV light, UVA and UVB. UVA light is responsible for tanning and UVB for sunburn. Both can damage the skin and increase the risk of skin cancer.

The FDA proposal provides a consumer-friendly ratings system for UVA sunscreen products on a scale of one to four stars. One star would represent low UVA protection, two stars would represent medium protection, three stars would represent high protection, and four stars would represent the highest UVA protection available in an OTC sunscreen product.

If a sunscreen product does not provide at least a low level (one star) of protection, FDA is proposing to require that the product bear a "no UVA protection" marking on the front label near the SPF value.

In addition, a "Warnings" statement in the "Drug Facts" box will be required of all sunscreen product manufacturers. The warning will say: "UV exposure from the sun increases the risk of skin cancer, premature skin aging, and other skin damage. It is important to decrease UV exposure by limiting time in the sun, wearing protective clothing, and using a sunscreen." The warning is intended to increase awareness that sunscreens are only one part of a sun protection program. FDA will accept comments on the new rule until November 26, 2007.

FDA also is amending its existing 1999 rule to increase the SPF from SPF30+ to SPF50+. Higher number provides more UVB protection than lower SPF values.

Many have echoed the statement by Connecticut Attorney General Richard Blumenthal, that it's not soon enough. "Not only should these rules have been released earlier but they should have a swifter deadline for implementation," said Blumenthal, who petitioned the FDA earlier this year to release the rules. "These rules should be mandatory so they help consumers next summer."

Unfortunately or not, the early adoption of the labeling and the swifter deadline are unrealistic. That's not the way things work. The current wave of publicity and the controversy will hopefully serve to make people more vigilant. So much for this year. People will slather more SPF 30 on those places that need it and stay under protection or wear SPF50 shirts, etc. Meanwhile, sunblock makers will oil up their machinery, contact their lobbyists and get more time. Then next spring, if shipments arrive from China and elsewhere in time, a good fraction of the suppliers will start selling products, which claim to meet the new regulations in spite of the fact that they have two years to implement them. The rest will grouse, lose market share, and finally either be forced into selling a less effective product at a cheaper price or print new labels claiming to meet new standards. This scenario or versions of it will go on for about 5 years. As usual, you get what you pay for, and independent testing agencies will have facts on the web by next summer.

So it's up to you, the consumer, to worry about the appropriate sun protection and obtain information on how best to protect yourself. If you need information on the latest recommended procedures, contact Judy Fitzsimmons, the Town Health Nurse.

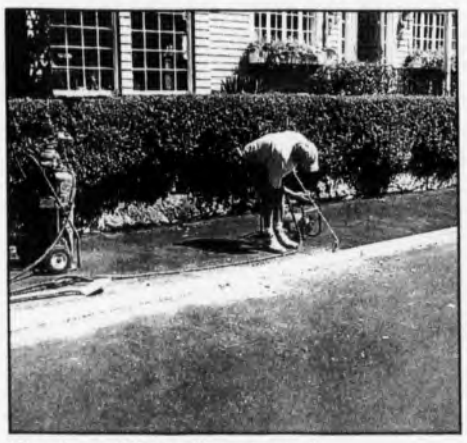
Grade crossing gremlins on the loose

MAKING TRACKS

TOM GRUBER & MARK BRENNAN

GREMLINS— About a week ago, the bells and lights at the Pond Street railroad crossing decided they were going to announce their presence to the entire neighborhood. Several times after midnight, the bells and lights started dinging and flashing all by themselves. But, there was no train in sight. The MBTA was finally able to silence the bells and lights, but not until after local residents were awakened several times in the middle of the night. We guess it's just gremlins. Hopefully, after a few adjustments the gates got their mischievous behavior out of their system.

As of last Friday, the railroad crossings at Beechwood, Pond and Sohier streets had been accepted by the Massachusetts Department of Public Utilities (DPU) for commercial service. By now, more crossings have probably been accepted. The DPU is the state organization charged with the responsibility for approving railroad crossings and determining whether they meet safety standards and are ready for use. Last week the crossing at Pleasant Street, the first quad gate crossing to be set up and debugged, was still in the process of being tested. It took quite a while to get the adjustments to work properly. Other quad gate crossings in other towns should be easier to set up since the MBTA will have learned a lot about the set up procedure after testing our crossing.



We mentioned before that a quad gate crossing derives its name from the fact that is has four gates, not just two, like most other crossings. When a train comes, the two gates that prevent the vehicles from entering the crossing come down. But, sensors in the crossing prevent the two exiting gates from coming down until the crossing is clear. Only after the crossing is clear, do the exiting gates come down. When the crossing is clear, a signal is sent to the train saying that the crossing is clear and it is OK for the train to proceed. As a result of the additional control activities, quad gates will be in a down position a bit longer than non-quad gates.

While observing the quad gate testing we noticed an old truck tire and wheel lying at the edge of the tracks. When we inquired why this old wheel was lying around, we were told this was a "test wheel." It seems that the sensors in the track area between the gates had to be sensitive enough to sense the presence of this single wheel to prevent the exiting gate from lowering. That's pretty sensitive.

Lastly, as we've said so many times in these pages, safety is so important. We now have crossings that are fully operable. They will operate whenever a train or work vehicle passes over the crossing. Vehicles and pedestrians alike need to be very respectful of the power and danger presented by the train. Each crossing has a "Do Not Stop On The Track" warning sign. No matter what the circumstance, do not pull onto the tracks unless there is a clear space for you on the other side of the tracks. Trains are really serious stuff. And, parents especially need to instill safety rules into their children. The schools alone can't do it.

Blasting mat in place on ledge.

Granite curb being flame treated.

Close up of blasting mat.

REVITALIZATION – Most of the construction work on the Revitalization project has been completed. But, there is a "Punch List" of items yet to be finished. One of these is rounding the curbing along Elm Street from the Historical Society's buildings to beyond Fleming's. For the construction done last year, the specifications called for granite curbing with a rounded top at the base of St. Stephen's. The new curbing added this year on Elm Street should have been the same. But, the contractor installed square top granite curb, intending to round it after installation. So, this week, a masonry contractor used heat from an acetylene torch to round off the curbing. The newly rounded curb has a slightly different color initially. But, it will weather to a more uniform color, consistent with what was installed last year.

In the accompanying photo, a mason is heat-treating the edge of the granite curbing to round the top edge. The curb portion to the left of the photo has been rounded. The portion on the right is still square cornered. For those of you that love bits of arcane information, the process that is being used here is very interesting and quite simple. All granite has a small amount of water trapped in the microstructure of the granite. The heat from the acetylene torch causes the trapped water to boil and expand into steam. The expansion of the steam causes the granite to pop and flake off. Each type of granite has different amounts of water entrained. So, different types of granite react differently to this process.

FOREST AVENUE – This week the knob of rock on Forest Avenue, near N. Main Street was drilled with holes in preparation for blasting. Due to the proximity of homes, the blasts were set with very small charges to fracture the rock. The area to be blasted was covered by a blasting mat prior to blasting. The mat is constructed of old pieces of tires connected tightly together with steel cables. Its purpose is to prevent the pieces of rock fractured from becoming air borne to avoid damage to the surrounding properties.

Blasting safety requirements in Cohasset are enforced by the Cohasset Fire Department. Our rules require that a fire official be at the site when any blasting is undertaken. Also, due to the proximity of gas service, the gas company had a representative standing by. As you can see, blasting in Cohasset is a very safety conscious enterprise.

SAFETY AROUND COHASSET – Kudos to the Cohasset Police Department for their use of their portable trailer mounted speed meter. It's a very interesting phenomenon to watch cars driving past this sign. Invariably, the brake lights come on and the drivers slow down to the speed limit, or at least somewhat near it. Yet, remove the speed meter and some drivers seem to loose sight of the speed limits altogether. Where our roadways have been or will shortly be improved, drivers have the temptation to turn into speed demons. It is really critical that we think carefully about driving around our town. It is so ironic that when the roads are potholed we get tons of complaints from drivers about the bumps and inconvenience. Yet, when the roads are improved, the abutters complain about drivers carelessly speeding through our neighborhoods. Most all of us are both abutters and drivers. The next time you are driving, think about your driving habits. Are they the habits you'd like to see in your own neighborhood?

Confused by 2008 election?

HENSHAW

TOM HENSHAW

I've voted in every presidential election since 1948, and believe me, it wasn't easy reaching a decision to vote for George McGovern in '72.

I had a hand in covering most of them, and I still can't for the life of me figure out why Dick Nixon found it necessary to break into Democratic headquarters in the Watergate when he had a 10-run lead in the top of the ninth.

Selecting a candidate was simple in those days, which now seem so long ago. You looked for the (D) or the (R) behind his name and let nature take its course. There rarely was an (I) behind anybody's name to mess things up.

There rarely was an (I) behind anybody's name to mess things up.

I have to admit the 2007 presidential election has me thoroughly confused. Oops, that's the 2008 election. See what I mean.

For one thing, there's Hillary Clinton's cleavage. I have never thought of cleavage in an electoral sense. In fact, now that I have reached four score and two, I don't think of cleavage very much at all.

Seems Hillary, who has a (D) behind her name, showed up for a speech the other day wearing a blouse that was cut a little lower than usual. In any other milieu it would be called a Mother Hubbard.

I ask you now, would you vote for a woman who shows cleavage? Who is running here, Sophie Loren or Dolly Parton?

At the same time, it was discovered that Rudy Giuliani's kids aren't supporting their father for president because he dumped their mother for another wife, his third. He also supports abortion rights.

So what happens? Sixty seven percent of those who go to church at least once a week told a pollster they would be happy to vote for Giuliani, who has an (R) behind his name. Where are Pat Robinson and Jerry Falwell when we need them?

Even the timing of the '08 election is confusing me.

I grew up at a time when all the great state of New Hampshire had to do was announce a February date for its primary election, raise prices on everything from a cup of coffee to a hotel room, then stand back and watch the votes and money roll in.

New Hampshire's first-in-the-nation primary helped make Jimmy Carter in 1976 and break Lyndon Johnson in 1968; it brought so much money into the state that even the operators of the ski slopes could afford to take a few days off in mid-winter.

So what happens?

South Carolina and Arizona move their 2008 primaries to Feb. 5, and Florida sets its primary date on Jan. 29, which sends South Carolina to Jan. 19, which means that New Hampshire has to go to Jan. 12, which projects the Iowa caucuses to Christmastime 2007.

Confused? I know that I am.

All I know is that both parties, (D) and (R), are likely to have their candidates selected 10 months before the 2008 election.

And for all I know, the Iowa caucuses to select candidates for the 2012 election will be held the day after the 2008 election and the New Hampshire primary election will be held the day after that. We may have the candidates for the 2012 election chosen before the president we elected in 2008 is sworn in.

Surviving the virtual breakup

THE FAR SIDE OF PERFECT

DIANE K. DANIELSON

Dear Michael Dell:

I'm writing to you because I could use some advice (and Miss Manners didn't seem appropriate for this situation). You see, I thought things were going fine in my life when suddenly out of the blue, and with absolutely no warning, my hard-drive was gone. Gone, gone, gone. Without so much as a proper goodbye. (I don't consider "unsurmountable_boot_volume" an appropriate farewell!) To add insult to injury, my hard-drive not only left me, but it also took all of my data and documents. (We created them jointly; don't I have any custodial rights?)

As you can tell, I'm in the anger stage of the breakup ("What nerve ... to do this to me!"), having already suffered through that initial gut wrenching sick feeling ("Oh my God!"), then a brief denial stage ("This is SO not happening"), followed by a three-Kleenex box tearfest ("Why me? Why now?"). It was through these tears that I desperately dialed your hotline. When I finally got through to a nice man at Dell (or should I say "in Delhi"), he very patiently stayed on the line and counseled me through some last ditch efforts to try to save the relationship. But even he couldn't repair the damage.

I realize that relationships never work out when one party is needier and more dependent than the other. But I couldn't help becoming dependent — I loved my laptop, and embraced it full-heartedly despite all its quirks. I thought it was enough to stand by for better (when we gave birth to our first blog), for worse (through a few Ctrl-Alt-Deletes), in both sickness (viruses and spyware) and in health (new software downloads).

Yet perhaps there was something I did or didn't do? Maybe it has been some time since I backed up my data. And now that I think about it, I might have neglected to run some updates recently. But work was out of control and I ignored the signals, always choosing the "remind me later" option.

I know, I know, that's not a valid excuse. But if you could work with my hard-drive and coax it back just this one time, I promise that things will be different. I'll have my priorities in perspective. (We're now into the pleading stage.) After all, haven't I learned the hard way that without my hard-drive inside nothing remains but an empty shell?

So, Mr. Dell, I suppose I'm in the final stage of the breakup — resignation — where the only question to be asked is, "Where does one go from here?"

Yours truly,

BROKEN UP AND BROKEN DOWN IN COHASSET

Diane K. Danielson is a Cohasset resident who hopes that "taking a break" (a/k/a a technology-free vacation) will prevent an actual permanent breakup. However, upon her return, if her laptop does not have a better attitude and a renewed enthusiasm for the relationship, we hope it knows she will not hesitate to trade it in for a younger, much sexier model.

Library Corner

See Jimmy Stewart in 'Harvey'

The following events will take place at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library.

Library Book Group – There will be no August meeting of the Library Book Group. The next meeting will be at 10 a.m., on Wednesday, Sept. 26. The group will discuss Nathaniel Philbrick's book "Mayflower."

Movie Matinee – The public is invited to come to a daytime showing of the classic movie "Harvey," starring Jimmy Stewart and Josephine Hull, at 11 a.m., on Friday, Sept. 7. Free admission and light refreshments provided by the Friends of the Library.

Independent Film Night – The library will show the independent film "Viva Cuba" at 6 p.m., on Thursday, Sept. 20, in the Meeting Room. Malu is from an upper-class family and her single mother does not want her to play with Jorgito, as she thinks his background is coarse and commonplace. Jorgito's mother, a poor Socialist proud of her family's social standing, places similar restrictions on her son. What neither woman recognizes is the strength of the bond between Malu and Jorgito. When the children learn that Malu's mother is planning to leave Cuba, they decide to run away and travel to the other side of the island to find Malu's father and persuade him against signing the forms that would allow it. Free admission and free refreshments courtesy of the Friends of the Library.

Great Decisions Group – The first Great Decisions Discussion group will begin at 2:30 p.m., on Sunday, Sept. 9, in the Meeting Room. For those who have registered for the program, the group will be discussing the Middle East found in Chapter One of the assigned text.

Holiday Closing – The library will be closed Monday, Sept. 3, for Labor Day.

FOR CHILDREN

Summer Reading – Don't wait until the last minute to do summer required reading. The library still has copies of many of the popular books. See Mrs. Moody or a member of the circulation staff for help. Cohasset Middle/High School reading lists may be downloaded from the Web site at cohassetlibrary.org. Click on Young Adult and then click on CMHS Summer Reading from the side menu. Click on the list wanted and then print. For more information, email smoody@ocln.org or call 781-383-1348, ext. 3.

Backpack Time – The statewide summer reading program, "Catch the Beat @ Your Library," has come to an end. Bring in summer reading logs to the Circulation Desk. All students who have met or exceeded their summer reading goal will be awarded a "Catch the Beat @ Your Library" backpack.

New principal on Our Town

Join Our Town co-osts, Mark DeGiacomo and Pat Martin, when they sit down with the newly appointed principal of the Deer Hill School, Dr. Jennifer deChiara. Dr. deChiara will begin her first school year in Cohasset on Tuesday, Sept. 4 and outlines her goals for grades three through five.

As an added feature, check out the parade of prom gowns captured at the pre-prom red carpet event held before this year's Cohasset High School senior class prom.

Stay tuned to Comcast channel 10 on Mondays, Tuesdays and Thursdays at 9 p.m. and stay informed, Cohasset!

says Walsh. Part of making the schools better is making the staff better and to accomplish that piece, this summer the faculty at all levels has participated in conferences, workshops and other professional development opportunities.

"We're excited to have new teachers in the district, we're in very good shape with hiring and we're happy with the quality of teachers we are able to attract," says Walsh. Two new administrators join the ranks of Cohasset schools, Deer Hill Principal Jennifer deChiara and Middle School Assistant Principal Kerri Sandler.

Around 1500 students will walk through the front doors of Cohasset's three schools, "we're ready to open," says Walsh.

Osgood School

The youngest Cohasset students, a total of 385 children in grades K-2, will report to Osgood School on Tuesday morning.

"On the first day of school there is clearly an air of excitement and anticipation. We try to be as warm and welcoming as possible," says Principal Janet Sheehan. Curriculum and instructional materials will aid an "excellent faculty" in the coming year, says Sheehan. The staff has new technology resources to make the classroom experience a 21st century one. Small class instruction, with class size averages hovering around 20 for all three grades, will enhance the learning experience.

"The teachers plan activities so that the children can learn classroom routines and make smooth transitions. Activities are also planned to promote friendships and to generate excitement about learning."

This year will mark the third year the full day program is offered. About 90 percent of the incoming kindergarteners have opted for the full-day program. There will be only one half-day kindergarten class with an enrollment of 12. Kindergarteners will participate in orientation and screening activities on Sept. 4 and 5, then have their first official day on Thursday, Sept. 6.

A healthy lunch for $2.25 will be available on the first day. Students will have a choice of chicken nuggets with a dinner roll or a turkey sub with baked oven fries. Carrots, sliced apples and choice of 100 percent juice or milk will accompany both menu choices.

There will be some new faces at Osgood, including a new first grade teacher, Jennifer McPhillips and a new kindergarten special education teacher, Kim Kurker. Osgood also welcomes the addition of a school psychologist, Meredith Whalen.

Deer Hill School

Next door at Deer Hill, new principal Jennifer deChiara is excitedly anticipating meeting the 350 students under her charge this year.

"[The first day of school] has always been my favorite day of the school year," says deChiara. Although, many kids probably don't share her sentiments, the first day of school is a time to meet up with friends and share stories of summer. Day 1 will be a "whirlwind of activity" for deChiara who will make a point to visit all the classes and meet the students.

School will begin at 8:30 a.m. on Tuesday and release time is 2:30 p.m. Students may enter the building at 8:20 a.m.

A new school-wide textbook adoption of the revised Everyday Math will be implemented this year, which deChiara is excited about. The fourth grade will be piloting a new writing program. A leadership program at the fifth grade level is in the works and the highly successful enrichment program EMC^3 will continue to motivate and challenge the older elementary students.

Lunch on the first day will feature kid-friendly options: chicken nuggets with a dinner roll or turkey sub with baked oven fries. Carrots, sliced apples and choice of 100 percent juice or milk will accompany both menu choices for $2.50.

Although deChiara foresees "lots of questions" from students and teachers about routines and other minor details, she is confident Deer Hills is "ready to go."

Middle-High School

Principal Joel Antolini expects the middle-high school students to come prepared to learn — even on the first day.

"We start right away with teaching and learning," says Antolini, with very little procedural introduction. The students will have the opportunity to meet with all their teachers for the semester on the first day. On a typical block schedule day, students will only see four of their five teachers.

Antolini will also host assemblies throughout the first day to speak with each class. He will welcome the sixth graders, the newest additions to the Middle-High School community. Then meet with the seventh and eight graders as a group, the ninth graders, and lastly the upperclassmen, grades 10 to 12.

Middle-High School students will be treated to an array of healthy food court type options. There is a grill, pasta, deli, pizza, salad and soup options, which students can mix and match to their tastes. Because of the selection of choices, lunch prices varies.

As a school goal, Antolini's focus this year is to implement strategies outlined in Breaking Ranks II, a program developed for high schools by educational researchers. The program promotes the establishment of personalized learning, academic rigor and collaborative leadership.

"[Breaking Ranks II] fits with my long-term goal of being recognized as a Presidential School of Excellence," says Antolini.

Technology will be integrated into learning more than ever. High school students will be offered the chance to take classes at "Virtual High School," an internet-based classroom. The Middle school boasts a new technology lab funded by the Cohasset Education Foundation.

Returning students will see plenty of familiar faces around the building, but there are a dozen new faces joining the faculty. Middle School Assistant Principal Beth McCoy has moved on, and Kerri Sandler, a former world language teacher in Hull will take her place. Antolini also welcomes nine new teachers, a new secretary and a new school psychologist, Aaron Blidner.

"I'm looking forward to helping all students meet with success and provide all staff with the opportunity to do that," says Antolini, "we want to create ways to challenge everyone in the school community to demonstrate their strengths and apply what they are learning."

"I figured to do my job well and thoughtfully I need to know all the kids," she says. For six years she was principal of the Dean S. Luce Elementary School in Canton, which housed students from pre-kindergarten to grade five. In addition to the appeal of a smaller school, deChiara finds herself more in her comfort zone at the helm of a school devoted to only grades three to five.

An added bonus is Cohasset's seaside location, which is both close to her home in Weymouth and, for her, is reminiscent of her childhood growing up on Cape Cod.

DeChiara began her career in education in the early 80s as a special education teacher, "I loved it." But, over time, she became frustrated with the school system's low expectations for special education students.

"I felt we should be preparing them for college," says deChiara while the program was designed to be a functional and therapeutic curriculum. Through graduate studies and a stint teaching at an orphanage in Romania, deChiara determined school administration was where she could enact the most change.

"I always want to be a principal, I don't have aspirations to be a superintendent. I want a career defined by personal relationships," she says.

In the next year she hopes to continue the progress her predecessor, Keith Gauley, made for Deer Hill during his tenure.

"Things are done well here from what I can see," she says, but it will take a building full of kids to fully understand all the issues facing the school. She names the recent implementation of Reader's Workshop, a multi-faceted approach to reading as a curriculum strength. It teaches comprehension, fluency, vocabulary, phonics and word study. She and her team of teachers aim to raise the school's MCAS writing scores which were "lower scores than what was expected given the reading scores." Professional development has been geared toward writing techniques to address the discrepancy.

"I've been impressed with the level of professionalism in the teachers."

— Dr. Jennifer deChiara, Deer Hill principal

"I've been impressed with the level of professionalism in the teachers. Most of them have been in the building a lot over the summer between workshops, meeting with me and setting up the classrooms," she says, "the focus for the teachers is truly what's good for the kids, not what's easiest for me as a teacher."

One of the unique aspects she intends to bring to the Deer Hill community is to encourage students and teacher to become leaders.

"I want kids to develop confidence in themselves," deChiara says, "there will be a focus on helping kids develop their strongest talents and prepare them for leadership in the future."

In conjunction she plans on developing a fifth grade leadership program in the upcoming year. The successful EMC^3 — enrich, motivate and challenge — programming will return to Deer Hill with before, during and after school enrichment classes.

Over the next few years, deChiara would like to see smaller class sizes at Deer Hill. Although right now the class size is in a "reasonable range" from a high of 24 to a low of 21, she feels the primary level is where class size is most important.

"The students have less capacity to work independently" so they often need more individual or small group instruction, she says. "A class size of 18 would be lovely."

DeChiara will be holding several small focus group sessions with parents throughout September, there will be evening and day times to allow, "it allows me the opportunity to learn from parents and know what their vision for the school and for kids is."

So far, deChiara has found the parent and larger Cohasset community to be welcoming, "I can't overemphasize how supported I've felt from day one. It's been a wonderful way to enter a community. Parents have only expressed their willingness to help and support the school."

With school just over the horizon and final details being worked out, deChiara is looking forward to greeting the students as they enter Deer Hill on Tuesday, "we're ready to go."

A mean correlation of .86 (1.0 is optimal) is found between bacteria counts determined by CSCR students and those counts determined by G and L laboratories.

CSCR Students 'Go Pro!'

CSCR UPDATE

JACK BUCKLEY

When considering statistics and statistical analyses, baseball is never too far from the discussion. From Little Leaguer to sports talk radio aficionado, baseball "pros" in New England know their stats. Baseball stats, or benchmarks guide our debates about the relative merits of particular players, and they give us standards to reach for if we dare dream about "going pro." But what happens when we switch from playing fields to laboratories? What are the benchmarks? Which statistics do we use to compare ourselves to the professionals? Daring students from Center for Student Coastal Research endeavored to find some answers to these questions by asking, "How do we compare to the pros? Can we produce results like they do in the "Big Leagues?" Can we produce bacteria data comparable to that produced by a professional lab?

This article, part one of a two part series, provides a preliminary, but resounding YES answer to the questions posed above. Considering that the topic of municipal benchmarks has been exposed, discussed, and debated for well over a year now in the Cohasset community, it is only fitting that CSCR student data be examined in such a context.

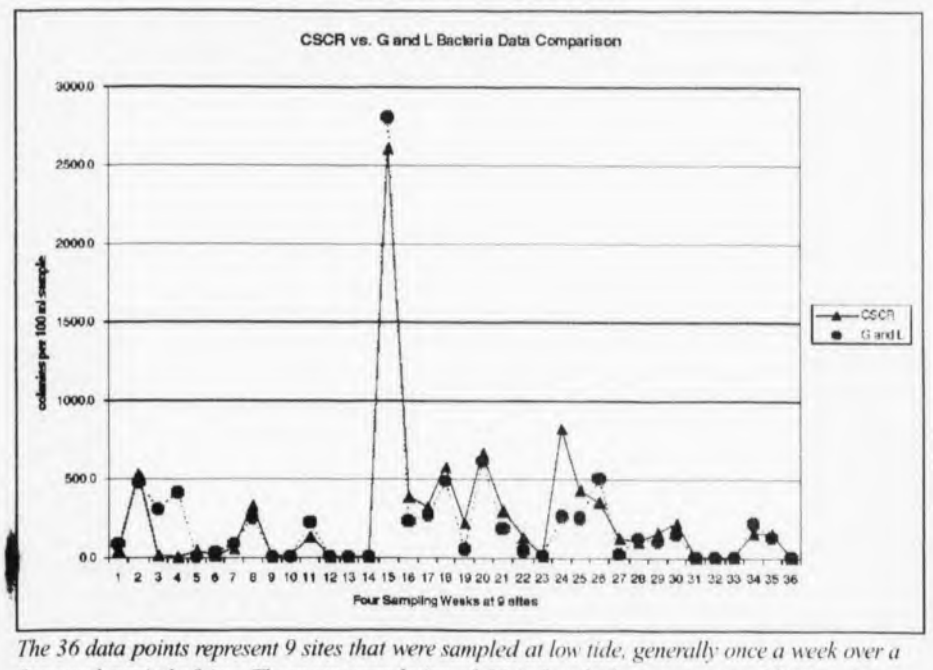
Readers were recently informed about the Board of Health project championed by CSCR students Chloe Koines, Katina Martone, and Juliette Karp. Under the co-leadership of CSCR intern Brittany Novak (CHS grad '04, Harvard University BA candidate, '08) and Board of Health Renaissance woman Tara Tradd, Koines, Martone, and Karp are collecting and analyzing bacteria samples drawn from six Cohasset swimming sites. More importantly, the three students hypothesized that they could produce bacteria counts comparable to the bacteria data produced by G and L Laboratories, the professional lab with whom the town contracts to perform its beach sampling analyses. To date, five weeks of student data has been collected and analyzed in comparison to G and L data. How do the two data sets compare?

Figure one reveals a beautiful correlation between the professional data and the student data. Correlation, one may recall, is a statistical tool used to "determine whether the two measurement variables tend to move together." We want a positive correlation, expressed as a numerical value of +1.0 (or close to it) when the calculations are performed. Visually, a positive correlation close to 1.0 means that the two sets of data will move together and look like one line when graphed together. The two data sets will "move" together such that when the student data moves "up" and "down," the G and L data moves in harmony. And it does! Bacteria are not uniformly distributed in any water sample, so some variation is quite normal and expected.

Congratulations are in order to all of the students who have participated in these two projects with such a high degree of professionalism.

Could the town of Cohasset utilize the services of CSCR student researchers to perform its beach sampling program, rather than subcontract services to a professional lab? The preliminary answer to that question is again a definitive, "YES!" This favorable comparison of data sets is all the more appealing when one considers that the cost per bacteria test charged by a professional lab is $35 while CSCR's per test cost is less than $10. Herein lies a potential for a municipal savings of $1,500 over the course of a single season of beach monitoring ($25 cost difference x six beaches x 10 weeks of sampling).

In addition to this compelling Board of Health project, a separate group of CSCR student researchers collected and analyzed four rounds of bacteria samples at nine sites within Cohasset Harbor's watershed. Under the direction of project leader Christian Krahforst of the Massachusetts Bays Monitoring Program, 12 CSCR students monitored not only bacteria counts, but pH, dissolved oxygen, salinity, nitrates, chlorophyll-a, and total suspended solids. Four sites were located in the Harbor, while three sites were located in the Gulf River, and two sites were located in James Brook. With respect to bacteria, 72 total samples have been analyzed by CSCR students and professional lab technicians from G and L (36 samples, respectively.) How do these numbers compare?



One can see that CSCR's bacteria data (indicated by the circle symbol,) closely follows G and L's bacteria data (indicated by the triangle symbol,_). For the most part, when the triangles go up, the circles go up; when the triangles go down, the circles go down, revealing another positive correlation between CSCR student data and G and L professional data.

This data set, however, reveals some exceptions that are most likely attributable to sampling technique. Most of the samples drawn for comparison with G and L were field duplicates as called for in the study protocol. Field duplicates are taken when one sample bottle is filled for one lab, then a second bottle filled for another lab. By contrast, "split" samples are taken when one field sample is split into two sub samples with half of the sample going to one lab, and the other half of the sample sent to the other lab. Does it make a difference?

To test the hypothesis that split samples might lead to a more favorable comparison, students split samples on their second round of data collection. Look closely at data points 10-18. The triangles and circles are very tight. Analyzed as a subset, these split samples returned a correlation value of .99. One doesn't get much better than that! The data suggests that splitting samples is a more desirable approach than collecting field duplicates.

Can CSCR students produce bacteria data comparable to that produced by a professional lab? Yes. Does the quality of student work wither in the bright light of professional benchmarks? Not at all. Is there still room for improvement in the quality of work produced by CSCR students? Of course. But if one wants to know just how good student work is at CSCR, this data confirms what CSCR teachers have known for some time now about CSCR student work— it's pretty much as good as the pro's.

Congratulations are in order to all of the students who have participated in these two projects with such a high degree of professionalism. Congratulations to Melissa Campedelli, Margaux Donze, Tristram Norman, Katie Pritchard, Mike Kusek, Johanna Regan, Jean Thomae, Jenny Cahill, Ellie Baumgarten, Matt Burgess, Robin Earle, Jon Choi, Michelle Berube, Aisling Guinee, and James McKelvey.

The 36 data points represent 9 sites that were sampled at low tide, generally once a week over a four week period of time. The mean correlation of .80 is found when comparing CSCR student bacteria counts to professional lab G and L, Quincy, Mass.

Cohasset Dramatic Club sets stage for auditions

Auditions for Cohasset Dramatic Club's production of "Moon Over Buffalo" by Ken Ludwig, will be held at the Cohasset Town Hall, 41 Highland Ave. on Sunday, Sept. 9 from 5-8 p.m. and Monday, Sept. 10 from 7-9 p.m. Call backs, if needed, Tuesday Sept. 11 at 7 p.m.

Cast size is four men and four women.

Performance dates will be Nov. 2, 3, 4, 9, 10, & 11 at the Cohasset Town Hall.

This hilarious comedy centers on George & Charlotte Hay, two fading repertory stars in 1950s Buffalo. They've lost their last chance at stardom, their agent is smitten with Charlotte and the company ingénue is pregnant by George. The plot is full of misunderstandings, misplaced affections and missing persons. The show premiered on Broadway starring Carol Burnett.

Email director Eric Henderson at lighthouse_kp@hotmail.com or producer Jean D at:

Pastel painter to give course in Cohasset

Throughout the ages, landscape painting has posed challenges to the visual artist. From ocean to city, artists have developed techniques to represent vast spaces, sometimes miles deep, on two-dimensional surfaces. With the right techniques, landscape paintings can create illusions, transporting viewers into atmospheres, familiar or foreign.

Colorado pastel painter Doug Dawson will travel to Cohasset to instruct a week-long workshop from September 10 through 14, designed to simplify the process of landscape painting. Using pastel as their medium, students will be taught to create the appearance of texture and depth, develop compositions, solve problems with color and more. Instructor demonstrations and individual attention guarantee a great learning experience.

Dawson's work has appeared in many exhibitions and publications. For more information about the artist, visit his Web site at dougdawsonartist.com. To register for this class, which costs $575 for the week, call 781-383-2787 or visit ssac.org.

South Shore Art Center is at 119 Ripley Road, Cohasset Village. Gallery hours are 10 a.m. to 4 p.m., Monday through Saturday, and noon to 4 p.m., on Sunday.

Seaside Road Race is set for Sept. 1

Hull Academic Support Coalition will host its annual road race on Saturday, Sept. 1. The Nantasket Seaside Road Race is a scenic 4-mile run starting at Hull High School, going along Main Street in Hull Village, along the water overlooking Boston Harbor and Hull Bay, then turning up and over Allerton Hill, back along Allerton Harbor finishing back at Hull High School. This event attracts runners from all over the Boston and South Shore area.

Nantasket Seaside Road Race begins at 8 a.m. at Hull High School, 180 Main St. Day of race registration opens at 6:30 a.m. at Hull High School and the fee is $20. T-shirts are given to all runners and walkers. An award ceremony will follow the race at the finish line at Hull High School.

Participants may call race director Kristen Evans at 781-925-2720 for more information.

Artists to depict Hingham scenes

The public is invited to stroll through the neighborhoods of Lincoln Historic District in Hingham between Thursday, Sept. 6, and Saturday, Sept. 8, to see artists capturing the beauty of the area. Many local and regional artists will be scattered throughout the district producing paintings for a silent auction Saturday evening at South Street Gallery. The gallery is sponsoring this sixth annual event titled "Paint the Square," which is a three-day plein-air painting experience. Artists to look for will include Marjorie Osborne Whorf, Dianne Panarelli Miller, Eli Cedrone, Jen Kelly, Diane Scott, Robert Beaulieu and others.

This event will take place Thursday, Friday and Saturday, and culminates with the silent auction Saturday evening at South Street Gallery, 149 South St., where interested parties may purchase some of the paintings completed over the weekend. The public is invited to view the finished paintings from 7 to 9 p.m., Sept. 8, at the gallery. Wine and hors d'oeuvres will be served. The exhibit will be on view through Sept. 21.

"This is a fantastic opportunity for people to observe art as it is being created in a beautiful local historic center," said Jack Hobbs, owner of South Street Gallery. "We encourage people from the area to stop by, see the artists painting in the square, and if they are interested in purchasing a painting at the auction, to come by. It is also a perfect excuse to take time out of hectic schedules to enjoy the simple pleasure of a stroll outdoors."

South Street Gallery hosts events showcasing local artists and offers custom framing and art restorations. Hours are 10 a.m. to 6 p.m., Monday through Saturday, noon to 5 p.m., on Sunday. For more information, call 781-749-0430 or visit southstreetgallery.com.

Regatta to fight breast cancer

The B/C Regatta and Benefit Party to fight breast cancer will take place the weekend of Sept. 7 through 9. The Regatta, at Lincoln Maritime Center at the Hingham Rotary on Saturday and Sunday, Sept. 8 and 9, will feature a children's Optimist race, where kids age 8 through 14 will sail around Hingham Harbor in a friendly competition.

The Benefit Party, at Hingham Yacht Club on Friday, Sept. 7, will cost $75 per person and feature live music, food, silent auction, cocktail reception and fun.

Anyone who can't attend any of the events can still make a gift in honor or contribute a silent auction donation. Visit bcregatta.org for more details on the event.

Fall courses offered at SSAC

South Shore Art Center is taking registrations for its fall courses and workshops for artists of all ages and abilities. Adult classes begin the week of Sept. 17 and young artist classes begin Sept. 24.

Adult courses are available in printmaking, painting, drawing, digital photography, ceramics, sculpture and mixed media, including furniture painting.

A relief printmaking workshop will be taught by School of the Museum of Fine Arts faculty member Lisa Houck on Sunday, Oct. 21.

Children's classes include pre-K mixed media classes, clay, the popular Sketchbook Club for students grades 4-7 and two levels of Art Studio for grades 6-9 and grades 10-12. Art in Action, a class for students in grades 1-4 that mixes instructors and artistic media, returns on Friday afternoons.

Visit ssac.org for a complete list of fall courses

Katrina survivors still struggling

What can we do to help?

COMMENTARY

CAROL BRITTON MEYER

After Katrina hit the community of Gulfport, Miss. in August of 2005, only cement slabs remained where most houses and businesses stood.

As I look around at the beauty of Hingham, the town so many of us call home, my thought turns to the thousands of people still left homeless in the aftermath of Hurricane Katrina.

Aug. 29 marks the two-year anniversary of this disaster, which ravaged nearly 90,000 miles of the Gulf Coast, including New Orleans. It's unthinkable and inhumane that so many are still struggling to get their lives back in order — in many cases the most vulnerable citizens who were already faced with poverty and lack. Many are still living in substandard conditions or in other states, waiting for long-promised federal and state assistance. The wait has been much too long.

On a recent visit to New Orleans, my family and I were pleased and relieved to see the comeback that the City of New Orleans has made as far as tourism goes because this is vital to its survival. But we also saw block after block, mile after mile, of outlying neighborhoods still lying in devastation.

Try to imagine what it would be like here in Hingham to experience such a widespread, far-reaching disaster. Imagine your house under eight or more feet of water, family members, pets, and cherished possessions washing away despite your desperate attempts to save them, all your hard work to make your house a home just gone. Imagine complete devastation: downed trees and power lines, roofs blown off, cars floating away, and the need to seek safety on your rooftop — because there's nowhere else to go — where you are stranded for days in the hot sun with little or no food and water or diapers or formula for your baby.

As if that weren't enough, the business where you were employed just the day before is destroyed, the bank where you have your life savings — however meager — is under water, and all the supermarkets are closed, even if you could get to them for much-needed food and water.

Imagine you and your fellow neighbors being the only ones around to patrol your neighborhood to keep it safe once the water receded or to rescue each other when there were no other resources available.

Imagine mile after mile of neighboring communities — Weymouth, Hull, Cohasset — all in the same condition and remaining so even two years later. The United States immediately sent aid to Asia during the tsunami disaster and more recently to Texas and continues its rebuilding efforts in Iraq, but where was, and where is, the help for the people of New Orleans then and now?

This wasn't a natural disaster nearly as much as it was a man-made one due to the failure of the levees. Holland's system is holding up fine. It can be done. It's also possible to restore the wetlands, which act as speed bumps during a storm, that have been lost over the years. It will take time, but it can be done.

The rebuilding effort is taking shape slowly but surely thanks to the tireless efforts of those New Orleans families and businesses who have managed to get their lives back on track despite the lack of well-deserved governmental assistance and support; the large number of young people moving into the area who want to help; and the many people who have gone to New Orleans to gut and rebuild homes. But much more is needed.

What does this have to do with those of us who are tucked away safely here in Hingham, you might ask?

The second anniversary of Katrina provides an opportunity to be grateful for all that we have, to make sure we are prepared should a hurricane hit our area, and to extend a helping hand to our fellow Americans — the people of New Orleans. You can make a donation, join a group heading there to rebuild housing, pay a visit to New Orleans to help boost the economy, contact your legislators to advocate for relief funds, or say a prayer — anything you do will help.

We can't lose the City of New Orleans and its rich culture.

Carol Britton Meyer, staff reporter for the Hingham Journal, is also a Hingham resident. The Hingham Journal is one of the Cohasset Mariner's sister newspapers.

Story of the Tuskegee Airmen

Members of the renowned Tuskegee Airmen will host a talk and video presentation titled "Red Tails: The Saga of the Tuskegee Airmen" at 7 p.m., on Oct. 5, in the Parish House of the First Parish (Unitarian-Universalist) church on Cohasset Common. Tuskegee Airman and member of the First Parish congregation, Jack Bryant, will moderate the evening's discussion. The entire community is invited to come learn how these brave, young American men broke the color barrier of the Army Air Corps some 65 years ago.

At the start of World War II the U.S. Army had rules which enforced our country's attitudes towards black Americans. They were considered unfit for combat and were generally assigned to stereotyped jobs as cooks and waiters, or were rejected completely. The Army Air Corps certainly did not let black men fly or repair airplanes. In that time of great need, such prejudices were a luxury our country could no longer afford. Afraid of disrupting morale of the fighting units, but under moral pressure and persuasion from the NAACP, the black media, some members of Congress and the White House, the War Department started a "separate but equal" training program for black aviators. This "noble experiment" produced the Tuskegee Airmen. (Excerpt from The History of the Tuskegee Airmen).

The Tuskegee Airmen overcame racism at home and abroad…by the end of World War II these African American pilots had earned respect for their air prowess. The "Red Tails" (nicknamed for the color painted on their aircraft) flew more than 15,000 combat missions and never lost a bomber during Allied escort missions over Europe. This important part of American History is a story that holds life lessons for all generations.

A lasagna meal and beverages will be served. The cover charge is $10/person, or $20 per family. Proceeds will support the Tuskegee Airmen's Scholarship Fund, which awards many thousands of dollars annually to young people across the country (all presenters and officers of this organization serve without salary or fee). This event is sponsored by the First Parish Unitarian Universalist congregation on Cohasset Common. For information call Sandy Bailey, Parish Administrator, at 781-383-1100.

CRTC Cookout set for Sept. 9

The annual Cohasset Republican Town Committee Cookout will take place at 4:30 p.m., on Sunday, Sept. 9, at Lou Harvey's home, 465 King St., Cohasset. Tickets are $25 per person and $40 per couple. After Sept. 4, tickets are $30 per person, and $45 per couple.

Featured speaker will be Peter Torkelson, chairman of the Massachusetts State GOP. Invited speakers will be "Amo" Hougton, former U.S. Congressman, 1986 to 2001, from Corning, N.Y., and Mickie Edwards, a former U.S. Congressman, 1977 to 1993, from Oklahoma. Local elected officials will also be invited to speak.

To make reservations, send checks payable to Cohasset Republican Town Committee and mail to Judy Volungis, 234 Forest Ave., Cohasset, MA 02043. Call Julie Guild, chairwoman, at 781-383-6443, or Polly Logan at 781-383-0031 for more information.

Cohasset's Maddy Altholtz wins sportsmanship award

Cited for etiquette both on and off court

By Ed Carpenter
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

Cohasset's Maddy Altholtz, who helped lead the Weymouth Club's 18-and-under intermediate tennis team to Sectional title last week (Aug. 22), was presented the Tournament's Sportsmanship Award.

The Award is presented to a player who has shown tennis etiquette both on and off the court throughout the tournament.

Regarding play on the court, Altholtz, who is the daughter of Howie Altholtz and Leila Tighe, was cited for "fair on the tennis court with out/in calls and never loses her concentration."

Off the court, "she has been a great teammate to her team, rooting on her teammates and understanding the rules of good spectatorship."

The Weymouth team defeated teams from four other New England States to win the Sectional title in Hartford.

By virtue of winning the Sectionals, the eight members of the Weymouth team have qualified for the National Junior Team Tennis Tournament that will be played Oct. 26-28 in Tucson, AZ.

"She has been a great teammate to her team, rooting on her teammates and understanding the rules of good spectatorship."
— Sportsmanship Award

This marks the first time any Weymouth Club team has qualified for the National Junior Team competition.

The following players competed in the Sectionals: Kevin Hadar and Danny Hajjar from Quincy, Roberta Bergstein from Hingham, Seth Shavers from Hyde Park, Kellie MacFarlane from Kingston, Katherine Kelley from Patriots treat high schools to high-class accommodations

By Joel Racicot
JRACICOT@CNC.COM

We knew the installation of FieldTurf at Gillette Stadium in 2006 was going to help Stephen Gostkowski, but few knew it would become the foundation for which all area high school football players would strive to be standing on come early December, not to mention a financial boon for the Massachusetts Interscholastic Athletic Association.

Since local high schools last played at Foxboro in 1990, there has been little consistency for the sites and times of the Super Bowls. Enter Bob Kraft; the Patriots endeared owner who, with a stroke of his financial and entrepreneurial wand allowed high school football into what is now hallowed football ground.

"They are paying for everything, it's a very generous act," MIAA spokesperson Paul Wetzel said. "The only thing I can tell you that he (Kraft) gets out of it is that it's a real exciting day for everybody.

"They are paying for everything, it's a very generous act."
MIAA spokesperson Paul Wetzel

"He loves this stuff he's picking up all the expenses."

That will allow for the MIAA to put the money that is normally allocated to organizing the Super Bowls into other student service programs such as leadership training, wellness and sportsmanship.

When in 2002 the sports medicine committee suggested that all playoff games be played on FieldTurf, the MIAA began scrambling to find locations. Since then, the number of FieldTurf fields around the state has grown.

The opportunity to play at Gillette arose when Bob Kraft talked to Dick Neal at the Sportsmanship Summit in 2006.

The turf wasn't even installed yet.

"With any partnership you do there is usually some benefits for both," Patriots spokesperson Stacey James said. "There will be opportunities with alumni, the Hall of Fame (at Patriots Place) honors the state champions around New England on an annual basis – it will become a big event."

The past inconsistencies will be laid to rest with the new deal at Foxboro, and so will the worries of administrators, coaches and players.

"In a way the perennial teams that are at the top or win the league consistently will know what to expect and can plan ahead," Wetzel said. "In the past it puts a little burden on the school, say you win on Tuesday (playoffs) then you have (only a few days) to figure out where you are going to play.

"It's more consistent for the staff and schools."

According to Wetzel, this is just the beginning of what he and the MIAA hope becomes a strong partnership between themselves and the Patriots organization.

"It's really exciting," Wetzel said. "Everything you know about that organization, we are seeing an example of it."

JOEL RACICOT

0 "A job on a newspaper is a special thing. Every day you take something that you found out about, and you put it down and in a matter of hours it becomes a product. Not just a product like a can or something. It is a personal product that people, a lot of people, take the time to sit down and read." – Jimmy Breslin

Becoming a sports writer has been a natural progression for me. In my life, sports and writing have gone hand in hand. At Scituate High School I played sports and wrote papers. At Northeastern University I played sports (intramurals) and wrote papers.

Long before that I watched the NBA's Greatest Games and Dazzling Dunks and Basketball Bloopers on VHS on a daily basis. My parents wouldn't buy me Nintendo, so I was thrust into a world where the comedy team of Marv Albert and Frank Layden seemed admissible.

Afterward I usually proceeded to the court where my two older brothers made a point of beating me until I could return the favor when my height reached my basketball intellect some years later.

Around this time, I also managed to meet Larry Bird at the Harp in North Station, shake Red Auerbach's hand at a Bullets game, and grab Magic Johnson's attention during a Celtics-Lakers preseason game, where the aforementioned Laker star flashed his renowned smile and gave me a wave after some youthful-pleading.

I spent my Saturday mornings with Captain Crunch, Garfield and Dick Schaap. You can have Around the Horn; I'll take The Sports Reporters any day.

Those days probably piqued my interest in sports. My daily struggles with long division during that time, coupled with my enjoyment for the English language, probably piqued my interest in writing.

Which brings me to my new position as sports editor for Scituate, Norwell, Cohasset and Pembroke, a position I am happy to currently hold.

This should be fun.

I grew up in Scituate, and recently substitute taught in Cohasset. During college I interned here at Community Newspaper Company, for The Patriot Ledger, and at WLVI 56.

During that time I covered Friday night football, state championship basketball and interviewed the former Ambassador to the Vatican. I also covered cross country teams that hadn't won a meet, lacrosse teams that were still junior varsity level, and a pair of snowed in goats, with the same vigor as all the rest.

Most recently I wrote for the Taunton, Raynham and Lakeville Calls, as well as the Bridgewater Independent, the East Bridgewater Star and the West Bridgewater Times.

I enjoyed my time there. Those towns are home to some great athletic programs. Nobody told me that softball at Taunton High School was akin to football at Hoover High School. I was pleasantly surprised, and I'm sure the same will happen here.

I look forward to seeing the established programs in Scituate, Cohasset and Norwell as well as

U16 Mass Premiere Soccer Lady Crusaders advance to USL Super Y National Playoffs

Special to the Mariner

Mass Premiere Soccer's Under-16 Lady Crusaders victory over rival Blackwatch Rhode Island, brought its record to a perfect 12-0, and capped a brilliant season. Having already clinched a playoff berth in the United Soccer Leagues' Super Y-League North American Finals Tournament, the Lady Crusaders were determined to complete the season as the dominant undefeated Northeast Super Y Division Champions.

The Northeast Division is comprised of elite soccer clubs from metro New York, the six New England states and Eastern Canada. The Super Y-League North American Finals is a five-day tournament held in Tampa, Florida that determines the league's national champions.

"We knew we had something special in this team during winter training, we just didn't know how special," said coach Darren Gallagher. "This is our first (MPS) team to go undefeated in their regional league. They never flustered, even in the few times we found ourselves behind in the game. Leaving the field with a tie was unacceptable to them and a loss was out of the question."

The roster is made up of very talented high school players from across the South Shore, South Coast and Cape Cod, who have been playing together as a team for the past three years. Individually, they have all developed strong resumes playing for their own high school squads. Collectively, they have meshed into a technically sound, tactically efficient force on the club soccer scene.

Norwell, and Maddy Altholtz from Cohasset.

The team trophy was awarded based on the total number of games won by the eight players during the two-day tournament.

The Weymouth players took 140 games, while the team from Maine was runner-up with 126 games. Connecticut was third with 114 points followed by Vermont (101) and New Hampshire (71).

Matches were held in five divisions: girls and boys singles, girls and boys doubles, and mixed doubles.

Weymouth qualified for the Sectionals by winning the State title that was played the week-end of Aug. 11th. Playing on the State championship team were Yee, Hadar, Hajjar, Shavers, MacFarlane, Kelley, and Altholtz. In addition, Milton's Megan Campos and Milton's Max Staffa were also on the victorious team. However, because of conflict, neither was able to play in Hartford. In their place, Bergstein, who did not play in the State tournament, joined the others in Hartford.

SPORTS NOTES

Deutsche Bank Championship

Aug. 28 to Sept. 3, the top names in professional golf including defending champion Tiger Woods, Phil Mickelson, Vijay Singh, Ernie Els and Sergio Garcia are all scheduled to appear at the 2007 Deutsche Bank Championship, one of four PGA TOUR Playoff events, at TPC Boston, 400 Arnold Palmer Blvd., Norton. The tournament features four rounds of championship golf preceded by practice rounds and pro-am tournaments. This year's Championship is part of the inaugural PGA TOUR Playoffs for the FedExCup, a four-tournament post-season playoff in which the top PGA Tour golfers will compete for the single-largest payout in sports, a $10 million first prize. Aug. 28, Deutsche Bank Boston Red Sox Legends and Friends Pro-Am, 7:30-5 p.m.

Aug. 29, Professional practice rounds, 8 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Aug. 29, Deutsche Bank Championship Kids Exhibition, 2-3 p.m.

Aug. 30, Championship Pro-Am Competition, 6:30 a.m. to 7 p.m.

Aug. 31-Sept. 1, Championship rounds 1 and 2, 6:30 a.m. to 7 p.m.

Sept. 2-3, Championship rounds 3 and 4, 7:30 a.m. to 7 p.m.

The Tiger Woods Foundation is the primary beneficiary of the Deutsche Bank Championship. In 2006, the Championship successfully reached its fundraising goal and raised a record $2.6 million for the Tiger Woods Foundation and New England charities. Since its inaugural 2003 event, the Deutsche Bank Championship has raised a total of $7 million for charity.

Pro-Am and practice round tickets are $25; championship round tickets are $45. Multi-day packages are also available. Tickets may be purchased at www.dbchampionship.com or by calling 1-877-TIX-4DBC.

Synchro skating at Armstrong Arena

Synchronized skating consists of a group of eight or more figure skaters, all skating on the ice at one time. They work together as one unit. A synchronized skating team performs a program set to music. The 2007/2008 beginner level synchro skating team, the Ice Pops, will be starting its training program in September. The team is currently looking to add new figure skaters to their roster. Emphasis is on having fun with skaters while learning the basic skills of synchro skating. Ice Pop team members are aged 6-12. If you are interested in finding out more information, call Margot Marino at 508-746-2561. At Armstrong skating rink in Plymouth.

Outlaws have work cut out for them

Another shutout victory puts them at 3-3 for the year

By David Wolcott
DWOLCOTT@CNC.COM

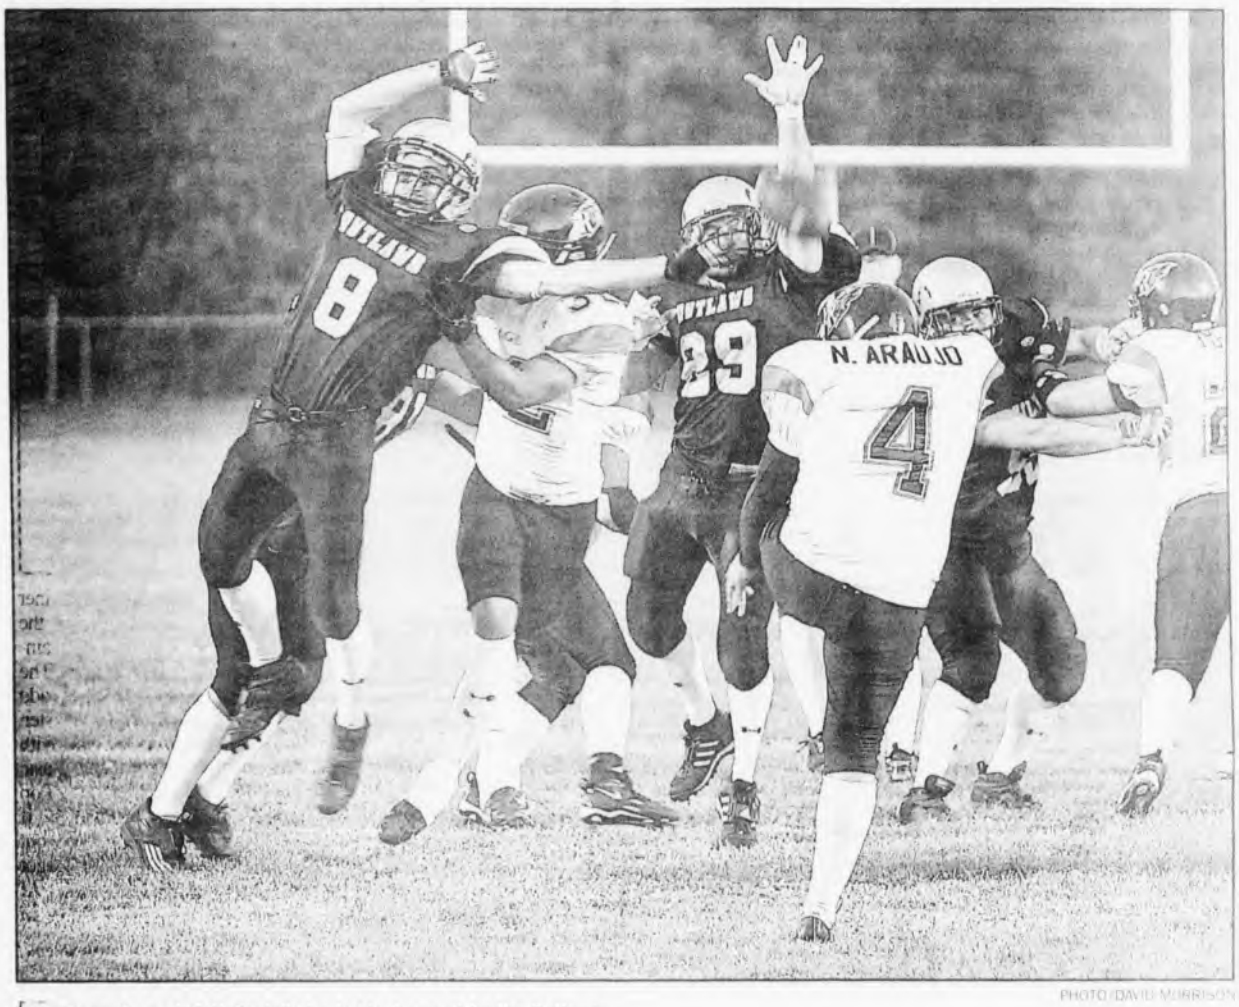
Consecutive shutout victories have started to fill a hole the South Shore Outlaws put themselves in with their 1-3 beginning to the season. But Outlaws head coach Greg Townsend emphasized after Saturday night's 30-0 win over the Eastern Maine Warriors there was still a great deal work left to be done for the squad to get back into the playoff picture.

"We've dug ourselves into a hole where we have three league contests in the four games we have left and I don't think we have any other option than winning all three of them," Townsend said. "We started a little slow, so we're going to have to win out to get to where we want to be. That'll get us to the dance. Once we get to the playoffs I think we can be a dangerous team to face."

The defensive effort of the Outlaws has been the story of the season, but the last two weeks the squad has shown the balance it'll need to be successful with a pair of strong ground-based offensive efforts. An offense that was sputtering through the early part of the season finally seems to have found its legs.

"Sometimes it takes a little while for an offense to come together and find a rhythm," Townsend said. "A successful offense is all about repetition and practice and sometimes at the semiprofessional level it takes a couple weeks into the season until all the parts start moving together in the same direction."

The suddenly potent offense put the Outlaws on top in quick fashion. On the first play of their second drive of the game first-year quarterback Matt Letourneau (Brockton) froze the Warriors defense with a nifty play fake. He found Anthony White (Kingston) streaking down the sideline all alone in the secondary for a 60-yard scoring strike at the 4:53 mark of the first quarter. John Carpenter (Plymouth) knocked home the extra point for an early 7-0 lead.



Off the ensuing kickoff the Warriors started at their own 21-yard line only to go backward from there. A false start put them back five yards to start the drive and then losses on consecutive plays left them with a third down and a mile to go at their own 3-yard line. Things went from bad to worse on the next play when the ball was left on the ground and Hank Anderson (Duxbury) recovered the ball to put the Outlaws on top 14-0.

Running back Luis Gonzalzes (13 carries, 47 yards) did the bulk of the damage the next time the Outlaws had the football, helping to engineer a 14-play drive that culminated in his two-yard scoring run midway through the second quarter. Carpenter's extra-point attempt failed, but the 20-0 lead was looking pretty safe.

The lead got even safer in the last minute before the break when Letourneau connected with Kyrell Wooten (Brockton) on a 21-yard scoring strike to extend the lead out to 27-0. South Shore added to the lead thanks to a 40-yard field goal from the foot of Russ Valez (Taunton).

A long Warrior completion put the shutout in jeopardy in the final minute of the game. Eastern Maine got all the way down to the Outlaws 12-yard-line, but Brian Rezendes (Plymouth) kept the shutout in tact by picking off a pass at the goal line with time running out in the game.

"The key about the way we play defense is that everyone on the field can run. From the guys in the secondary to the big guys up on the line, every one of them can runs above-average for a person of their size," Townsend said. "We play an attack style of defense and take pride in the fact that everyone we put onto the field will be running to the football. We know there are things that can hurt us on defense so we try our best to make up for whatever we might lack with speed and determination."

soccer players, and South Shore League All-Stars, Sarah Coggins and Maggie McGoldrick, worked in tandem to secure the midfield and anchor a formidable defense on a team that surrendered just six goals while scoring 38 goals in the 12 game season.

The team now breaks ranks and returns to their respective schools. In many cases, they look forward to playing each other on the high school soccer pitch. At the conclusion of the high school season in November they will reassemble as the Lady Crusaders, travel to Tampa and tackle a challenging championship bracket playing against teams from the Pacific West, the Midwest and the Southeast regions.

The park is at the intersection of Nantasket and Samoset avenues, across from Lucky Star Restaurant. Free parking is available at Hull Redevelopment Authority in the adjacent lot. Concertgoers should bring their own seating. Performances will be canceled in case of rain.

Obituaries

Barbara Spooner-Wey

Career reflected love of helping others

Barbara Spooner-Wey, 65, of Scituate, formerly of Cohasset, died Aug. 11, 2007, after a courageous battle with pancreatic cancer.

Born in Mount Vernon, N.Y., Mrs. Spooner-Wey graduated from the University of Wisconsin in 1965. She raised her family in the Chicago area before moving to Cohasset in 1978.

Her varied career reflected her love of assisting others. Some of the organizations that she was affiliated with include St. John's Nursery School in Hingham, Cohasset Chapter of AFS International Exchange Program, the Deaf and Hard of Hearing Program at Hayden School in Dorchester, Citizens Bank in Quincy and the South Shore Therapeutic Riding Program in Pembroke.

Mrs. Spooner-Wey had an adventuresome and generous spirit. She enjoyed kayaking, traveling, hiking and sailing with family and friends. Her determined will and positive attitude allowed her to enjoy these activities until shortly before her death.

Barbara Spooner-Wey

Those who knew her recall her support and concern for others.

Family was paramount to her, and she never missed an opportunity to speak about her daughters and grandchildren or to participate in their activities.

She leaves her husband, George C. Wey; her daughters, Vicki Spooner Dunn of Rockville, Md., and Cindy Spooner of Germantown, Md.; a brother, William Hack of Mastic Beach, N.Y.; her grandchildren, Danny and Jane; stepchildren, Jonathan Wey, Matthew and Jenny Wey, and David Wey, all of Tampa, Fla.; and her former husband, Alex Spooner of Hull.

Interment was private.

Memorial donations may be made to Massachusetts General Hospital, Dr. Blaszkowsky's Pancreatic Fund, Development Office, 165 Cambridge St., Suite 600, Boston, MA 02114-9731.

Richard B. Colburn

Retired from MWRA

Richard B. Colburn, 68, of Cohasset, died Tuesday, Aug. 28, 2007, at Hebrew Rehabilitation Center in Roslindale following a long illness.

He was born in Buffalo, N.Y., a son of Kathleen (Keeler) Colburn of Venice, Fla., and the late Harry S. Colburn. He received his bachelor of science degree in accounting from Canisius College and attained a certified public accountant designation.

After a career in public accounting and corporate finance, Mr. Colburn joined the Massachusetts Water Resource Authority. He retired from the MWRA as assistant treasurer in 2002.

Mr. Colburn was a member of Cohasset Rotary Club. He was an avid sports fan rooting for the Buffalo Bills and the Boston Red Sox.

He leaves his wife of 49 years, Nancy (Gaudet) Colburn; his mother; six children, Kevin Colburn of Stamford, Conn., Colleen Adams and her husband, Tim, of Medway, Jeff Colburn and his wife, Kim, of South Windsor, Conn., Elizabeth Moraites and her husband, Nicholas, of Medford, Christopher Colburn and his wife, Judith, of Downingtown, Pa., and Kathleen Cote and her husband, Peter, of Attleboro; his brother Harry S Colburn Jr. of Venice, Fla., and 12 grandchildren.

A funeral Mass will be celebrated at 10 a.m., on Friday, Aug. 31, at St. Anthony Church, Cohasset. Arrangements are by McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Home, Cohasset.

In lieu of flowers, memorial donations may be made to National MS Society, Central New England, 101A First Ave., Suite 6, Waltham, MA 02451 or Hebrew Rehabilitation Center, 1200 Centre St., Boston, MA 02131.

FOCUS ON HIGHER EDUCATION

READY FOR ANYTHING AT MASS. MARITIME

Now offering master's degree in emergency management

By Kristine Esdale
MASSACHUSETTS MARITIME ACADEMY

Massachusetts Maritime Academy in Buzzards Bay is pleased to announce the launch of its Master of Science in Emergency Management degree program.

The goal of the program is to provide graduates with the knowledge and tools to be successful emergency managers in the public and private sectors. The program's graduates will gain the problem-solving capabilities to prepare for, respond to, recover from and mitigate disasters and emergencies.

The program provides a multi-disciplinary approach requiring a core set of courses needed to address issues common to virtually all hazards, and other courses addressing special topics including public health and transportation security.

The field of emergency management is a growth area, as recognized by the chancellor of the Massachusetts Board of Higher Education, Patricia Plummer, Ph.D.

"There is a tremendous demand for professional emergency managers in all sectors of the economy," she noted. "Massachusetts Maritime Academy built the Master of Science in Emergency Management to address this need by providing students with the knowledge and skills necessary to mitigate and prepare for disasters as well as to ensure continuity of operations in the face of any and all hazards."

The degree is offered in an 18-month executive format. The 34-credit, 10-course program will be presented one course at a time, and each course will run for a six-week period. Classes will be held every other weekend beginning Friday evening and ending Saturday afternoon.

Modeled after the Academy's successful Master of Science in Facilities Management degree, the course will be based in Waltham at the DoubleTree Guest Suites. This site was specifically chosen in consideration of its convenience for students working in the Boston area. With overnight accommodations included in the program, students essentially have a one-way commute from work to class. Students will also visit the Massachusetts Maritime Academy campus in Buzzards Bay to take advantage of the exceptional facilities and technology, such as the emergency management simulator and specialized labs.

The degree program culminates in a four-credit capstone project. Throughout the curriculum, students will draw upon their education and experience to develop a capstone presentation specifically related to an emergency management scenario.

Why Massachusetts Maritime Academy?

No other public institution in Massachusetts offers a Master of Science in Emergency Management. In fact, the academy's recently approved B.S. in Emergency Management is one of only a few emergency management degrees offered by a public institution in Massachusetts.

As a result of the limited private and public offerings, this program is well-suited to address the need for emergency management professionals in the region.

The maritime sector continues to be one of the greatest concerns to terrorism experts. The Academy is uniquely positioned in the region to use its expertise and educate our future leaders about transportation security, and the unique domain of ships, ports and the complex and multiple disciplines involved in managing them.

Admission

To be considered for admission to the program, candidates must possess a bachelor's degree and must be capable of graduate-level study. Admissions will be based on an overall evaluation of the prospective student's application together with a personal interview.

For further information, contact the Division of Graduate & Continuing Education at 508-830-5098, by e-mail at dce@maritime.edu or visit www.maritime.edu/graduate.

Black a colorful comedian

By R. Scott Reedy
CORRESPONDENT

Lewis Black is on the telephone from a Cracker Barrel in Davenport, Iowa, to discuss his appearances this Friday at the Cape Cod Melody Tent in Hyannis and Sunday at the South Shore Music Circus in Cohasset, and that Midwestern location alone is enough to get the comic going on one of his trademark rants.

"I'm in the middle of nowhere Iowa in August and they're already selling candy corn. Halloween is 10 weeks away. I don't even know why we bother anymore when places like this are the best we can do as a society," says the stand-up comedian whose regular appearances on Comedy Central's "The Daily Show with Jon Stewart" have brought him national attention.

The country store's early on-sale date for the waxy sugar and corn syrup confection isn't the only thing getting Black's ire up these days. He's also upset about the treatment of a certain Atlantic Falcons quarterback up on federal charges of operating an illegal interstate dogfighting ring.

"The whole Michael Vick case is unbelievable. He's under federal investigation and the NFL only suspends him. Apparently, at no point can you be banned from a sport, no matter what crime you commit," says Black, who is also bothered by the media attention given to the foibles of "celebrities" like Paris Hilton and Nicole Richie. "We love to look at certain people, even if they offer us nothing worthwhile. I just don't know at what point the mainstream media will wise up and stop devoting time to people who don't deserve the attention."

Lewis Black

With a well-earned reputation for railing against the Bush administration, the 2008 Presidential race would seem ripe with material for Black. The man some call America's foremost commentator on everything sees it another way.

"I can't sink my lips into politics. It is too easy. It is like shooting fish in a barrel. There is such cynicism about Bush that people can't wait to see who might be next. It is insane that television commentators are spending so much time reporting on an election season that's a year away, but not reporting on how to get out of Iraq, or how to deal with immigration or the problems with Social Security."

A theater major at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill with a master's degree in playwriting from the Yale Drama School, Black — who turns 59 this week — believes that the issues facing America today can be traced to the current occupant of the Oval Office.

"I attribute it to leadership. It all starts at the top. If he isn't paying attention, then no one will. It is completely inept to believe that everyone else on this planet is willing to blow themselves up. They're not, and it's just crazy to think that way. We're worried about terrorists, but not about bridges. Only after a bridge collapses and lives are lost does the Federal Government decide its time to start looking at the condition of bridges."

Unlike other entertainers who feared a backlash from their fans if they did not support the President after the Sept. 11 attacks, Black — whose "The Carnegie Hall Performance" won the 2007 Grammy Award for Best Comedy Album — resumed his public chiding within months.

"There was a three-month grace period after Sept. 11, but I've been taking on Bush since that ended. When Colin Powell started with the Weapons of Mass Destruction explanation, I took the gloves off. I'm a comic and I knew there were no Weapons of Mass Destruction."

Lewis Black will be at the Cape Cod Melody Tent, 21 West Main St., Hyannis, on Aug. 31 at 8 p.m., and at the South Shore Music Circus, 130 Sohier St., Cohasset, on Sept. 2 at 7:30 p.m. For tickets and information, call 800-347-0808 or go online at melodytent.org or themusiccircus.org.

Movie review

Annie (Scarlett Johansson) and Grayer (Nicholas Art) share some play time away from the real world in a tent.

'Nanny' inanities

"The Nanny Diaries" (B)

By James Verniere
FILM CRITIC

"Bridget Jones's Diary," "The Motorcycle Diaries," "The Fashionista Diaries," "The Nanny Diaries," "Samuel Pepys' Diary." Memo to diarists: Put down the quill, pen, laptop, etc.

A frothy, fat-free "The Devil Wears Prada," "The Nanny Diaries" gives us Scarlett Johansson as Annie Braddock, attractive, recent college graduate from northeastern New Jersey who moves to the Big Apple to pursue her dream of success.

Trouble is: Annie doesn't find that fabulous, fast-tracking business job. Instead, she meets a 5th Ave. mom in Central Park, and after a whirlwind courtship by several gargoylish 5th Ave. moms, Annie takes a job with Mrs. X (Laura Linney), caring for Mr. and Mrs. X's little monster Grayer (Nicholas Art).

Once she accepts the position, Annie becomes Nanny, losing her identity and her freedom. As live-in help, Nanny has little time to herself and is even forbidden to flirt with the "Harvard Hottie" (Boston's own Chris Evans), who lives upstairs in the swank 5th Ave. building housing the, uhh, Xs.

Directed by Shari Stringer Berman and Robert Pulcini of "American Splendor" fame and based on the novelty best-seller by Emma McLaughlin and Nicola Kraus, "The Nanny Diaries" has some fun, stylistic touches, as you would expect from the people who brought comic-book artist Harvey Pekar and his world to colorful life. "American Splendor" star Paul Giamatti even returns in a smaller, but no less provocative role.

As F. Scott Fitzgerald observed, the rich really are different. In fact, they're a different species. A minor in anthropology, Annie pictures the "species" she encounters among Manhattan's movers, shakers and other Masters of the Universe, living in the sort of dioramas one finds in the Metropolitan Museum of Natural History, one of Annie's favorite haunts.

I can't tell you how tired I am of hearing diary-writer voiceovers in such movies. But "The Nanny Diaries" is pleasant and comically cartoonish, if finally shallow and predictable. Linney starts out as a variation of the Meryl Streep role in "The Devil Wears Prada," making it hard to make the switch to sympathizing with Mrs. X.

Giamatti's Mr. X is a genuine pig, and I must admit to laughing when he gives his own mother a piece of his swinish mind. As Annie's best friend, Alicia Keys is both a vision and vocal music to the ears. The little boy has the toughest role of all. Grayer is supposed to evolve from little monster to lovable tyke, and it's one of the film's issues.

Another is that "The Nanny Diaries" is a subset of "Sex and the City" minus the sex. Johannson, sporting brunette tresses, is fine. But she does not bear her heart or wounded soul in the way Renee Zellweger does so brilliantly in the "Bridget Jones" films. Moreover, after "Mary Poppins," "Jane Eyre," "The King and I" and "The Sound of Music," our movie-nanny expectations are legitimately high.

Rated PG-13. "The Nanny Diaries" contains profanities.

Aerosmith plays the Tweeter Center on Sept. 14.

Rock stars rise again

Is it just us, or does this fall music line-up sound a lot like 1988?

Fall Preview: Rock

By Eddie Shoebang

Welcome to the fall concert season, where the schedule is chock full of indie bands, established acts and groups you thought didn't exist anymore (ZZ Top at the Pavilion, anyone?).

Here's a list of what's coming to town. It's not a complete list, mainly because there are too many to mention, and Heart fans don't need to be reminded when their favorite band is in town. They can just sense it.

So fill up the gas tank, hit the ATM and remember the immortal advice of Jeremy Piven from the movie "PCU": "You're wearing the shirt of the band you're going to see? Don't be that guy."

September

The Stars Come Out: By far, the biggest news this fall is the reunion of Genesis (TD Banknorth Garden, Sept. 11, $57-$227), even though it's sans Peter Gabriel. Either way it's nice to see Phil Collins back on the stage. Don't forget Jimmy Buffet (Gillette Stadium, Sept. 8, $43.50-$128.50) and Aerosmith (Tweeter Center for the Performing Arts, Sept. 14, $49-$125). Or if you need raucous, in-you-face, country music, there's Toby Keith (Tweeter Center for the Performing Arts, Sept. 22, $36-$72). Still not happy? Fine, join the rest of the depressed at The Cure (Agganis Arena, Sept. 25, $38.50-$65.50).

For the Hip Crowd: Both the Editors (Paradise Rock Club, Sept. 6, $16.50) and Kings of Leon (Orpheum Theatre, Sept. 28, TBA) released fantastic albums this year, so definitely try to catch these rock shows. Though, if you'd rather have a low-key, lo-fi evening, then calm down with either the soft indie-rock sounds of Iron & Wine (Orpheum Theatre, Sept. 27, $22-$30) or the soulful, acoustic guitar stylings of Ben Harper & the Innocent Criminals (Orpheum Theatre, Sept. 23, $35-$50). Want to see an old friend? Suzanne Vega (Somerville Theatre, Sept. 20, $35-$40) released "Beauty & Crime" this past June. She sang "Tom's Diner," which is the song you play on your iPod when you're people-watching on a rainy day.

Do You Know Who I Am?: Okkervil River (Middle East, Sept. 25, $10) is a rare find in the music industry because their lyrics are like short stories English majors would read, but they do it with a sound that is melodic, catchy and engaging.

Hmmmm: Travel back in time to hear what rock sounded like in 1994 when Live, Collective Soul (Bank of America Pavilion, Sept. 21, $25-$40) and Hootie and the Blowfish (Hampton Beach Casino Ballroom, Sept. 15, $39.50) take the stage. Oh, and I keep forgettin' about Michael McDonald (Bank of American Pavilion, Sept. 22, $23.50-$60) so it's good that he pops up from time to time.

October

The Stars Come Out: Maroon 5 (TD Banknorth Garden, Oct. 15, $38-$48) continues to give us infectious alt-pop tunes that you love for a week and then hate after the radio overplays them. Shooter Jennings (Paradise Rock Club, Oct. 14, $15) had one infectious country tune in "4th of July," but the rest of his music is more of the outlaw country kind.

For the Hip Crowd: Get your tickets for The National (Roxy, Oct. 6, $18) now. This band released the best album of the year with "Boxer" and will probably be playing bigger venues in the future. Alt-country artist and "Grey's Anatomy" enthusiast Brandi Carlile (Orpheum Theatre, Oct. 5, $21.50-$25) returns to Boston for the third time this year while and Spoon (Roxy, Oct. 17, $20) will make the hipsters dance with their rhythmic, atmospheric rock. And watching hipsters dance is entertainment in itself.

Do You Know Who I Am?: Rather see hipsters scared? Check out Queens of the Stone Age (Orpheum Theatre, Oct. 12, $35), one of the only true hard rock bands left with their chest thumping bass and their ear-ringing guitars.

Hmmmm: Please, do NOT expect the reincarnation of the Smashing Pumpkins (Orpheum Theatre, Oct 13, 15-16, $39.50-$59.50) to play your old favorites. They released a new album "Zeitgeist" and only Corgan and drummer Jimmy Chamberlin are back. Also returning to the stage to ignore her old hits is Sinead O'Connor (Orpheum Theatre, Oct. 22, TBA), which is both surprising and scary, especially since the tour will be backing her new album "Theology."

November

The Stars Come Out: Twice just isn't enough for the tantric Sting and company since The Police (TD Banknorth Garden, Nov. 11, $55-$375) will be returning after two Fenway shows in the summer. For those who think the Police are those guys who stop you for speeding, there's American Idol finalist Elliot Yamin (Roxy, Nov. 24, $22). But seriously, do yourself a favor and get a Police album, if you haven't.

For the Hip Crowd: Another group that keeps going is Tegan and Sara (Berklee Performance Center, Nov. 21, $25), Canadian identical twins who have been recording and touring since 1995. Though you may need to hit eBay or Craigslist for tickets since this show may already be sold out. If you're a fan, you know why.

Do You Know Who I Am?: The self-conscious irony of rock outfit Electric Six (Middle East, Nov. 14, $12) is immediately likable and almost impossible to describe. This band puts just as much effort into their live show as they do to their album

Hmmmm: Battles (Paradise Rock Club, Nov. 11, TBA) is a UK indie-rock band that emerged this year thanks to their atmospheric, post-punk sound that seemed to take everyone by surprise. It's instrumental music with minimal, but intelligent lyrics.

New Releases

"THE KING OF KONG: A FISTFUL OF QUARTERS" (B+)

It's a geek smackdown. The gamer's David-and-Goliath, this documentary pits an unemployed father and husband against the Elvis of Donkey Kong for the highest Donkey Kong score. Excited yet? Meet Billy Mitchell, oddly coiffed chicken-wing-hot-sauce entrepreneur and King of Kong, an arcade gamer whose 1982 high score of 800,000-plus has stood for two decades. Now, meet Steve Wiebe, 37, a former ace pitcher who choked in the big game, Donkey Kong contender and ne'er-do-well father of two, including a son, who in one scene pitifully screams, "Stop playing Donkey Kong!" (Rated PG-13)

Mr. Bean's (Rowan Atkinson) dream comes true when he finally makes it to the French Riviera in "Mr. Bean's Holiday."

"MR. BEAN'S HOLIDAY" (A)

Summer's most delightful surprise, "Mr. Bean's Holiday," is a virtually silent comedy starring Rowan Atkinson's irascible, foolhardy, infuriatingly obnoxious but sweet Mr. Bean. With a nod to Charlie Chaplin and Jacques Tati's similarly silent 1950s classic, "Mr. Hulot's Holiday," "Mr. Bean's Holiday" proves that comedy can be sublimely funny — enchanting, even — while never being stupid. (Rated PG) — Stephen Schaefer

"THE NANNY DIARIES" (B)

A frothy, fat-free "The Devil Wears Prada," "The Nanny Diaries" gives us Scarlett Johansson as Annie Braddock, attractive, recent college graduate who moves to the Big Apple to pursue her dream of success. Trouble is: Annie doesn't find that fabulous, fast-tracking business job. Instead, she meets a 5th Avenue mom in Central Park, and after a whirlwind courtship by several gargoyle-ish Upper East Side mothers, Annie takes a job with Mrs. X (Laura Linney), caring for Mr. and Mrs. X's little monster, Grayer (Nicholas Art). Some nice moments, but in the end, it's shallow and predictable. (Rated PG-13)

Ongoing

"12:08 EAST OF BUCHAREST" (A-)

It's the anniversary of the 1989 "revolution" ousting Communist dictator Nikolae Ceausescu in Romania. But was there a genuine revolution or did some Romanians merely crawl out from under their rocks only after they had heard Ceausescu had fled in the night in his chopper? This is the question no-budget, talk-show host Virgil Jderescu (Teodor Corban) wants answered, and the answers he gets offer an amusingly Kafkaesque glimpse into Eastern European politics. (Not Rated)

Quiet zone gets preliminary OK

No whistles to blow for Greenbush

Each town will need to submit a notice of Quiet Zone Establishment once all safety measures are installed on the line.

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Although Cohasset residents have been hearing the lonesome horn of the test trains for the last few weeks as the MBTA readies the Greenbush line for commuter service, it looks like the timeless whistling won't be around for very long. The five Greenbush communities, Braintree, Weymouth, Hingham, Cohasset and Scituate, have received preliminary approval for a quiet zone.

In a letter to Hingham's Town Administrator Charles Cristello, who has been the point man for the quiet zone process for the Greenbush towns, the Federal Railroad Administration (FRA) certified the application contains the elements required under the federal regulations. A final piece, grade crossing inventory forms, will need to be submitted once available.

"The FRA takes no exception to the analysis used to derive estimates of effectiveness for the proposed Alternative Safety Measures," states the

Farmer's Market is a common favorite

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

The Cohasset Farmer's Market is no longer a place just to buy locally grown vegetables and produce, it is the place to be on Thursday afternoon.

"It's become more of a social event," says Anna Abbruzzese, one of five Farmer's Market organizers. In its 16th summer, the weekly happening is perennially crowded with families, children, senior citizens and everyone in between from Cohasset and beyond.

This year's Farmer's Market season, which runs from mid-June to mid-October, opened up the venue to handmade crafts. The move has led to a more diverse group of vendors, but vendors must is still meet specific criteria to sell their goods on Cohasset Common. The item being sold must be "homegrown" or "homemade." The Cohasset Farmer's Market Committee must approve the vendor and the product. The approved vendors peddle their goods and socialize with customers.

First day success

School starts year off right

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Cohasset Schools successfully welcomed back its students on Tuesday with little problems.

Superintendent of Schools Denise Walsh greeted students at all three schools during the first day of school.

"It was fun to see those little faces [at Osgood] getting off the bus," said Walsh. She received smiles of excitement and scores of high fives from the returning students.

"It was a very smooth opening," said Walsh, "it's a credit to our administrators and our teachers who have been working very hard."

In fact, school started last week for teachers as they returned to the building on both Wednesday and Thursday to set up classrooms, attend professional development workshops and meet with some textbook publishers.

"Having the teachers in the week before really helps us prepare for opening," she said.

Walsh is still getting the enrollment numbers from the first day of school and kindergarteners did not start until Thursday morning. Before school projections approximated 1500 students attending the three Cohasset schools.

Despite the numbers, Walsh said the school buildings are fit to accommodate all the students comfortably now and for the foreseeable future.

"The ample space is a credit to the School Building Committee and its vision," said Walsh.

Avalon working with DEP

Seeks access to Whitney Woods

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Like everything with the proposed Avalon project, things seem to get delayed.

The latest delay on the project is Avalon has not filed a response to their Department of Environmental Protection notice of non-compliance issued in late June. However, the report is in progress and the DEP has seen a "good faith effort" by Avalon to file within the 60-day deadline.

Following a site audit in April, the DEP issued a Notice of Non-compliance for the prospective Avalon site which is on 62 acres on the west side of Route 3A. The notice came as a result of a DEP audit performed on the Avalon property in April and outlined certain tests, analysis and reporting that needed to be completed in the next 60 days, or by Aug. 20.

Although the 60-day deadline has passed, the DEP says they have seen a "good faith effort" by the developer to respond to the problems found in the audit, said Theresa Barao of the DEP Public Affairs office in Lakeville. In order to comply with the notice of non-compliance, Avalon is seeking access to the neighboring down gradient property. The property, Whitney Thayer Woods, is owned by the Trustees of Reservations. Avalon sent a letter to the Trustees seeking access to perform tests on the soil, but have yet to hear back, according to Barao.

"We know they are making a good faith effort and we're willing to meet with them," said Barao. Although the deadline has passed, it is unlikely Avalon will face fines or penalties at this time, she said.

Scott Dale, Avalon Vice President of development, said Avalon has already completed a substantial amount of additional testing on the site. He foresees a post-audit completion statement describing Avalon's findings within the next 30 days.

"Based on the testing done so far we've confirmed what we already knew. There's been no data inconsistent with what we know and have collected in the past," said Dale, "we don't anticipate any surprises."

Avalon seeks access to Whitney Thayer Woods to perform both groundwater and soil testing, "it's taken longer than anticipated," said Dale, but they are communicating their schedule to the DEP as they proceed.

"We want to make sure we do a thorough job," said Dale.

"We will break ground as soon as permits are finalized and ready to go."
— Scott Dale, Avalon

Upon filing the post-audit completion statement will be reviewed by the DEP. The DEP can either agree with the findings and information or request additional information, said Barao.

The notice of non-compliance outlines four areas where the Avalon site was in violation for DEP requirements, including not adequately defining the nature and extent of contamination of the site, especially in terms of seep/surface water and shallow soil.

Webb-Norfolk Conveyor, an airport conveyor belt manufacturer, occupied the site from 1975 to 1995. The DEP's audit report stated Webb-Norfolk had a "long history of oil and hazardous materials use marked by poor storage and disposal practices," citing several DEP violations over the years.

The Water Commission requested the audit in the early spring out of its long concern hazardous contamination remained on the site from the prior owners.

Avalon still has several hurdles to overcome before breaking ground. The development received a groundwater discharge permit from the DEP, but last month the Water Commission has appealed it. Avalon is also seeking a tie-in to the town sewer system. That issue is still before the Housing Appeals Committee, but Dale said he expects a "favorable decision" before the end of the year.

"We will break ground as soon as permits are finalized and ready to go," said Dale.

The Avalon project was issued a comprehensive permit from the ZBA for 200 apartments more than three years ago. It was approved as a 40-B project. Under Chapter 40B, a state law, a town's zoning board can approve affordable housing developments under flexible rules if at least 20-25 percent of the units have long-term affordability restrictions. Towns that are under the 10 percent threshold of their housing stock deemed as affordable by state standards are vulnerable to 40-B projects.

The 35-year-old driver of a 2007 Chevrolet Corvette blamed unfamiliarity with the area, the odd angle of the grade crossing, and poor road markings as the reason he veered off North Main Street and drove about 20 feet down the railroad tracks by Woodside Cemetery last week.

The incident occurred at about 8:15 p.m. last Thursday (Aug. 30). Police say it is the third such accident at that location.

The sports car, which is owned by a Wrentham woman but was being driving by a 35-year-old Mansfield man, was still drivable but may have sustained some damage to the undercarriage. It was pulled off the tracks by a flatbed tow truck, police said. The driver and a male passenger were not injured.

The men, who had just been fishing, were traveling northbound on North Main Street toward Hingham when they passed through the grade crossing and got confused by the fog lines and road markings.

Sgt. William Quigley said police notified the MBTA to stop service because there would be emergency personnel on the tracks. Greenbush, which is slated to start commuter service next month, is considered a live rail line. Police have an MBTA number they can call in emergency situations.

Alcohol was not involved in the accident; the operator passed field sobriety tests, police said.

Police and emergency personnel were tied up at the scene for about an hour.

The prior two accidents at that grade crossing involved a northbound vehicle and a southbound vehicle.

(For details about proposed changes at the grade crossing, read this week's Making Tracks.)

Deer blamed in car accident

In another Greenbush-related mishap, a 26-year-old Cohasset man who had turned onto lower King Street from Route 3A, looked up and saw a deer; he veered to avoid hitting the animal and hit the curbing in the island at the railroad grade crossing. The accident, which occurred at about 9:30 p.m. on Wed. (Aug. 28), resulted in extensive damage to his 1995 Ford Taurus; the front, left tire was ripped off, police said. The air bags deployed and the driver had what appeared to be minor facial injuries and was treated at the scene by the Cohasset Fire Department.

No citations were issued. The car had to be towed from the scene.

Road rage

A woman called police on her cell phone to report that a man in front of her had exited his black 2005 Ford pickup at the lights at routes 228 and 3A and banged on her window. She also reported that he banged on the window of the car behind hers.

Police said the incident occurred just before 3 p.m. on Wed. (Aug. 29). The caller reported the man was headed toward Cohasset; she provided police with a description of the truck and the plate number and stayed on the phone into Cohasset.

Police stopped the pickup at Route 3A and Pond Street and the female caller continued on her way. Police identified the driver of the pickup as a 48-year-old Cohasset resident. The man claimed he banged on her window because she had been tailgating him. He denied banging on the windows of the other car.

Police told the victim her recourse was through Hingham police because the incident had occurred in Hingham.

Cohasset police issued the pickup driver with two civil citations totaling $70 in fines, including having no license in his possession and improper display of plates (he only had one plate on the truck).

Police explained the Registry of Motor Vehicles could conduct hearings if it is determined that a motorist has anger-management problems.

Change taken

Police are investigating the reported theft of about $600 in change from a Beechwood Street home. A 21-year-old man, who lives with his grandparents, was having a few friends over and it appears that during that small party someone took the container of change from a bedroom.

Investigators are looking at a list of who was there that event. The incident was reported at 8:20 a.m. on Tuesday (Aug. 27).

Dogs damage car

A walk-in to the police station last week reported that two unleashed dogs ran up to his 2006 Mercury sedan on Smith Place and scratched the driver's side door and passenger door. The dogs, a boxer-type dog and a small white dog, were apparently trying to "get at" his dog that was in the car, the resident told police. The incident was reported at about 5:18 p.m. on Monday (Aug. 26). Police said the Animal Control Officer is trying to get "both sides" together to try to come up with a resolution which could include some restitution.

Kayaks stolen

An Atlantic Avenue homeowner returned from vacation to discover that two of his four kayaks were missing. He called police at about 6:30 p.m. on Thursday (Aug. 30) to report the theft.

The kayaks were chained to a fence near the water's edge. One of the missing kayaks is a red ocean-style kayak and the other is a yellow, shell-style. Both are two-seaters.

There has been a series of kayak thefts in recent months in Cohasset and area towns. Detectives are investigating.

Skateboard taken

A 15-year-old told police that his $140 Flip Deck skateboard was missing when he came out of Tedeschi's in the Village last week. The incident occurred at about 6 p.m. on Tuesday (Aug. 27). Police searched the area but to no avail and will be reviewing the surveillance tapes to see who was down there, police said.

Glove and hat, found

A Sohier Street resident, who maintains a well-groomed yard, discovered a fleece-style glove and a baseball cap in his backyard. He reported the matter to police because the items had not been there earlier and he was concerned that someone may have been trespassing. The incident was reported at about 11 a.m. on Friday (Aug. 31).

Little Harbor large home review heats up

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

A large home site plan review heated up to a fever pitch on Wednesday night ending with a pound of the gavel by Chairman Al Moore. Emotions ran high as the neighbors shared concerns over what effect the proposed home at 18 Little Harbor Road would have on the small neighborhood.

The developers presented revised plans comparing the proposed home footprint to the footprint of the direct abutters. They argued from a footprint perspective, the proposed home is not much larger than the abutting structures. Surrounding homes' footprints ranged from 2300 square feet to 3000 square feet, while 18 Little Harbor Road was proposed on a footprint just over 3300 square feet.

Although the footprint of the proposed house fit in with the sizes in the neighborhood, neighbors were more concerned with the height and size of the structure.

"The rear of the house appears domineering," said a neighbor on Nichols Road, in back of the proposed home. Another neighbor described the home as a "monster house" being planted in a small neighborhood with more modest homes.

Property owner and developer, Douglas Karo, said the proposed home is 4400 square feet, 300 square feet below the average size of recently constructed homes in Cohasset.

Nathaniel Palmer of 9 Little Harbor Road asked whether the architect of the home had ever been to the site or even to Cohasset. Karo replied in the negative. The majority of new homes built in Cohasset were custom homes "with some appreciation of the surrounding area," said Palmer.

"We have to live with this house for the rest of our lives, this is our neighborhood," said Palmer, whereas for Karo the house is a commercial transaction, "it's a house somebody built because they could — not because they should."

Later in the meeting, Karo said he believed the house did fit into the neighborhood in architectural style. The house will be shingle style with a farmer's porch and a shingle roof. He explained the reason he chose this design was partly because the four rooflines break up the look of the house from the street.

Concerns over how the height (the developer says it is 32.5 feet off the ground, well within the 35 foot height restriction zoning bylaw) was measured and if it was an accurate height. Building height is measured from one point within 10 feet of the foundation to the midpoint of the roof rafters. Building Inspector Bob Egan said the height should be taken from pre-construction land.

Despite the neighbors' objections to the look of proposed home, Chairman Al Moore said there was little the Planning Board could do to prevent the large home from being built.

"People have a right to build what they want to build, if it fits into zoning bylaws," Moore explained the board was not in a position to review a house and deny it based on looks, "we are not arbiters of taste."

The Planning Board is there to ensure new development does not adversely affect surrounding properties and to that end, Moore said the site's drainage was a pivotal issue.

To mitigate roof runoff, the developers will install a system of six dry wells, or a "cultec" system, to collect roof runoff during rain events to the west of the proposed house. The analysis prepared by the engineer for the developer, Greg Tansey of Ross Engineering, concluded the proposed drainage system would reduce the peak flow and volume of stormwater discharged off site during significant rain events compared to current runoff. In addition, Karo said he plans to loam and seed the backyard to "act as a sponge" for stormwater. Previously, the yard was filled with vegetation and trees.

Rear abutter Alfred Slanetz of 14 Nichols Road is concerned about impact to his property that has long suffered from water running down the adjacent property. An earthen berm between the two properties holds water in a catch basin on the rear of the Karo's property.

Moore requested the applicant bring forth soil analysis for the proposed dry well site as well as take a second look at the height with Building Inspector Egan. In the final decision there will likely be conditions concerning landscape, said Moore.

When Moore suggested the public hearing be continued until the next Planning Board meeting on Sept. 19, the developer and his counsel asked if the hearing could be closed and the requests be conditions.

Shortly after, member Stuart Ivimey got in a brief argument with a member of the audience and a proponent of the large home. After some heated back and forth between Ivimey and the member of the audience, Moore brought the issue to a close with a pound of the gavel; the hearing would be continued until Sept. 19.

letter from Jo Strang, the FRA's Associate Administrator for Safety. The FRA determined the implementation of the application's outlined safety measures will result in a risk level at or below the risk present if there were horns sounding.

Each town will need to submit a notice of Quiet Zone Establishment once all safety measures are installed on the line. At a recent Board of Selectmen meeting, the board gave Town Manager Bill Griffin the authority to move forward in notifying the FRA when appropriate.

Tom Gruber, Special Assistant to the Town Manager for Greenbush Affairs, said the MBTA has been cognizant of quiet zone design standards as they planned the line. From the time he got involved in the Greenbush mitigation agreement for the town in the late 90s, it was understood the rail line was meant to be a quiet zone.

However, the request for a quiet zone must come from the communities, not from the rail line who, in this case, is the MBTA.

Examples of additional safety engineering improvements that may be necessary to reduce the risk of collisions include: medians on one or both sides of the tracks to prevent a motorist from driving around a lowered gate; a four-quadrant gate system to block all lanes of highway traffic; converting a two-way street into a one-way street; permanent closure of the crossing to highway traffic; or use of wayside horns posted at the crossing directed at highway traffic only.

In Cohasset what would have been three grade crossings were removed from the line by closing access to the streets: Rocky Lane, Smith Place and Lincoln Lane.

"Every time you close a crossing there is a reduction in potential accidents," said Gruber. A four-quad gate, a complicated gate system with two sets of arms on each side and extra warning signal technology, is installed at the Pleasant Street grade crossing. As an instance of the complexity of the gates, Gruber said the MBTA spent two weeks testing the Pleasant Street grade crossing, the first four-quad gate if traveling northbound on the line.

Despite the pending establishment of a quiet zone, whistles will still be blown as testing continues and until all five towns submit their notice of quiet zone establishment. In the case of an emergency situation, train engineers can blow the horn at their discretion, for example if a person or vehicle is on the tracks. Under federal regulations, engineers must sound the horn to warn railroad maintenance employees or contractors working on the tracks.

History of the quiet zone

Whistles have always accompanied railroads since they were built in the US. In the 20th century, nearly every state enacted laws requiring the railroads to blow horns at grade crossings. Some states allowed local communities to create whistle bans, or quiet zones.

However, in the early 1990s, the FRA observed a significant increase in train-vehicle collisions at certain gated grade crossings in Florida, which coincided with a statewide whistle ban on the Florida East Coast Railroad. The FRA required trains to sound their horns again, pre-empting state law. The number and rate of collisions at affected crossings returned to pre-whistle ban levels

In 1994, Congress mandated the FRA issue a federal regulation requiring the sounding of locomotive horns or whistles at all public highway-rail grade crossings; and to provide exceptions to the requirement by allowing communities to establish "quiet zones" under the Swift Act. The Swift Act, a federal law, essentially requires train horns be sounded at all public grade crossings unless a particular grade crossing is exempt from that rule. To be exempt, a grade crossing would have to have supplemental safety measures that are as effective as a train whistle. In 1996, Congress added that special consideration be given to communities with long-standing or legacy whistle bans.

The "Train Horn Rule" is the regulations to carry out the intent of the Swift Act. After several drafts, which incorporated input from FRA public meetings around the country and comments from scores of affected communities and stakeholders, the FRA finalized and made effective the regulations in June 2005 (Information from the FRA website).

The FRA determined the implementation of the application's outlined safety measures will result in a risk level at or below the risk present if there were horns sounding.

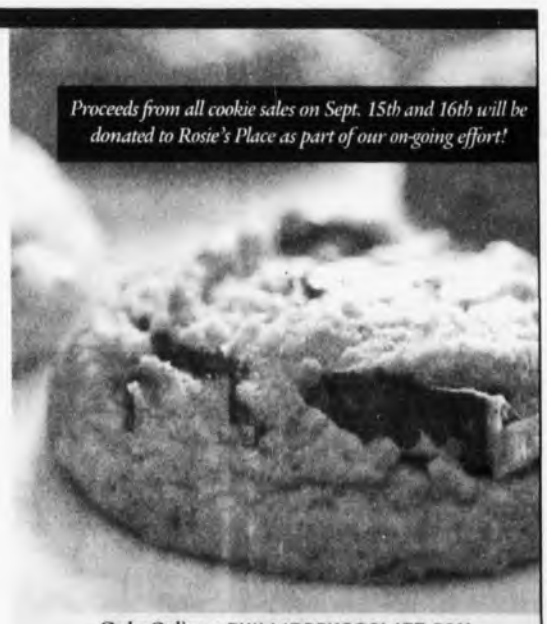
Missing bikes

A resident of South Main Street reported finding a small boy's red, black and white bike in his yard last week. This bike is the latest of a number of found bicycles that remain unclaimed, police said. There are currently about 15 bicycles at the police station and police urge anyone who is missing a bike to contact them or come to the station.

Police urge residents to engrave some kind of identifying mark on their bicycles.

After a year, police turn the unclaimed bicycles (and other unclaimed property) over to www.propertyroom.com, an Internet company that auctions the items off. The company is sort of like "ebay for police," Sgt. Quigley explained. It saves police from having to conduct an auction after a year. The company comes to the station, puts barcodes on the bicycles and picks them up. The same is true for other property the police have held for a year, such as a lost iPod, for example.

Money held over a year is turned over to the person who found it.



Parking lot

A Scituate woman told police she thought she had tapped a shopping carriage and not another car after an accident in Shaw's parking lot on Tuesday (Aug. 27) at about 11:30 a.m. Witnesses said the 2005 Ford Freestyle was backing out of a space when it hit an unoccupied 2003 Toyota Camry and left the scene. Witnesses provided the plate number and police contacted the 52-year-old woman at her home. The insurance companies will settle the matter, said police, who are not seeking charges.

Students arrived at school safely and on time, thanks to extensive preparation on the transportation end. Walsh said there seemed to be little issue with too many or too few students on bus routes and busses arrived on time. Upon arrival at school, students received a bus pass. A bus pass is needed following the institution of $180 per student (with a family cap of $540) bus fee last winter.

"It was a very smooth opening, it's a credit to our administrators and our teachers who have been working very hard."

— Supt. of Schools Denise Walsh

Caroline Cooper is all smiles as she hops off the bus for the first day of school Tuesday at Osgood.

The ongoing MBTA test trains are still running through Cohasset on a daily basis, but the big yellow school busses were prepared for it. The additional stopping, by federal law school busses must stop at every rail crossing regardless of a train is coming or the gates are up, was incorporated into the routes.

"Our bus drivers are really cognizant of the train already, we've been dealing with it since last year," said Walsh. Business Manager Dave DeGennaro organizes professional development for the bus drivers.

Walsh foresees train safety programs becoming like a "second nature" to the opening of school and to the student body. Cohasset Police already came to every grade last year to provide safety training to students in all graded through the Operation Lifesaver program embraced by the MBTA.

"It's not something we will do once, it is something that needs to be done every year," said Walsh.

As a precautionary and preventative measure, the Cohasset schools banned outdoor activity on their fields between 6:30 p.m. and 7:30 a.m. until further notice. Cohasset has been fortunate not to test positive for the EEE-virus. Walsh said they would revisit the school's policy at the end of the month. However, parents may opt to have their kid(s) stay inside during recess and physical education by contacting the appropriate school nurse or principal.

It's Happening

Film comes to grips with climate change

The public is invited to a screening and dialogue of "What a Way to Go: Life at the End of Empire," a feature-length documentary by Tim Bennett and Sally Erickson. The event will take place at Glastonbury Abbey Conference Center, Hull Street, Hingham, Saturday, Sept. 15, from 7 to 9 p.m., followed by an optional dialogue. Refreshments will be served. Donation is $5.

In the documentary, a man comes to grips with peak oil, climate change, mass extinction, population overshoot and the demise of the American lifestyle. "What a Way to Go" also features interviews with Daniel Quinn, Derrick Jensen, Jerry Mander, Richard Heinberg, William Catton, Paul Roberts, Chellis Glendinning, Thomas Berry, Richard Manning and Ran Prieur.

Call Jim Shipsky at 781-383-9024 for more information about the screening.

Animal control to offer pet microchipping

Pet microchipping will take place from 12 to 2 p.m., Saturday, Sept. 15, at the Hull Police Animal Control table on Nantasket Ave. When the microchip code is picked up by the scanning device, the dog's owner/address is identified. The Animal Control Officer can then contact the owner to let them know that their dog has been found.

Tags can fade, rust, or scratch and are sometimes illegible. Microchips offer back-up identification, and will never become difficult to read. The microchip itself is about the size of a grain of rice. It takes only seconds to put the chip into the dog, and there is no discomfort to the dog.

Just stop by with your pet; it takes only a few moments. The cost of $25 includes microchip and enrollment.

Board of health to offer free screenings

The Cohasset Board of Health will offer free health screenings to Cohasset residents at the Annual Health Fair on Tuesday, Sept. 11 from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. at the Second Congregational Church next to the Cohasset Town Hall in Cohasset Village.

Screenings will include blood pressure, vision and hearing, cholesterol and blood sugar, oral cancer, osteoporosis (bone mineral density) chiropractic and mental health screenings. There will be demonstrations of family emergency and disaster planning, holistic health methods including reiki, nutrition and massage therapy. Refreshments will be available and provided by Stop and Shop, Dunkin Donuts and Atlantic Bagel.

For information contact Judy Fitzsimmons, RN, public health nurse at Cohasset Board of Health at 781-383-2210.

NEW PH.D.

Anne Lindgren, daughter of Fran and Charles Lindgren, recently was awarded her Ph.D. in genetics from the University of Chicago. Anne is a 1994 graduate of CHS and a 1998 graduate of Bryn Mawr College in Pennsylvania with a degree in Biology. After graduating, she worked as a technician in the lab of Dr. Edward Winter at Thomas Jefferson University in Philadelphia. At the University of Chicago, Anne worked in the lab of Dr Kathleen Millen. She is currently doing postdoctoral work at UCLA in Dr. Amander Clarks stem cell lab. The lab's website is www.mcdb.ucla.edu/Research/clark/labmembers.html.

Anne has been married for five years to Eric Weiler of Duxbury. He is a 1993 graduate of Duxbury High School and a 1997 graduate of Havorford College in Pennsylvania. Eric just finished his first year in a Masters Program at UCLA's film school screenwriters program.

Anne, this is wonderful to write about, congratulations on jobs well done to both you and your husband. Your family is so proud of you both.

FAST PITCH

Bay State Thunder Softball, a highly competitive girls fast-pitch softball program based in Braintree, will be holding tryouts for their 18U, 14U & 12U teams on Sunday Sept. 16th and Sunday Sept. 23rdfrom 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. at the Flaherty Fields in Braintree.

For more detailed information on the tryouts, specific time for your age group and the team in general please visit our website at www.baystatethundersoftball.com or contact Rob Spofford at (781) 383-8338 or Al Saluti at (781) 380-3864.

JIMMY FUND WALK

This year Cohasset residents, Aniko Haber, Carsten Haber, and Jane Henderson, will be taking on one mission — the fight against cancer — by participating in one walk for one cause: the Jimmy Fund. The event will be held on Sunday, Sept. 16. Cohasset walkers will join more than 7,000 participants, who are expected to raise $6.3 million for cancer research and care for children and adults at Dana-Farber Cancer Institute. Over the past 18 years, walkers and their supporters have contributed more than $45 million to Dana-Farber. This funding supports cutting-edge cancer research to find cures and better treatments for all forms of the disease. It also provides special services and assists with costs of patient care and treatment. The Boston Marathon Jimmy Fund Walk is the only event, other than the Boston Marathon itself that is sanctioned by the Boston Athletic Association to use the historic 26.2-mile route from Hopkinton to Boston.

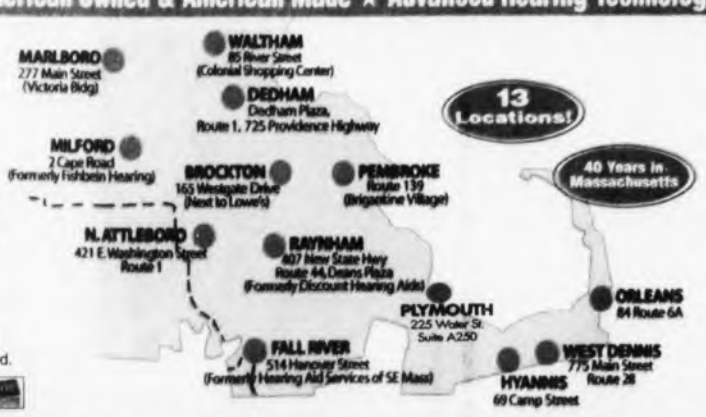
If You or Someone You Know is Struggling with Hearing Loss...Don't Miss This Opportunity!

WANTED
30 People

30 People Who Have Difficulty Hearing, Especially In Noisy Situations, To Evaluate New and Exciting Open Ear Digital Technology, Risk Free!

Mass Audiology will have State licensed hearing instrument specialists available to perform comprehensive hearing evaluations at no charge for the first 30 qualified callers to determine if you are a candidate for this new ultra-modern, open-ear hearing solution. Applicants selected will be asked to give their opinion on this remarkable new hearing aid in 2 weeks. This state-of-the-art instrument solves a really big problem by amplifying high frequencies without plugging up the ear canal as in traditional hearing aids and is virtually invisible when worn. This device will be fit and digitally programmed on the spot in one of our offices.

Participants who wish to keep their instruments can do so at a tremendous savings, due to their participation.



However, if you feel the hearing aids do not improve your hearing, simply return them.
The 30 participants also receive free batteries for the evaluation period.
A very small, fully refundable security deposit will be required.

Candidates will be selected by September 30, 2007.
Those interested need to call today.

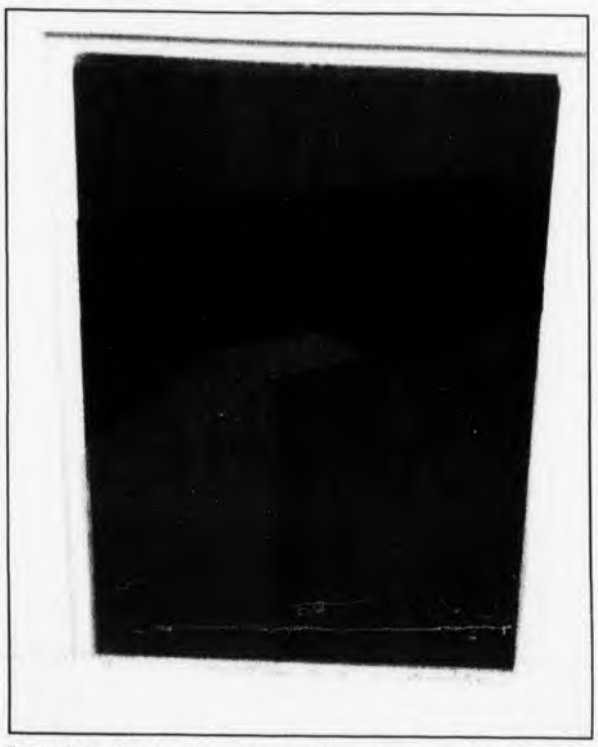
The artist's unknown

Local artist uses fragmentary objects to create monoprints

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

A crumbling seawall, a cigarette butt, a blooming hibiscus, and a fallen wisteria pod all seem like odd muses for an artist. Yet, for Susan Denniston they are the stars of her colorful and layered artistic explorations into the area around her home in Scituate.



Dennison's gallery exhibit "Fragments of Place: 42° 14´ N 70° 46´ W," now on display at the Paul Pratt Library, breathes new life into the mundane through the artistic medium of monoprinting. The exhibit reflects her ongoing and personal exploration of the fragmentary elements of objects she finds close to home. The latitude and longitude used in the title of the exhibit represents Minot Beach and her nearby home.

"Mono" printing, or monotyping, is called such because each print is one-of-a-kind and cannot be reproduced. Dennison got into monoprinting after she left her medical software job in 2000.

"I always had an interest in art," says Denniston, but she never had the time to devote to it. After taking art classes at both the Fuller Museum in Brockton and the South Shore Art Center, she fell in love with printmaking and monoprinting. It wasn't long before her love of printing transformed into a full time pursuit.

To make the unique prints, Denniston first paints ink on a smooth surface, usually, but not always a piece of Plexiglas. The ink is then transferred to the paper by laying the paper over the inked plate and applying pressure to the back of the paper to transfer the ink.

"It's very exciting to pick up the paper because you never truly know what will be the revealed," she says. One of the keys in this type of art is to have a flexible attitude, "when I start out I have an idea of what the end product will be, but the process there is an element of the unknown."

Seawall Study #38 demonstrates Denniston's use of color and love of angles inspired by the seawall by her home near Minot Beach.

"It's very exciting to pick up the paper because you never truly know what will be the revealed."
— Susan Denniston, artist

However, when the first print is lifted, it doesn't always mean the end of the printing process. The Plexiglas can be re-inked and the same piece of paper pressed over the inked plate again (and again) until the result satisfies Denniston.

"Each time the paper is lifted you have to pay attention and respond. It's important to be open to ideas as they develop on paper," Denniston explains. The process builds and forms an image by layering color, texture, shape and line. It's a back and forth process where each print takes on a life of its own.

"In monoprinting you can see the history of the how the art was created," which is one of the reasons she loves the art form, "I don't just give up on something, I work with it," she says she rarely throws away a print, even if she doesn't like the way it came out, "it might look good to me in a day or a week."

Much of the gallery exhibit is devoted to Denniston's evolving project involving the Minot Beach seawall.

"I was first captivated by the strong angularity of the newly constructed seawall in its attempt to hold back the ocean," she continued her abstractions of the seawall in its second year as it began to crumble and become "deeply scarred" by the relentless ocean. Then, in the third year, the wall was re-enforced with a bigger, wider seawall over the remains of the previous one.

"It's a good metaphor for life. The seawall represents what we're trying to hold back about ourselves, what we choose to conceal and reveal about ourselves," says Denniston, "the ocean is sometimes flowing over us and other times it is calm and beautiful." The building of the stronger seawall added another layer to the metaphor showing resilience after hardship.

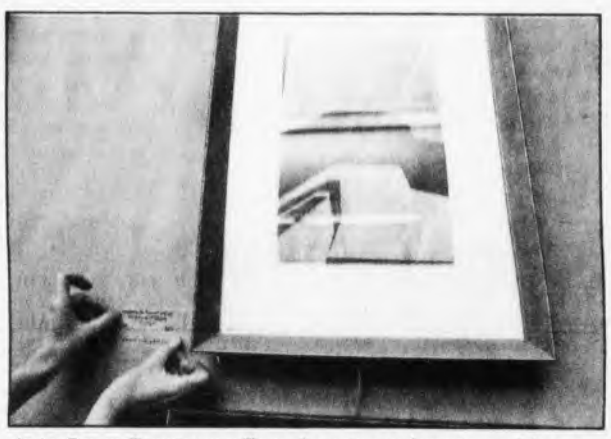
STAFF PHOTOS/ROBIN CHAN

Susan Denniston of Scituate is reflected in Seawall Study #8, which is one of her many prints on display at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library through the month of September.

The grouping of seawall prints is a look into this journey. When Denniston began using the seawall as her inspiration, her prints reflected the angular shape of the man-made wall against the more organic feel of the ocean. Then, she took an even closer look at the wall and looked more at the shapes and colors of the seawall. In her latest phase, the prints take on a more deconstructed, abstract look to elicit the crumbling effects of the seawall.

Her work is full of surprises and creativity, "sometimes you lie awake at night thinking of things you might want to try doing," she says with big grin. She describes the art form as one where "anything goes."

Her creativity has led her to use Jell-o instead of Plexiglas, to transfer Zerox copies of pictures and to spraying alcohol on the ink to give the ink a more spotted look.



A pair of two prints, "Gifts of Passersby," uses pieces of litter to create an abstract print of shapes and color. Another pair of prints, "Our Garden Our Lives," is a first printing and a "ghost printing," or second printing, of a hibiscus flower from Denniston's garden. A series of nine prints uses wisteria plants pods and flowers, which she used gelatin instead of plexiglas to create. She enhanced these prints with strokes of charcoal and ink.

"Through these monotypes, I seek to encode our environment: layers of beauty, layers of litter; delicate veins, powerful scars; some made by man, some made by nature. The fragments begin to reflect the whole," says Denniston.

Denniston is a gallery artist at the South Shore Art Center. As a gallery artist, she is then given the opportunity to display work in either the gallery space with the Paul Pratt Memorial Library, the South Shore Conservatory or the Dillon Gallery at the Arts Center. Currently, there are about 160 gallery artists under the South Shore Arts Center umbrella.

An artist's reception will be held on Sunday, Sept. 23 from 5 p.m. to 7 p.m. in the Library Meeting Room.

The gallery show, "Fragments of Place: 42° 14' N 70° 46' W, consists of about 35 prints at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library. The library's gallery is open Mondays, Tuesdays and Thursdays 10 a.m. to 8 p.m., Wednesday and Fridays 10 a.m. to 5 p.m., Saturdays 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. and Sundays 2 p.m. to 5 p.m. Free.

Artist Susan Denniston affixes the name to her piece while setting up her show at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library.

Going to the dogs

All Four Paws offers daycare, boarding, grooming and training

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

STAFF PHOTOS/CHRIS SHORES

All Four Paws owners Michael Hubert and Kim Hubert, who are siblings, are surrounded by dogs at their dog daycare business off Route 3A.

Macy, an Australian shepherd, seems to like being brushed by Jen Palchanis of In Style Grooming, which is run out of the same building.

The newest daycare in Cohasset is welcoming new students. The facility is clean, with plenty of open space to play, a couch to relax on and plenty of friends to pass the time away from parents. Outside there is a playground with colorful equipment and space to run around. Every moment the students are under the watchful eyes of the two supervisors.

But don't get your three-year-old dressed and ready for daycare yet, unless he/she is a Labrador retriever or a cocker spaniel — this is a daycare just for dogs. All Four Paws located near the Cohasset-Scituate line is a place designed to be a place where dogs can truly be themselves.

"You're dropping off a dog where a dog can be a dog," says co-owner Kim Hubert, "owners don't have to worry about their dogs they are in a safe environment."

All Four Paws re-located to Cohasset in December after a two-year stint in Plymouth. The new digs on Route 3A are a step above their original location in Plymouth. In the larger location they can offer more services to clients — it's a like a one-stop shop for canine needs. They offer dog boarding, training, daycare and grooming at In Style Grooming.

"We have a passion for dogs," says Michael Hubert, co-owner of All Four Paws and brother to Kim. The brother-sister duo has had a serious lifelong love of dogs, but the love did not immediately translate to a career and business. Michael worked in the Suffolk County Sheriff's department for 11 years. Kim started her career in 1990 as a veterinary technician, then became a nurse at Boston Medical for the last 10 years, she still works there part-time a few nights a week.

"You're dropping off a dog where a dog can be a dog."
— co-owner Kim Hubert

Slowly but surely, both began to look at dogs as the way to a fulfilling job. After getting a dog six years ago, a German shepherd named Maximus, Michael was introduced to the world of dog training. He became so interested in it; in 2003 he decided to go to the National K-9 training center in Ohio to take a six-week course to become a certified professional trainer. He began doing at home personal training sessions.

"Just because you've had a dog, it doesn't mean you know dogs," says Michael, who admits how clueless he was after attending National K-9 for one day, "it's something you can't learn from watching TV or reading a book."

Meanwhile, Kim pursued a certification as a canine rehabilitation practitioner at the University of Tennessee. Essentially, she is a physical therapist for dogs; she can help dogs hurt in accidents, falls or with broken bones get back on "all four paws" again.

When the opportunity came to open their own doggie daycare, they decided to go for it. Together, they carved out their own business philosophy to bring to area dog owners. Their motto, coined by Michael, is "drop 'em off wired…pick 'em up tired" and that's exactly what they do. Unlike some other doggie daycares, there is no schedule or inexperienced employees. Dogs are never crated during the day, boarding dog are crated overnight but play during daycare hours.

"We don't tell the dogs what to do, they can do what they want," inside or outside, naptime or playtime, Michael says, but they are kept under close watch at all time. During the course of our interview, Kim and Michael listened carefully to the dogs playing behind them. Without even turning around they knew the dog who was barking and why he was barking.

"You have to understand why dogs do what they do and that comes with experience and knowledge," says Michael, who offers training sessions by appointment.

Every dog is evaluated before they are allowed to attend daycare. Aggressive dogs are weeded out before ever encountering another dog. Each dog must be spayed or neutered and completely up-to-date on shots. Michael and Kim encourage owners who feel their dog is shy or un-socialized to bring him to get used to being around other dogs. It doesn't matter if they are big or small canines either, "dogs don't know size," says Michael.

"We care for our dogs the same way we care for our own," says Kim. In fact, their dogs come to play at daycare everyday. Michael has two German shepherds, Maximus and three-year-old Daegon. Kim owns two golden retrievers, three-year-old Sam and seven-month-old Daisy Mae.

"Dogs are social animals, this is what they like to do, they like to play," says Kim and each dog is guaranteed lots of kisses, hugs and plenty of playtime.

"I can't imagine myself doing anything else right now," says Michael as he sits on the couch surrounded by a group of wagging tails and happy smiles.

All Four Paws is located at 878 Chief Justice Cushing Highway (Route 3A). For more information, call 781-383-2010 or visit their website www.all-four-paws.com.

In Style Grooming

To complement All Four Paws' boarding, daycare and training services, Jen Palchanis runs In Style Grooming out of the same building. She has extensive grooming experience having owned her own grooming business on Nantucket for 10 years. She will groom any dog breed, in any kind of specialty cut. She graduated from the New York School of Dog Grooming and was convinced by owner Michael Hubert, a satisfied customer, to join the team at All Four Paws.

"She's the only one I will let groom my dogs," says Michael with a smile. Grooming is available by appointment only please call 781-383-8009 for availability.

CDC auditions

Auditions for Cohasset Dramatic Club's production of "Moon Over Buffalo" by Ken Ludwig, will be held at the Cohasset Town Hall, 41 Highland Ave. on Sunday, Sept. 9 from 5-8 p.m. and Monday, Sept. 10 from 7-9 p.m. Call backs, if needed, Tuesday Sept. 11 at 7 p.m.

Cast size is four men and four women .

Performance dates will be Nov. 2, 3, 4, 9, 10, & 11 at the Cohasset Town Hall.

This hilarious comedy centers on George & Charlotte Hay, two fading repertory stars in 1950s Buffalo. They've lost their last chance at stardom, their agent is smitten with Charlotte and the company ingénue is pregnant by George. The plot is full of misunderstandings, misplaced affections and missing persons. The show premiered on Broadway starring Carol Burnett.

Email director Eric Henderson at lighthouse_kp@hotmail.com or producer Jean D at: tangledwb7@aol.com with any questions.

Dance to classic rock Saturday night

Saturday night however the Sons of the American Legion will be hosting the Grab Brothers Band out of Provincetown for a one night performance at the Legion Hall on Summer Street. The Grab Brothers play clubs from Eastham to Orleans, Chatham to Plymouth. The band performs a familiar collection of classical rock and roll from the 60's 70's and 80's, from Tull to Aerosmith, Elton to Blood, Sweat and Tears, Eagles to Stevie Ray.

Bring your dancing shoes! Munchies are being provided by the Ladies Auxiliary. Tickets are only $10 and are available from some members and at the Legion. Music starts at 7pm. Any questions call Mark Trask at 781-383-9319 or the Legion 781-383-9657.

Safety first

Those looking forward to giving up Route 3 and the Southeast Expressway for the comfort of commuter rail are going to have to wait until the middle of October.

Plans were in the works to start Greenbush commuter rail service at the end of this month but wiser heads have prevailed and the "start" of the train to Scituate, Cohasset, Hingham, Weymouth and Braintree has been delayed.

Relatively speaking, the delay means little in the grand scheme of things. After all, plans to restore the Old Colony Line – that includes train service to Plymouth and Middleborough – took root back in the days of the Dukakis administration.

Plymouth and Middleborough started running exactly 10 years ago this month. Greenbush, as many readers know, was stalled due to legal and environmental challenges.

While the final Greenbush spike was installed at the beginning of the year – there was still a tremendous amount of work to be done before trains would roll, including finishing the parking lots, train stations and the grade crossings.

For example, crews have been working around the clock at the new roundabout in Greenbush at the juncture of routes 3A and 123 and Old Oaken Bucket Road.

When we drive the other direction on Route 3A, we can see the Cohasset train station coming together.

The most noticeable sign that the train is becoming a reality is the sound of the whistles on the test trains as they pass though Cohasset and other Greenbush towns.

We are not construction experts but we think it is pretty evident from all the work still going on that a September start date is not feasible.

One local glitch is the design of the North Main Street grade crossing, which is proving hazardous to bicyclists and motorists alike — even before the trains start to roll.

The Cohasset Mariner has documented numerous bicycle accidents, which occur because the wheels get trapped in the angled tracks, stopping the bike and toppling the rider. Now we have learned there have been three mishaps involving motorists who have come upon the crossing and the road markings, get confused, and actually turn onto the tracks.

[Please read this week's Making Tracks on the op-ed (page 11) that details plans to redesign the grade crossing and the Police Beat on page 3 that reports on the latest accident.]

MBTA spokesperson Lydia Rivera said this week there are still loose ends to tie up regarding signal testing, scheduling and construction along the Greenbush line.

Rivera also said additional organization and planning is needed to coordinate the opening ceremony.

"With any project of this size, there's bound to be delays," Rivera said. "We'd just rather be safe than sorry."

Although delayed, Greenbush is coming. The "extra weeks" will provide more time for everyone to revisit train safety by talking about how dangerous the train can be. These talks should take place around the dinner table or when driving around town with your family.

The schools and police safety officers have promised to continue to reinforce train safety as well.

Please remember: once the trains start, the whistles will stop! Greenbush is slated to be a whistle-free corridor!

Meetings

The following meetings are posted at Town Hall:

Alternative Energy Committee, Sept. 11, Oct. 9, Nov. 13, all at 7:30 p.m.

Are you on the active voters' list?

Recently the Board of Registrars have mailed confirmation notices to voters who did not respond to the annual street listing (census) by the first of June. This mailing notifies the voter that their name has been removed from the active voting list and has been placed on the inactive voting list. In order to activate themselves they must return the postcard and they will be restored immediately to the active voters' list.

If a voter has moved to another city or town, they still need to sign and return the postcard. Their name will be immediately removed from the voters' list in Cohasset. To vote, they must register to vote in their new city/town. Mail-in forms are available.

If postcards are not returned the voter will be removed from the voters' list. Also, they will be removed if they do not vote in at least one of the next two state elections or take other action that would reinstate them as an active voter.

Letters to the Editor

Rep. Garrett Bradley's recent visit

To the Editor:

Rep Garrett Bradley recently attended our Tenants Meeting at the Harborview complex when Synn McGlynn, a resident, wrote him about issues that needed to be addressed at the complex.

The condition of the street and parking lot area is dangerous and it needs repair. Also, it is very difficult to open the sliding glass doors, which ultimately could be a fire hazard.

Rep. Bradley spoke to Kate Luna, the managing agent for the Housing Authority. He then contacted Gov. Patrick's office and spoke with the Housing Authority to identify funds to resolve these issues.

The Harborview residents want to acknowledge and thank Rep. Bradley for his swift action in these important matters that will insure the safety of the residents of Harborview complex.

Let the train whistles blow!

To the Editor:

This is just to say how much I enjoy hearing that lonesome whistle blow across the Home Meadows to our little red house nestled on its edge. It's a sad sound, and mournful, yet so evocative of how it was when our country was young and expanding and of the hopes and dreams of all those "going West" to start over, seek their fortunes, or whatever. It is a romantic reminder of other days.

I'm aware of how it could be not so romantic for those living close to crossings, but at the same time I believe that without its warning accidents are waiting to happen. Let's not take chances with people's lives. Let's let the lonesome warning whistle sound at crossings.

Library Corner

Book group meets Sept. 26

The following events will take place at Paul Pratt Memorial Library.

Library Book Group –The next meeting will be at 10 a.m., on Wednesday, Sept. 26. The group will discuss Nathaniel Philbrick's book "Mayflower."

Independent Film Night – The library will show the independent film "Viva Cuba" at 6 p.m., on Thursday, Sept. 20, in the Meeting Room. Malu is from an upper-class family and her single mother does not want her to play with Jorgito, as she thinks his background is coarse and commonplace. Jorgito's mother, a poor Socialist proud of her family's social standing, places similar restrictions on her son. What neither woman recognizes is the strength of the bond between Malu and Jorgito. When the children learn that Malu's mother is planning to leave Cuba, they decide to run away and travel to the other side of the island to find Malu's father and persuade him against signing the forms that would allow it. Free admission and free refreshments courtesy of the Friends of the Library.

Great Decisions Group – The first Great Decisions Discussion group will begin at 2:30 p.m., on Sunday, Sept. 9, in the Meeting Room. For those who have registered for the program, the group will be discussing the Middle East found in Chapter One of the assigned text.

Artist Reception – South Shore Art Center will present "Fragments of Place: 42 Deg. 14'N 70 Deg. 46'W," featuring monotypes by Susan Denniston, at Paul Pratt Memorial Library, through Oct. 31. Meet the artist at a reception from 5 to 7 p.m., on Sunday, Sept. 23. Gallery hours are Monday, Tuesday and Thursday, from 10 a.m. to 8 p.m.; Friday, 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.; Saturday, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.; and Sundays, 2 to 5 p.m. Free.

"Rise and Fall of the Big Dig" – Sean P. Murphy, reporter for the Boston Globe, will give a free presentation at the library at 7 p.m., on Thursday, Sept. 27, in the Meeting Room. Murphy, an award-winning investigative reporter and editor, has spent the last 20 years breaking stories on the Big Dig, including the state's failure to hold Big Dig contractors accountable in 2003 and the cause of the ceiling collapse in 2006.

Train start date now Oct. 19

MAKING TRACKS

TOM GRUBER & MARK BRENNAN

Greenbush – New official Greenbush start date: We have heard projected start dates for the Greenbush line, from people who ought to know, varying from Sept. 29th to early November. Late last week the Town Manager received a phone call from the Secretary of Transportation's office to tell us that the "official" start of the Greenbush has been moved to Oct. 19th. So, there you have it. The original "official" date was to be Sept. 29th, but from what we hear, the MBTA has had problems with the signaling and control aspect of the railroad line and require the additional time to debug and fine tune the controls and safety systems.

North Main Street Greenbush crossing — On Wednesday, Aug. 29, we had an on site meeting with the MBTA, CBB and numerous Town brass, the Massachusetts DPU and others. It seems that the DPU (which, as we mentioned last week, must approve all crossings) is very concerned about the safety of the North Main Street railroad crossing near the Hingham Town line. While they were testing the crossing they observed two situations, each of which could cause a serious crossing accident. The first thing they observed was a funeral procession heading down N. Main Street making a left turn into Woodside Cemetery. While the funeral procession was waiting to enter the cemetery, two separate drivers were not paying attention and nearly missed having a rear-end collision on the railroad tracks. A vehicular collision on the tracks at the same time, or near to the time a train is due would be a significant hazard to the vehicles, their drivers and passengers as well as the train and its passengers.

The second incident witnessed, was vehicles stacking up across the tracks while waiting to make a left turn into Woodside Cemetery. Even though there are signs at the crossing heeding the cars not to stop on the tracks, some of the vehicles in the funeral procession did not always heed that warning and stopped on the tracks. Of course, the potential hazard in this case is the same as the situation above…a very serious collision.

Consequently, the DPU will not certify the N. Main Street crossing for railroad service unless it is reconstructed so that left turns cannot be made when coming from Cohasset into the cemetery. Similarly, when exiting Woodside Cemetery, only right turns will be permitted. Thus, we will be limited to right turns "in" and right turns "out." We understand that this forces all traffic going to the cemetery to use either Route 3A or Route 228 to access East Street in Hingham which becomes N. Main Street in Cohasset. Although this is not a direct route, it is clearly a safer route. Without this change, our only option is for the train to blow the horn in all five Greenbush towns. That's not very acceptable. So, it looks like Woodside will be restricted to right turn in and right turn out.

The MBTA will develop drawings for crossing changes and the medians will probably be extended to a point beyond where vehicles can make a left turn into the cemetery. This turns not to be an easy task because the road is quite narrow at this point and may require road widening. We'll see what the MBTA design engineers come up with.

Bicycle accidents — Another item reviewed at the above meeting was the large number of bicycle accidents, which have occurred at this crossing over the past year since the crossing first opened. There have been serious accidents where bicycle tires get trapped in the flange way of the railroad tracks causing the rider to stop suddenly, and in some cases be thrown over the handlebars. Several types of signs, varying from large illuminated signs to new warning signs posted at the tracks, have all proven ineffective. The bike accidents have continued.

The discussion with the MBTA and CBB centered on the possibility of creating a "jug handle" bicycle path that would veer off of the road to the right, cross over the tracks at a less shallow angle and then merge back onto the road. This bike pathway would be created on both sides of N. Main Street, for use by bikes traveling in either direction. The MBTA will, again, put on their creative design caps. We'll see what they are able to engineer.

Lastly, another unusual problem has developed at the North Main Street crossing. The MBTA has placed white lines parallel to the tracks in the crossing. We have had several instances where, under poor light conditions, drivers get mixed up and think this is a fog line. (A fog line is the proper name for the white line at the edge of a road.) Thinking that it is a fog line three drivers, so far, have followed the line and driven off the road onto the tracks. That has to be a very bad idea for the driver and a bit embarrassing, and needless to say very hazardous. The MBTA has agreed to get rid of the white lines parallel to the tracks so they do not distract drivers. Additionally, they will take the N. Main St. fog line and paint it across the tracks, so it is easier to see and not ambiguous. Also, the design plans call for several street lights to be added along the crossing, but they have not been installed yet. When they are installed better illumination at night should be a big help and provide better safety.

Other Greenbush information — This past week that we learned that at some places along the train system, occasional train speeds may be substantially higher than normal. As each crossing is checked out and approved, it is tested to a defined maximum speed. Actual trains may be operating way below that maximum speed. For example, a commuter train getting ready to pull into Cohasset Station from Hingham will be in the process of slowing down to stop. Its normal speed at the N. Main Street crossing will then be quite slow. But, suppose that a locomotive has been returned to the main maintenance yard in Boston for repair. On its way back to Scituate it does not need to stop at Cohasset station, so it might be going through the N. Main Street crossing near its maximum speed of about 60 mph. The same is true for most other crossings. The only exception we can think of in Cohasset would be Pleasant Street. Due to the severity of the curve at Pleasant Street all trains will; be forced to a lower speed.

We have received many, many calls about horn blowing during testing. Understandably, quite a few residents are worried that we will still be subjected to horn blowing on a routine basis once commercial rail operation begins. To review the situation, it is the five Greenbush towns that must apply to the Federal Rail Administration (FRA) for the whistle ban permit, not the MBTA. As of Aug. 23, 2007, the FRA has written a letter to us stating, that on a preliminary basis, the five Greenbush towns meet the requirements for a hornless waiver and the establishment of a Quiet Zone. The five towns have one more submission to make to the FRA before the Quiet Zone is established. So, we are most of the way there. Yes, Virginia, it does look like there won't be any horns.

Forest Avenue — Work continues on the Forest Avenue paving and sidewalk project. The blasting we have referred to in a previous article is complete. A few small knobs of ledge remained to be removed, but they were easily knocked down by using conventional construction machinery. Meanwhile, work continues on the preparation of the sidewalk curbing and base at the Jerusalem Road end of the new sidewalk. The project is still on target to complete by October of this year.

Women and power

HENSHAW

TOM HENSHAW

Quick now, who are Wu Yi and Ho Ching? Don't know, eh? Why, they're the second and third most powerful women in the world and the reason you've never heard of them is because they've never been caught driving drunk on Hollywood Boulevard.

Wu Yi is the vice premier of China, which is slowly overtaking Japan and the West as an economic power, and Ho Ching is the CEO of Temasek Holdings, the fabulously successful Singapore investment house.

The latest issue of Forbes, the business magazine, has chosen the 100 most powerful women in the world and there's not a provocative cleavage in the lot, although Christie Hefner, the CEO of Playboy Enterprises, did finish 85th.

The most powerful women in the world, judged by her job title, visibility, economic impact and sphere of influence, is Angela Merkel, the chancellor of Germany, who will be remembered as the recipient of President Bush's impromptu neck massage at last year G8 meeting.

American women make up exactly half the list of 100, led by Secretary of State Condaleeza Rice in fourth place and Indra K. Nooyi, whom anyone who reads the small print on the financial pages will instantly recognize as the CEO of Pepsi Cola.

You don't have to be famous to make the list of Forbes most powerful as the next three Americans Patricia A. Woertz, Irene Rosenfeld and Patricia Russo (eighth, ninth and 10th) found out. They're the heads of Archer Daniel Midland, Kraft Foods and Aleatel-Lucent.

The best that Hillary Clinton, the senator and presidential candidate, could do was 25th place, one ahead of House Speaker Nancy Pelosi and two ahead of Michelle Bachelet, the president of Chile. Hillary may move up in 2008, depending on what happens on Nov. 11.

First ladies and queens made the list, too, although most of their power may come through pillow talk.

Queen Elizabeth of Britain is 23rd (two ahead of Hillary). Queen Rania of Jordan is 82nd; first lady Laura Bush is 60th and (take a deep breath, now) Sheikha Mozah Dint Nasser Al Missned, the first lady of Qatar, is 79th.

The most powerful woman in show business is, of course, Oprah Winfrey, who finished 21st (four ahead of Hillary) and one behind Supreme Court Justice Ruth Bader Ginsburg. And not a Britney Spears or a Paris Hilton in the bullpen.

Katie Couric, who has been floundering a bit as anchor chick for CBS News, winds up 63rd but Meredith Vieira, who succeeded her as host on NBC's Today Show, came in 55th. Go figure!

Frankly, I don't know how Dr. Sima Samar (92nd), chairman of the Afghanistan Independent Human Rights Commission, and Aung San Suu Kyi (71st), who was elected president of Myanmar in 1991 and appears to have been under house arrest ever since, made the list.

The words "Afghanistan" and "human rights" so rarely appear in the same sentence and "house arrest" and "power" seem to be contradictory in terms.

And then we have Louisa Diogo (89th) president of Mozambique.

Anybody got a map?

Experiment with interesting results

DRIVING WHILE TYPING

JOHN LENGYEL

I ate sitting down. Heart rate a steady 60 beats per minute. Palms dry. Hair on the back of my neck laying flat.

Every day for the last couple of months I noticed that our family room began the morning organized and clean, and became an unmitigated disaster by mid-afternoon, with toys, cracker crumbs and beach towels strewn about. Yet whenever I confronted my three children about the mess, each would insist she had nothing to do with it. I found it all very suspicious, so when my parents took the kids for four days last week I decided to perform a little experiment that had some very interesting results.

First I took an object from my bedside table (a book), brought it downstairs and placed it on the kitchen counter, to simulate a hypothetical scenario in which I might casually place an object on the kitchen counter with the expectation that it would remain there until I decided to take it away again. After noting the book's condition I went into the living room, where I could observe the area from behind some French doors. After 30 seconds I returned to the kitchen and discovered the following: the book had not been lost between the couch cushions, or dropped in the toilet, or crayoned in. Neither had it been burned, shredded, pummeled, impaled, or befouled in any way. Some mysterious natural phenomenon had caused it to remain exactly as I had left it.

I decided to push the envelope. I tuned the stereo to my favorite radio station, began an elaborate project involving hundreds of fragile parts and small, pointy tools, and set a glass of Hawaiian punch on a bureau at one end of the house and a favorite cream-colored shirt on a chair at the other end. Then by God I went to lunch.

I ate sitting down. Heart rate a steady 60 beats per minute. Palms dry. Hair on the back of my neck laying flat. Something strange caught my eye at the far end of the table. It was my wife. She looked younger, healthier. Not so hunched over and quivery. We talked. We smiled. We did not dig our fingernails into the table, leap to our feet and run for a roll of paper towels, or a straight jacket, or a tourniquet. We tasted our food, basked in the quiet, and let the answering machine handle all the frequent, urgent-sounding calls from New Hampshire.

We generally don't fall in love and marry a person because we think they might be aces at breaking up shoe fights between crazed lunatics. But once you have two or three kids running around robbing and pillaging your home, everything that used to attract you to your spouse — great hair, fluency in Norwegian, a dream to be the first person to drive across Connecticut in a Fiat — all these become useless, annoying qualities. It's the ability to force overalls onto a rabid goat while strapping it into a car seat that you're really in the market for then, which may explain why pregnant women have intense cravings for rodeo champions.

Anyway the kids came home with exciting stories of a three-alarm condo fire and a small python they let loose in the New London Library, so they seem to have enjoyed themselves. The important task this week was to get them back into school and keep them there using the full extent of the law if necessary. So far the local authorities appear to be cooperating. I fear, though, that if their resolve weakens we can all expect further delays in the Forest Avenue construction project, which finally resumed last week after several blasting charges were found in our zucchini garden.

John Lengyel lives in Cohasset, where police have noticed that whenever something in town goes missing, is defiled, or scribbled on, he hastily calls his children indoors.

'Not Buying It' gains 10 hours

TOWARD A SUSTAINABLE COHASSET

JOANN MIRISE

I am still supporting our economy. I am just doing it with more awareness of what is enough.

Ten hours a week. This is the estimated amount of time that I have gained by Not Buying It — my pledge of not purchasing anything new for one year. My idea for this endeavor grew out of a reaction to the fact that our culture's over-consumption is degrading our planet. In addition, I had the sneaking suspicion that my consumerism was undermining my personal pursuit of happiness. I was compelled to make a change.

Ten hours a week is a lot. It's the "more hours in the day" for which we so often wish. It is more time spent with my family. More time cultivating a career that I love. More time learning new ways of experiencing life that bring me deeper joy. It is no surprise that this past year has been more fulfilling. I feel lighter, unfettered. By untangling myself from the sticky web of consumerism, the one thing it seems that I have bought myself this year is more freedom.

Freedom is what we, as Americans, consider our inalienable right. We protect it. Fight for it. Accept the loss of life over it. When our freedom was challenged on September 11, 2001, the message from our leadership was not to let the terrorists win — be patriotic and shop. So we swallowed our sadness and attended to business as usual. We were helped along the way with easy, cheap money for the taking. We spent it on cars, electronics, vacations, additions to our homes and all of the stuff that goes inside. The price was steep however, and now the headlines read weak dollar, shaky markets, bankruptcy and foreclosure. To top it off, we are left with an increased, on-going demand of natural resources from some of the same sources that have threatened our independence and security. None of this sounds like freedom to me. And I am guessing the folks who are looking for a new place to live aren't feeling particularly patriotic either.

You'd have to be living in a sensory deprivation tank to be ignorant of the fact that we are at a crossroads when it comes to defining growth and what it means to be American. We have come to a point where we need to determine what is enough. Enough is not an easy concept to grasp: too little we feel deprived, too much we are overwhelmed. It is the sweet spot in the middle that allows us to thrive. This was the real reason I chose to wipe my slate clean for a year. I had lost the ability to see my enough.

The fact is I am still a consumer and always will be. I am still supporting our economy. I am just doing it with more awareness of what is enough. For me, taking a year to assess how I spend money and the impact that each thing I buy has on myself, others and the planet has made me a better consumer, and I hope, a better citizen. For example, I have learned that only $13 of every $100 I spend at a chain store goes back into local economic activity. Whereas that same $100 spent at a locally owned store generates $45 for the community. You can bet where I am going to focus my shopping.

Even after manufacture and transport, every single thing we own requires energy to shop for, organize, clean, launder, repair, dispose, store, return, replace, and so on. The key is to authentically determine if an item gives back an equal or greater amount of joy than the amount of energy put in to make it, buy it and manage it. If it does not, then it has no space in our lives. Yes, I have taken to assigning a life enhancer vs. energy sucker rating to all things that come into my house. It's not necessarily a quick process. But at least I have those extra 10 hours.

Stands vary from bakers to jewelry makers to organic vegetables and it seems every single vendor has an interesting story to tell. A vendor from Plymouth makes cosmetics from soy. A 10-year-old sells sno-cones to kids on the hot summer afternoons. Young entrepreneurs gather together at a co-op table hoping to turn a profit on beaded bracelets, keychains and other small crafts. There's a homemade jelly stand and a local fisherman selling his catch of the day. Nona's Homemade Ice Cream truck parks on Highland Avenue for the afternoon. Flowers freshly bunched into colorful bouquets at Holly Hill Farm or in Gracie Thompson's Harborview apartments backyard sell like hotcakes. Of course, the root of the Farmer's Market is locally grown vegetables, fruits and produce, and there are still plenty of options for those seeking something fresh for dinner.

"It's a great way to shop and people are aware they are eating healthy food and buying home produced products," says Abbruzzese.

To make the event even more appealing for kids and families there are pony rides and a "very talented face-painter," says Abbruzzee. Some weeks have special events, like the upcoming fall dog show where families can bring their pets dressed in costume. Representatives from Whole foods have demonstrated how to cook with local produce. Musical entertainment complements the entire event.

Holly Hill Farms, a certified organic farm, has been a staple to the Cohasset Farmer's Market since 2000. Owner Frank White doesn't see any sign of stopping or even venturing to other local markets. During the course of the summer and early fall, Holly Hill sells between 30 and 40 different types of vegetables depending on what's in the season.

"The setting is something out of a Norman Rockwell calendar," says White, which he names are one of the reasons the Cohasset Farmer's Market is unique. Some area Farmer's Markets are set up in parking lots. In fact, the Cohasset Farmer's Market had its origins in the municipal parking lot in the Village until about seven years ago, "half the fun is being on the grass, it makes for a more natural setting."

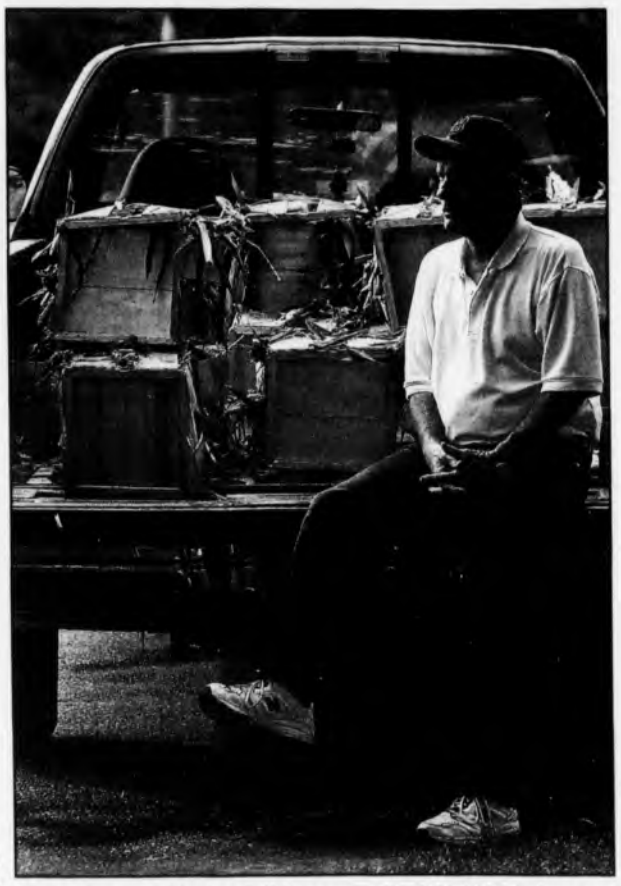
"It's a great way to shop and people are aware they are eating healthy food and buying home produced products."
— Anna Abbruzzese, Cohasset Farmer's Market

White enjoys the personal touch and relationships the Farmer's Market setting allows as well. As an organic farm, he often gets asked about the organic growing process or the best ways to cook the vegetables and he can answer right then and there.

Beyond customer relations, there is a community among the return vendors, "it's a cooperative and helpful atmosphere," he says. He and other organic farms compare notes and share ideas on their businesses.



LuGem's Yummies is new to the Farmer's Market this year bringing a variety of cookies and brownies. Two 14-year-old boys, Luke Ernst and Jeremy Cundall, have run the business all summer — baking the cookies and manning the stand.

"They have a pretty regular following," says Luke's mother, Mary Ernst. She says each year the Farmer's Market has grown to where now it's a place people look forward to come each week.

"Young families come and spend hours there," armed with a blanket and a picnic, says Ernst. An idyllic location, the nice variety of vendors, the weekly entertainment and the good weather add up to a perfect way to spend a summer afternoon, she says.

The Cohasset Farmer's Market Committee sells hot dogs each week to raise money for a scholarship fund, "they are the best hot dogs on the South Shore," says Abbruzzese. Over the last four years, they have awarded over $4,000 in scholarships to Cohasset graduates.

The Cohasset Farmer's Market is held each Thursday 2:30 to 6:30 p.m. on Cohasset Common from mid-June to mid-October.

At the Farmer's Market, Bill Steverman Jr. of California hangs out in the back of his truck with corn grown on his father's farm in Scituate.

Goldie grabs a bite to eat at the end of the Farmer's Market while John Shannon, 1-1/2, of Cohasset checks out the pony with his mom, Sarah.

Jon Coffey, 18, of Cohasset plays the keyboard in his band, the John Coffey Trio, while performing at the Farmer's Market.

HEALTH NOTES

Diagnosis and repairs: necessary evil – DUH!

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

If you keep everything up well, there'll be fewer surprises later on.

Having recently heard that a friend just had bypass surgery instead of the angioplasty he was expecting, several lessons have become obvious. If you treat your body like you do your car there's a relationship between how long either of you will live. Thus, the DUH!

Remember how you treated your first car? There wasn't enough you could do for it. But then as it became older, it got less care, and finally just enough to get it started.

Attitude plays a part in dealing with repairs. If you keep everything up well, there'll be fewer surprises later on. Appearance will be better. You'll give others a more favorable impression.

Get advice from someone who knows. You may consider yourself knowledgeable, but there's always someone better informed. It's better to be right than to think you are.

Then take the advice; don't diddle around and expect the symptoms to change.

Spend money on necessities, not frivolities: lube oil vs. bud vases, which were in for a while.

Go for the overhaul rather than the fast fix.

A part of the advice you're usually given is to run in all the new parts and keep them active. Lubricate, but don't overdo and keep all the systems clean. Don't forget maintenance.

With increasing age, there's a tendency to put off necessary repairs even though they make for rough riding or handling.

And finally, there's an inclination to think it doesn't matter any more. Well, that's like the last decision. Just remember, there may be somewhere you want to go or a little something you really want to do at the last minute.

We're really talking about cars here, but just in case we aren't, here's something you can do right now:

Come to the Fair!— On Tuesday, Sept. 11th come to the Second Congregational Church, 43 Highland Ave., between 10 a.m. and 2 p.m. to take part in Cohasset's comprehensive Health Fair. Meet Board of Health members and our excellent staff, led by Dr. Joe Godzik, Tara Tradd, and Judy Fitzsimmons as well as many other health care professionals covering a variety important medical and support activities.

Now, at our Health Fair: one can be screened for the following mental health conditions: Adolescent and Adult Depression (including parent screening for their children and adolescents), Post Partum Depression, Bipolar Disorder, Anxiety Disorders, and Sleep Disorders. Discuss your concerns with Peggy Chapman, APRN, BC, Chairperson of the Board of Health, who, has broad experience in child, adolescent, and adult psychiatry. All screenings will be conducted anonymously. If a screening tool should indicate that follow up is needed, she will provide discrete information on how to get further evaluation for the problem.

Another member of the Board of Health will focus on oral cancer detection. Dr. Robin Lawrence will be performing oral examinations. In the U.S., 30,000 people are diagnosed with mouth and throat cancer each year and 8,000 die of these cancers. Mouth and throat cancers are the sixth most common cancers in U.S. males. Such a cancer was detected at an earlier health fair. Early detection of any cancers is crucial to the survivability of the patient and is an important part of health and wellness programs. Visit with Dr. Lawrence for your oral cancer examination.

Cohasset Elder Affairs will have a representative available at the Fair for a confidential discussion.

Other free screenings and demonstrations will include:

Health Watch, a local health screening organization will assess Total Cholesterol, HDL, LDL and Blood Sugar

Osteoporosis and Blood Pressure, by the visiting Norwell Nurse Association

Hearing by Cohasset Medical Hearing Center

Depression, Anxiety and Sleep Screening by Peggy Chapman, RN CS

Nutrition by Paula Pozniak

Massage Therapy by Nantasket Therapeutic Massage and Wellness Associates

Chiropractic Care and Spinal Screening- Rachael Coates DC of Scituate Harbor Chiropractic

Holistic Health and Acupuncture by Szabo Fitness and Acupuncture

Skin Analyzer by the Melanoma Education Foundation

Health Fair Supported by donations from Pilgrim Bank and Cohasset Rotary.

For More Information Call Judy Fitzsimmons, RN at 781-383-2210 or the Cohasset Board of Health Office at 781-383-4116 Come in; eat some healthy food; get checked out, and see your Board of Health in action!

From the Archives of the Cohasset Historical Society

From the Archives is a weekly feature provided by Cohasset Historical Society.

From Sept. 14 to 16, 1885, the 32nd America's Cup race was held in New York. The competition between the yachts, Puritan and Genesta, was almost no contest with the Puritan winning the first two races. The Puritan was thought to be the fastest American yacht of her time. You may be wondering, what does this have to do with Cohasset? Well, our very own Cohasset resident, Aubrey Crocker, was the Captain of the winning vessel. Captain Crocker lived in a house on Border St. prior to his death in 1906. However the house was later moved to Parker Avenue.

Call 781-383-1434 for more information about the Cohasset Historical Society.

Story of the Tuskegee Airmen

The entire community is invited to come learn how these brave, young American men broke the color barrier of the Army Air Corps some 65 years ago.

Members of the renowned Tuskegee Airmen will host a talk and video presentation titled "Red Tails: The Saga of the Tuskegee Airmen" at 7 p.m., on Oct. 5, in the Parish House of the First Parish (Unitarian-Universalist) church on Cohasset Common. Tuskegee Airman and member of the First Parish congregation, Jack Bryant, will moderate the evening's discussion. The entire community is invited to come learn how these brave, young American men broke the color barrier of the Army Air Corps some 65 years ago.

At the start of World War II the U.S. Army had rules which enforced our country's attitudes towards black Americans. They were considered unfit for combat and were generally assigned to stereotyped jobs as cooks and waiters, or were rejected completely. The Army Air Corps certainly did not let black men fly or repair airplanes. In that time of great need, such prejudices were a luxury our country could no longer afford. Afraid of disrupting morale of the fighting units, but under moral pressure and persuasion from the NAACP, the black media, some members of Congress and the White House, the War Department started a "separate but equal" training program for black aviators. This "noble experiment" produced the Tuskegee Airmen. (Excerpt from The History of the Tuskegee Airmen).

The Tuskegee Airmen overcame racism at home and abroad…by the end of World War II these African American pilots had earned respect for their air prowess. The "Red Tails" (nicknamed for the color painted on their aircraft) flew more than 15,000 combat missions and never lost a bomber during Allied escort missions over Europe. This important part of American History is a story that holds life lessons for all generations.

A lasagna meal and beverages will be served. The cover charge is $10/person, or $20 per family. Proceeds will support the Tuskegee Airmen's Scholarship Fund, which awards many thousands of dollars annually to young people across the country (all presenters and officers of this organization serve without salary or fee). This event is sponsored by the First Parish Unitarian Universalist congregation on Cohasset Common. For information call Sandy Bailey, Parish Administrator, at 781-383-1100.

Cohasset's Sarah Coggins was everywhere defensively for the Lady Skippers Wednesday against Abington.

Freshman surprise

Fein, Kucinski score; Lady Skippers take game one

By Joel Racicot
JRACICOT@CNC.COM

With a schedule that seems better fit for mid-season play, the Cohasset High School girls soccer team can ill afford a slip up when the opportunity to grab a win is in its sights. That is why Wednesday's 2-0 victory over visiting Abington was so important.

Game one yes, but an important win nonetheless.

"That was huge," head coach Debbie Beal said after the game.

Cohasset will face Notre Dame Saturday, the winner of Andover and Sandwich Sunday and Rockland Wednesday. Coupled with the fact that Beal couldn't remember a time in the last 10 years when her Skippers have beat the Green Wave and, you can understand the powerful adjective use to put game one into perspective.

"I'm impressed with their physical (play)," Beal said.

Cohasset dominated the first half keeping the pressure squarely on Abington's defense. They out shot the Green Wave 13-2, but both teams went into the half scoreless.

"We started out like a house of fire," Beal said. "We just weren't putting two and two together.

"At halftime I said, 'listen your outplaying them.' I'm always preaching the first five and the last five minutes of the half as the most important times of the game."

They listened and, Caroline Fein answered, scoring her first varsity goal less than five minutes into the second frame. Fein (midfield) showed no sign of any freshman jitters, nor did teammate Kacy Kucinski, who added an insurance goal midway through the half.

Beal was impressed with the young folks.

Back into the swing of things

By Robert Belley
SPECIAL TO MARINER

School sports are back! Cross country, field hockey, football, golf, soccer and volleyball squads are beginning their seasons this week. The questions a lot of athletes are asking themselves though are, "Did I seriously prepare for the season and am I conditioned enough for my position?"

Have no fear. Even if you slacked all summer guzzling Big Gulps and Coolatta's by the beach you can still make an impact on the roster. Heck you may even steal a starting position.

Ahead you'll find a basic training program, a two-week quick-fix if you will.

Sure strength, power, speed, quickness, flexibility, mobility, agility all count, but the above sports are without fail dependant upon two factors: your ability to handle endurance and your ability to resist injury.

For your conditioning we'll keep it simple. Each day – if applicable – begin by warming up with some basic dynamic stretches. Commonly choose the ones you are already familiar with. Second, start with a light jog about a couple laps around the track or field. Third we'll move into sprints.

Begin with quick 10 to 20 yard sprints from your sports preferred athletic stance. After each sprint, take your time walking back to the starting line. If there's one thing I must stress during this session is hydration and maintaining proper breathing. You shouldn't be winded after 20 yards. Develop your breath control with every stride. Hands stay open, legs and arms move front to back, not side to side or swaying, and you're pushing behind your body not straight down into the ground for propulsion.

After five sprints, have a sip of water and hit the track/field for some distance running; nothing crazy. We're going to set the time for this at five minutes maximum. Begin by jogging a half a lap, then pick-up the pace into a near sprint for the next five yards. Return to your starting pace and continue swapping the two speeds until your time is up. This is a simple and effective tool to get back in the swing of things.

For the first day, begin with a warm-up: perform five sprints and transition into a five-minute jog/sprint interval. For each day after, add two sprints and one minute to the jog/sprint interval: simple stuff. By the end of two weeks you should be near 15 sprints and 15-minute intervals.

Now for your strength we have four cool exercises performed in supersets – two exercises back to back with little to no rest between. The first is a basic farmer's walk. This will develop a strong grip for your stick sports and for maneuvering opponents. It'll also add needed stability in the legs and work the entire the upper back and traps. Simply grab a weight plate or dumbbell in each hand and walk with the weights for 100 feet.

The second exercise will be performed immediately following the walk. You'll get down the ground and lye on your back. Place your heels as close to your butt as possible with your arms by your sides. From here, simply straighten one leg, and push through the ground using the foot closest to your glutes until your hips lift as high as possible from the earth. Hold this top position for one second, return to within one inch above the ground and repeat for 11 more repetitions/lifts. Once finished with all the repetitions on one side switch legs. This exercise will build up your hamstrings and glutes protecting you from ACL injuries and giving your unilateral movements stability and your sprint power. Repeat this farmer's walk/hip lift for three total sets.

The next superset is going to be a basic push-up combined with jump squats. First perform your push-ups, pushing as long as you can. Then stand up and perform 10 deep high jumping squats all in succession. Try to land and jump from the same place each time. You may drift forward or backward an inch or two between landings but do your best to maintain positioning. Repeat this for three sets and you're done.

This is a simple and effective two-week warm-up to get you ready for the onslaught of games to come. Also, this program can be maintained throughout the season. Lessen the sessions from five to six days to two to three. And don't forget to stay hydrated, stay limber and focus on the tasks at hand. Good luck this season.

Head Over Heals goes over the top

Students from Cohasset amongst participants

Head Over Heels Gymnastics in Norwell held its annual fundraiser this year to benefit the Special Olympics of Massachusetts. In March, gymnasts were given 30 seconds to do as many cartwheels as they could, and then were asked to go out and try and raise money for the cause. Together, the gymnasts raised over $9,000. The Top six fundraisers were: Caroline Plansky of Norwell – $1,045.85, Canyon Volpe of Marshfield - $408.00, Maddie Ward of Norwell - $372.00, Nicole Delano of Weymouth - $330.00, Julianne Mariano of Norwell - $275.00 and Hailey McDonough of Marshfield - $262.00

These six girls were honored May 2 with a ceremony and were awarded trophies. Past fundraisers held at HOH included: 2006 – Children's Hospital, 2005 – Brain Aneurysm Foundation, 2004 – Lupus Foundation, 2003 – The Jimmy Fund.

HOH also sponsors The Walk of Hope. Supporting the Needs of the Breast Cancer Survivor. Live, Learn & Love is an outreach program designed to provide financial assistance to women and families in our local communities touched by breast cancer. This year's walk will be on Sunday October 14 at 11:30 a.m. at Webb State Park in Weymouth.

Head Over Heels Students from Norwell, Scituate, Cohasset and Pembroke participated in this year's event.

"They came into pre-season I knew there names but I didn't know a lot about them," she said. "I had them in middle school phys-ed, I knew they were soccer players.

"It seemed like right from the beginning it wasn't me who put them in some of the groups they were working in, but right from the beginning some of the older kids took them under their wing."

Johanna Brophy made all the right moves in net to preserve the victory. Her grit, along with a strong defense will keep the Lady Skippers in a lot of games.

"She is cut from a different cloth," Beal said about her junior keeper. "(Brophy) is nuts, she will bend over and pick the ball up off your foot, she has always been tough."

Cohasset is going to need that toughness as it navigates its way through a tough non-league slate to start the season. With only two seniors on varsity, Anna Haggerty and Meg Anderson, it will be important for a few juniors to help pick up leadership roles.

"I'm impressed overall," Beal said. "They are a great group, and they're having a blast and that is the most important thing to me."

Passing on 'pearls of wisdom!'

LIFE AT CHS

CHRISTINE KENT

"Summertime and the livin is easy," or at least it was until Tuesday, when it was time to put away the beach bag and strap on those dreaded backpacks. For all you freshmen making your high school debut, I welcome you to the beginning of a whole new ride. So live it up, work hard, and make good choices! Now that I am senior, I feel it is my right to pass on these little "pearls of wisdom."

With only four school days under our belts it is safe to say that this year is already marked with change. Having said goodbye to a few of our favorite teachers last year, it is time to put away the Kleenex and embrace our new future enlighteners! Hopefully, the new physics teacher, Joe King, came prepared with funny stories and quick-witted remarks. William Sanford, the new chemistry teacher, will be filling in for Mr. Ames, who is taking a two-year leave of absence. Wouldn't it be nice if students could do the same? Another alteration to our lives at CHS is the new "get out of jail free clause" formally known as the "Discretionary Tardy Pass" or the DTP which enables students to excuse four incidents of tardiness; this should be interesting. In addition, it seems as though the senior hallway, which the graduating class has always coveted, has now been given to those oh so lucky....freshmen? Nothing personal guys, I guess I'm just a stickler for tradition. But cheer up seniors just four days down and 162 more to go!

Now for this weeks top stories:

- Tuesday, Sept. 4th:The day every kid fears...the first day of school!
- Wednesday — Student Council met and hopefully discussed how to make this year "more fun" then last year.
- Thursday — ninth-grade had an orientation breakfast...that probably would have been more helpful before school started. Also, the awesome field hockey team faced off against East Bridgewater, it is safe to say that tensions where high as we played against the EB rivals.
- Friday- Marks the end of the first week of school.

Well, that's it for me this week. Hope everyone has a great weekend. This year should be an exciting and awesome one so good luck everyone and remember Thanksgiving break isn't too far away!

Christine Kent is a senior at CHS. Her column appears weekly in the Mariner.

Middle school girls interested in math, science

Colleen Richardson, a senior Girl Scout and Cohasset High School graduate, is beginning a program as part of her Gold Award Project, for middle-school girls interested in math and science. The program is called "Looking Forward: Keeping Girls Involved in Math and Science." It involves monthly meetings with women from the local community speaking about their careers in math and science. There will also be high school girls paired with the middle-school girls as mentors. The meetings will be at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library. The first meeting will be from 6-7 p.m. on Tuesday Sept. 11th and the next meeting will be from 3-4 p.m. on Sunday Sept. 16th.

For more information, contact Richardson at: collrichardson@comcast.net

Middle school book group to meet

Buttonwood Book Group for middle school children, grades six through eight, will meet at 7 p.m., on Thursday, Sept. 13, at Buttonwood Books & Toys, Shaw's Plaza, Route 3A, Cohasset. Facilitator is Barb Mullin, and the selected book is "The Gospel According to Larry" by Janet Tashjian. Reservations are not necessary. All are welcome.

Call Buttonwood at 781-383-2665 for more information.

SAT practice tests

Summit Educational Group announced it is offering free practice tests for the PSAT, SAT and ACT at Hingham High School on Sept. 15.

Summit's free practice tests are an opportunity for students to gauge their strengths and weaknesses under realistic test-taking conditions.

Summit's free practice tests for the PSAT, SAT and ACT are open to all students who wish to get a head start on their test preparation plans. An Extended Time option is also available for students who have been approved to take the SAT with extended time.

Summit will score the test and provide a detailed analysis and score report to each student within seven days. The score analysis will pinpoint each student's strengths and areas in need of improvement.

To register for a practice test or learn of additional dates and locations for tests, visit mytutor.com or call a Summit program director at 1-800-698-8867.

Community Center summer was tons of fun!

The South Shore Community Center offered a Gymnastic/Sports and More Camp for two weeks in August with an overwhelming response. Both weeks were full with a waiting list. The campers, boys and girls 4 to 11, enjoyed gymnastics, sports, bowling, crafts, a magic show, gymnastic performances, water play and much more.

Camp counselors were Ruthann Ardizzoni, Mary Brennock, Kathy Mirachi, Caitlin Sanchez, Nancy Durkin, Melissa Crawford, and Kate Carpenter.

The one-day Holiday Camp, for children 4 to 11, will be held from 9:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m., Thursday, Dec. 27.

Fall registration for gymnastics and sports classes is underway. For more information call the center at 781-383-0088.

Visions of Peace on the Labyrinth

Commemorating Sept. 11, with visions of peace both in word and image, will take place as a walking meditation on the candlelit Labyrinth at Old Ship, from 7:30 to 9 p.m., Tuesday, Sept.11, at Fellowship Hall, 107 Main St., diagonally across the street from Old Ship Church in Hingham.

While walking the labyrinth, participants will be able to view oversize posters of peace prayers from a variety of religious traditions. Music for experiencing inner quiet will be heard from San Francisco's Grace Cathedral's Labyrinth musicians on CD.

A gift to the community in 1999, the Labyrinth at Old Ship is a spiral design embedded on to the terrazzo floor of Fellowship Hall and is a replica of the labyrinth at the Cathedral of Chartres in France. As a symbol of the sacred, the spiral is found in many cultures throughout human history and allows for the spiritual practice of a walking meditation.

Free to the public, the Labyrinth at Old Ship is open from 7:30 to 9 p.m., the second Tuesday of each month throughout the year. Special events such as poetry readings, Winter Solstice and New Year's Eve walking meditations are also held.

For more information, call the church office from 8:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m., Monday through Friday, at 781-749-1679.

Sept. 11 remembrance

Everyone is invited to attend a Sept. 11, 2001 remembrance service beginning at 9 a.m., Tuesday (Sept. 11) on Cohasset Common. The American Legion and the Cohasset Police and Fire Departments are coordinating the service, which will pay homage to the men and women who lost their lives and who were affected by the acts of terrorism on 9/11.

Flags will be flown at half-staff acknowledging those who lost their lives at the World Trade Center, the Pentagon and in Pennsylvania.

Music at the Gazebo concert series to start

Sponsored by the Pyne Keohane Funeral Home of Hingham, Music at the Gazebo concerts will take place this year from 3 to 4:30 p.m., on Sept. 9, 16 and 23. These three free Sunday afternoon concerts will entertain the community with Big Band favorites for the 11th summer in a row.

The opening concert on Sunday, Sept. 9, will feature the return of local favorite, Gregg Savage Quintet, which is sure to keep the audience toe tapping to tunes from the Big Band era, swing and Dixieland.

On the second Sunday, Bobbi Carrey and Doug Hammer revisit the Gazebo to impress locals with their new show "Mostly Mercer." Carrey has also had a stellar career performing to critical acclaim in the Boston and Cambridge markets. Free Music at the Gazebo T-shirts will be given to the first 150 concertgoers on this day.

The third and final Sunday at the Gazebo will feature a band new to the concert series, Tom Nutile Band. They will be playing a variety of musical genres from swing to modern jazz. Having first started with Tom's father Roy, Tom Nutile Band has been on the Boston scene for years, and in more recent times played at the opening of Zakim Bridge and Harvest Ball at the Prudential Center. The band will be bringing five of its 14 members to Hull where they hope to become an audience favorite.

"We are extremely grateful that the Hull Memorial Commission and the Veterans Memorial Park allow us to hold these concerts," said Dennis Keohane of Pyne Keohane Funeral Home. "Big Band era music has been particularly influential to American culture and is respected by people of many different ages. These American classics will make for a fun and delightful time for the entire family". Pyne Keohane Funeral Home donated the Gazebo to Veterans Memorial Park in 1996.

The park is at the intersection of Nantasket and Samoset avenues, across from Lucky Star Restaurant. Free parking is available at Hull Redevelopment Authority in the adjacent lot. Concertgoers should bring their own seating. Performances will be canceled in case of rain.

FALL ARTS PREVIEW

Fall's coming. Time to get serious.

Summer is the season of vacations and light entertainment (hey, "Knocked Up" was the film of the summer), but when fall rolls around we once again get serious about work, about school and about entertainment. The Greater Boston cultural organizations are in high gear, preparing a season full of terrific work that will both challenge and entertain you. And don't worry: If your idea of a night out is to just relax and laugh, then there's plenty of shows for you, too.

And we're not content to just tell you about the jam-packed fall arts scene, we want to help get you there. In this section, you'll find our Seats for the Season contest. Enter to win tickets to some of the most highly anticipated shows of the year.

So read on. Make your fall plans. And enjoy.

Staging dance is quite a feet

A pleasing array of styles are represented in this fall line-up

By Francis Ma

Call us crazy, but we like "Dancing With the Stars." It sends a good message: If any goof with two left feet (hello, Jerry Springer) can get up there and dance in front of the entire nation, why can't you get up and do your pathetic dance moves in the relative obscurity of your local dance establishments?

Dance: There's not enough of it in our lives. Here are some chances to get some more.

Boston Ballet launches its new season with the help of Sorella Englund, who stages the 1836 masterpiece "La Sylphide." It's a story about the fate of a groom who falls for a forest fairy a couple of days before his wedding. The lesson here? Never get married. Boston Ballet performed the ballet in Spain over the summer. It plays Oct. 18-28.

Fine, you want to get married and have the party. Well, before you run out on the dance floor to show off your "patented moves," get some pointers from watching the "Ballet Folklórico de México" on Oct. 20 at the Orpheum Theatre. A total of 48 dancers, musicians and singers make up Mexico's national dance company. They incorporate a number of the country's regional folk dances, as well as Mayan and Aztec rituals. This will be an exciting visual history, and much-needed education, of Mexican dance.

You get a little history, and lots of beautiful dance, with "Ballet Folklórico de México," Oct. 20 at the Orpheum Theatre.

While traditional dance can be enjoyed by almost anyone, contemporary dance should only be handled by those who don't mind thinking outside of the box. Maureen Fleming's "Waters of Immortality" celebrates the feminine archetype through inventive body movements, the poetry of William Butler Yeats, and with the help of pianist Peter Phillips performing the music of Philip Glass. And if that isn't enough, Flemming incorporates three-dimensional video. The performance is at the ICA, Nov. 2-4. Heads up: this show contains nudity.

Not only is Shaolin kung fu "the heart and soul of Chinese martial arts culture," but it's also responsible for such films as "American Shaolin" and "Shaolin Soccer" (skip the first, see the second). Here, the Shaolin Warriors Troupe, which has over 20 kung fu masters, turn their skill into a seductive dance in "Shaolin Warriors," at the Orpheum Theatre on Nov. 17.

Dance doesn't have to be serious all the time and the Seán Curran Company proves that with this performance at the Tsai Performance Center, Oct. 26-28. A former member of the original New York cast of STOMP, Curran fuses his dance with intelligence and physical comedy for a show that's a pleasure for the whole family.

The Argentine Tango Society presents "iTango" at the John Hancock Hall at the Back Bay Events Center on Oct. 14. Each of the 14 performers will explore their personal relationship with "the dance of love" (includes classic tangos, milongas and vases, and contemporary pieces). Thankfully, your relationship with tango (stepping on your partners toes and falling down) will be omitted. Maybe Apple will come out with a device to help your two left feet soon.

But out of all the ballets and dances mentioned here, only one serves alcohol: Jose Mateo Ballet Theatre's "Covens" at the Sanctuary Theatre in Cambridge, Oct. 5-28. "Covens" is performed, like most Jose Mateo shows, with wonderfully intimate, cabaret-style seating, and, yes, the chance for a glass of wine that just may come in handy as you watch a ballet about a woman being tormented by witch-hunters and going crazy thanks to her "deceptive partner."

Curtain Call Theater, Braintree

Hingham celebrates the arts with a walk

For hundreds of years, historic downtown Hingham has been the heart of the community. The harbor was the center of trade for craftsmen, shops and restaurants. It was also the home to a vibrant community of artists living and working within walking distance of the Square. That tradition continues today as the second annual Hingham Arts Walk celebrates this rich history.

The community is invited to discover and explore Hingham's thriving, creative downtown during the 2007 Hingham Arts Walk, which will be held Sunday, Oct. 21, from noon to 5 p.m. In addition to meeting artists in their studios, visitors can stroll through Hingham's historic architecture, meet artists at special exhibits in shops and other spaces, see arts demonstrations, sample harvest treats, mingle with neighbors and enjoy live music.

The walk, organized by the Hingham Downtown Association together with the Hingham Cultural Council, will feature the studios of several downtown artists including Joan Brancale, Jack Dickerson, Gary Nisbet, Page Railsback and Vcevy Strekalovksy. This is a unique opportunity for visitors to see artists' workspace and talk to dozens of artists about their work. For more information, contact info@discoverhingham.com or visit www.discoverhingham. com.

Visitors see a range of works at Jack Dickerson's Main Street studio.

Weymouth Art Association

Members of the Weymouth Art Association are invited to submit artwork to display at the Weymouth Day Exhibit Saturday, Sept. 29, at Weymouth High School.

Members only may exhibit one piece and paintings must be original and be framed and wired. Copies and prints are accepted. Paintings must also be dry and not larger that 36-by-36" before framing. Sculpture must be displayed on your own pedestal. Artwork can be delivered to Weymouth High School between 8 and 10 a.m. Additional information is available on the WAA Web site, www.weymouthartassn.org.

The Association is also holding an exhibit Saturday, Dec. 8, through Saturday, Dec. 15, at the Tufts Library in Weymouth. Both members and non-members may exhibit one or two pieces only. Details of this exhibit are also available on the Web site.

Your search for a classical fall

Late and great composers featured by a wide array of companies

By Ed Symkus

Boston and its suburbs have long been a center for classical music, with world class venues such as Symphony Hall, Jordan Hall and Sanders Theatre, as well as institutions including New England Conservatory, Boston Conservatory, All Newton Music School and Walnut Hill School. The local classical season generally begins in the fall and, in the case of many organizations, runs right through to the spring. The following is only a partial listing of concerts and subscription seasons up through Thanksgiving. Information on complete concert seasons is available at the Web sites.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra's busy Symphony Hall season includes James Levine conducting All-Ravel programs (Oct. 4-6), works by Berg and Mahler (Nov. 8-10), a Mahler program (Nov. 13), works by Haydn, Carter, Mahler (Nov. 15, 17, 20). Guest conductors for other programs include Robert Spano, Christoph von Dohnanyi, Lars Vogt, Marek Janowski, Markus Stenz. Call 888-266-1200 or visit www.bso.org.

Boston Lyric Opera brings a taste of Puccini to the Shubert Theatre with "La Boheme" (Nov. 2-13). Call 617-542-6772 or visit www.blo.org.

Berlin Philharmonic: If you have a taste for European Orchestra, here's your chance to hear one without traveling overseas. The Celebrity Series brings the Berlin Philharmonic to Symphony Hall in Boston on Nov. 19. www.celebrity series.org

The Handel and Haydn Society visits Symphony Hall for "Distinctly Beethoven (Oct. 19 & 21). Call 617-266-3605 or visit www.handelandhaydn.org.

Boston Baroque brings Mozart's "Cosi Fan Tutte" to Jordan Hall, Boston (Oct. 12 & 13). Call 617-484-9200 or visit www.bostonbaroque.org.

The St. Lawrence String Quartet brings its intense energy and sense of adventure to its performance of a program that includes Chausson, Schubert and Beethoven. They play Jordan Hall in Boston, on Nov. 18. www.celebrityseries.org

South Shore Art Center

The South Shore Art Center is a non-profit organization based in the coastal area south of Boston. The facility in Cohasset features appealing galleries and teaching studios that offer exhibitions and gallery programs, sales of fine art and studio crafts, courses and workshops, outreach to schools, and special events. Membership and participation are invited.

Sept. 14 through Oct. 28, Women Who Travel will be featured, with an opening reception scheduled for Friday, Sept. 14, from 6 to 8 p.m. Artini After Hours is scheduled for Friday, Oct. 12. Featuring festive food and martini samplings there will also be small art pieces donated by art center artists on display. More details will soon be available on the center's Web site, www.ssac.org. The center is located at 119 Ripley Road in Cohasset. Additional information is available by called 781-383-2787 or visiting the Web site. Regular hours are Monday through Saturday, 10 a.m. to 4 p.m., and Sunday, noon to 4 p.m.

The mission of the South Shore Art Center is to enrich the communities south of Boston by fostering an understanding and appreciation of the visual arts through exhibitions and education.

Fall Family Festival at Forbes

The Fall Family Festival at the Forbes House Museum (FHM) is taking on a whole new twist this year. The Museum's 13-year collaboration with the Neponset River Watershed Association (NepRWA) is again featuring events that highlight the beauty and preservation of the Neponset River and its surrounding Watershed. The entire event will take place on Saturday, Sept. 15 (rain date Sunday, Sept. 16) from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

The day will feature plein air artists creating original works in various mediums all over the grounds and throughout Hutchinson Field. You can see the creative process in progress and even purchase these original masterpieces direct from the artists themselves. The whole family will enjoy the 2nd Annual Artisan Festival with dozens of local artists displaying their high-quality, hand-made artwork for sale. There will be something for everyone including the children as there will be child-focused craft projects, face-painting, guided nature tours of the estuary, and the cookie decorating that everyone has come to love about the annual Fall Family Day. There will also be musical entertainment by Murphy's Kitchen. The entrance fee to all of the festivities, including the children's crafts, is covered by one $5 per person donation, which supports both the FHM and NepRWA organizations. Refreshments will be available for an additional charge.

The museum is located at 215 Adams St. in Milton. Visit forbeshousemuseum.org for additional information.

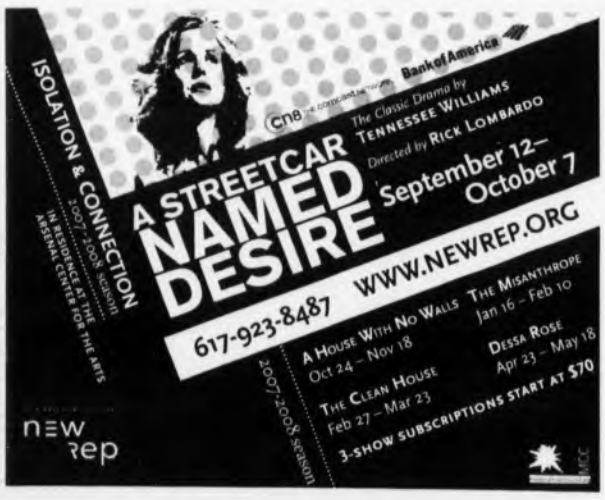
Stop. Look. Think.

Lots to see and ponder at museums this fall

By Keith Powers

"Just Looking," the great title of John Updike's book on visiting museums, is the perfect way to describe this fall's upcoming exhibitions. But instead of "Just Looking," there may be some thinking, talking, and learning as well.

The Museum of Fine Arts, in the midst of a half-billion dollar expansion program, offers one of the more interestingly titled exhibitions ever: "Shy Boy, She Devil and Isis." It's a collection of contemporary decorative arts — and we're not talking your grandmother's rocking chair here. Opens Sept. 11, and runs through Jan. 6. Other fall exhibitions at the MFA include three separate shows of Japanese art, including "Sumo, Japan's Big Sport," which highlights paintings and woodblock prints of sumo wrestlers.



With its swanky new waterfront location and greatly expanded physical resources, the Institute of Contemporary Art has dozens of programs and exhibitions this fall. One of the most interesting events is a one-day photo show, with narrators and musicians (including Yo-Yo Ma), which is focused on the ongoing bloodshed in Sudan's Darfur region. The exhibition, "Darfur/Darfur," takes place Sept. 7. Among the other fall highlights include the second show of the ICA's new permanent collection, "Accumulations."

Jackson Pollock fans will probably be riveted by the just-opened "Pollock Matters" exhibit at Boston College's McMullen Museum of Art. The show explores the relationship between Pollock and noted photographer Herbert Matter. Their relationship is at the center of a fascinating debate: whether 25 paintings recently discovered in a storage facility belonging to Matter are actually the work of Pollock. The paintings are part of the exhibit, which runs through Dec. 9.

Lots to see this fall. Enjoy.

Bringing Mama Rose to life

By R. Scott Reedy
CORRESPONDENT

In the musical "Gypsy," the character of Mama Rose gets to belt out all the best show-stoppers, but that doesn't prevent audiences from seeing her for what she really is - the ultimate stage mother, a woman willing to lie, cheat and steal to make her daughters famous. Indeed, while many people love watching Mama Rose in action on stage, most would cross the street if they saw her coming their way in real life. Caitlin Lowans - director of a new production of the classic show opening at Stoneham Theatre next week - thinks there is more to Mama Rose, however, than just craven ambition and greed.

"This is really the story of a woman and her many missed opportunities. Rose believes her intentions are good. I've really come to love her," explained Lowans last week from her home in Milton. "My hope for our production is that it will help people understand this woman even if they don't like her. We need to understand her, because there is a little bit of Mama Rose in all of us."

Milton resident Caitlin Lowans directs the new production of the classic musical "Gypsy" opening at Stoneham Theatre next week.

Based on the 1957 memoirs of actress and burlesque entertainer Gypsy Rose Lee, "Gypsy" — with a book by Arthur Laurents, music by Jule Styne, and lyrics by Stephen Sondheim, and first mounted on Broadway in 1959 in a production starring Ethel Merman and directed by Jerome Robbins — tells the vaudeville-era story of Lee (Louise), her sister, June Havoc (Dainty June), and their overbearing mother, Rose. Billed as a musical fable, the show has been produced on Broadway four times in the last 48 years, winning a total of three Tony and two Grammy Awards along the way. It has also made "Let Me Entertain You," "Some People," "Everything's Coming Up Roses," and "Rose's Turn" fixtures in every Broadway songbook.

"It ups the ante when you're working on an iconic musical theater piece like 'Gypsy.' You're not dealing with just memories, because everyone can still listen to the original cast recordings of Ethel Merman, Angela Lansbury [1974], Tyne Daly [1989], and Bernadette Peters [2003], and that means that everyone has their favorite Mama Rose,' says Lowans, whose own mother, Susan Lowans, makes her home in Plymouth.

In Stoneham, Leigh Barrett, a favorite on the Boston theater scene, takes on the role. And Lowans thinks the two-time Elliot Norton Award winner has just what it takes.

"Leigh is a really great actress. She won this year's Norton Award for Outstanding Musical Performance for playing a bad singer, something she is definitely not, in 'Souvenir' at the Lyric Stage and for her work in 'Ragtime' at the New Rep. Leigh won her first Norton in 2003 for her work in four different musicals that year. I've worked with Leigh twice before at Stoneham on Cole Porter's 'You Never Know' last season and on 'Pal Joey' in 2005. Leigh has both the voice and the acting ability for this role and this show. She has played strong women before, and Mama Rose is a fierce woman."

Doing whatever she can to advance her young daughters' careers doesn't always mean doing what's best for the other young performers in their vaudeville act. In Stoneham, some of these roles will be played by performers from the theater's "Young Co.," which gives children three and up the opportunity to learn about theater under the direction of Lowans, the Theatre's Director of Education, who graduated from Milton Academy in 1999 and the Georgetown University School of Foreign Service in 2003.

"The children are building skills in our education program and then applying them to mainstage productions like this one. Our young performers have tremendous energy. In this show, it is very important that we see how Mama Rose drags the young children in her act around from one vaudeville house to another. The young roles should be played by young performers. On Broadway, teenaged characters are often played by people in their mid-20s, which never works that well. When you have actual young people playing these parts, it really helps to tell the seedier side of Mama Rose's story."

(Pictured (r to l): Eve Kagan as Louise and Leigh Barrett as Mama Rose in "Gypsy" which will open Stoneham Theatre's 2007 - 2008 season Sept. 13 - 30.

Rose's story, however, isn't only about her mean-spirited manipulation of those around her. It also has elements of romance and humor.

"There are so many things that this show is about — old love and new love chief among them. The script is very strong. It allows the show to go in many directions. In the first production, the romance between Rose (Merman) and the girls' manager, Herbie (Jack Klugman), was emphasized. Later, the relationship between Louise and her mother was given more emphasis. Most recently, there has been a shift to a focus on three clear relationships — Rose's with Herbie, Rose's with Louise, and finally the Herbie and Louise relationship. The latter is important, because it is only Herbie and Louise who stay with Rose until the end."

While Rose's story is at the center of the piece, Lowans believes there are many reasons for the show's enduing popularity.

"There is a well-balanced blend of humor and tragedy. There are amazingly seamless transitions, such as the one from a serious moment between Rose and Louise when the pair is reaching the bottom of their family's fortunes right into "You Gotta Get a Gimick," which may just be the funniest number in the whole show. Three masters — Laurents, Styne, and Sondheim — collaborated on 'Gypsy' and the result is real artistry. When it comes to American musical theater, 'Gypsy' is like Shakespeare. It is that well-known and that good."

Stoneham Theatre, 395 Main St., Stoneham, will present "Gypsy," Sept. 13-30. For tickets and information, visit the box office, call 781-279-2200 or go online at stonehamtheatre.org

Movie review

More 'Champ' than chump

Resurrecting the Champ (A-)

Film Review

By Al Alexander

Josh Hartnett will never be Matt Damon or Leonardo DiCaprio, but he's no Matthew McConaughey, either. He's much like the professional athlete who plays to the level of his competition.

Put him in "The Black Dahlia" or "Pearl Harbor," and he's an endless source of unintentional humor. But cast him in something like "Lucky Number Slevin" or "Sin City," movies that capitalizes on his vacuous good looks and dim-bulb persona, and he's almost credible.

In "Resurrecting the Champ," the story of a lightweight boxing writer working a heavyweight story that might be too good to be true, Hartnett benefits from the support of past Oscar-nominees Samuel L. Jackson and Alan Alda and director in Rod Lurie.

Not only does this perfect storm of talent lift Hartnett's game to peak level, it lifts everyone around him. The result is one of the best films of the summer, as Lurie crafts an affecting indictment of both hero worship and an increasingly reckless news media.

Back in the days of "All the President's Men," Washington Post editor Ben Bradlee famously demanded at least two sources before printing a story.

Nowadays, in the age of the Internet and cable news, facts don't always get in the way of a good story, simply because there's little time to check if you hope to beat the competition.

Living on that ethical edge is as dangerous as it is foolhardy, as Hartnett's Erik Kernan discovers when he literally stumbles upon a story that could either make or break his fledgling journalism career.

And it couldn't happen at a more crucial time. He just had a discouraging sit-down with his editor (Alda), who tells him that even though he's fast and productive, his writing lacks charisma — a quality his late father, as he's constantly being reminded, had in spades.

Erik (Josh Hartnett) and Champ (Samuel L. Jackson) share hard-luck stories.

His ticket to respectability comes in the form of a raspy-voiced homeless man (Jackson) claiming to be 1950s boxing legend Battling Bob Satterfield, who once came within a whisker of winning a title shot opposite the pride of Brockton, Rocky Marciano.

"Isn't he dead?" is the common reply Erik hears as he tirelessly pitches his idea of "resurrecting the champ" with a Sunday magazine piece about the rise and fall of a boxing legend.

Erik gets the green light, starting a fascinating relationship in which a washed-up, slightly delusional ex-boxer provides a washed-up slightly delusional journalist a shot at his profession's heavyweight title: the Pulitzer.

Inspired by the true story of L.A. Times journalist J.R. Moehringer, writers Michael Bortman and Allison Burnett create a fascinating, multilayered study that on one level is an indictment of a society that's quick to toss its sports heroes aside once they pass their prime; and on another, a wrenching portrait of a man who'll do anything to become a hero in his young son's eyes.

Lurie brings it all together with intelligence, heart and just a dash of cynicism directed at fickle sports fans and contemporary journalist that place themselves ahead of their stories.

But it's his ability to make us empathize with the father and son that packs the KO punch.

The movies benefits from a strong corner man in director Lurie, whose worth to actors is evidenced by the Oscar nominations Jeff Bridges and Joan Allen received for Lurie's "The Contender" and the Emmy nods that went to Donald Sutherland and Geena Davis for "Commander in Chief."

Might that same lightning strike Hartnett? Let's not get carried away, but the terrific work of Jackson and Alda is certainly worthy of such recognition, as both summon performances that are richly textured and hauntingly real.

More of them and less of Erik's obsession of winning the respect of his son and estranged wife (Kathryn Morris) would have been preferable. But then, you can't have everything, a lesson painfully absorbed by two men who coulda been contenders, if not for the glass jaw of their integrity.

Rated PG-13. "Resurrecting the Champ" contains some violence and brief language.

Dictionaries make the grade

Rotary Club donates books to third graders

In the age of cell phone texting and instant messaging, correct and formal spelling has fallen to the wayside in favor of abbreviations and acronyms. However, in academic and professional arenas, correct spelling (and good vocabulary) is essential.

The Cohasset Rotary Club, a group of about 25 local professionals from business owners to attorneys, recognizes the importance of giving kids the tools to succeed. Last week, they presented each Deer Hill third grader with a new Webster's Dictionary for Students.

"We hope the dictionaries help the kids build confidence in themselves and their knowledge," says Rotarian and chairwoman of the project, Jean Roche, "a dictionary is always something that can help them."

The Rotary Club joined forces with an international non-profit organization, Dictionary Project. The goal of the program is to assist all students in completing the school year as good writers, active readers and creative thinkers by providing students with their own personal dictionary. In 2006, Dictionary Project was the vehicle thousands of local groups used to provide over 1.9 million kids with personal dictionaries.

Override proposed

Capital budget looks to future

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

The Capital Budget Committee wants to do its job of defining town's long-term capital priorities and their potential impact upon capital structure. Up to this point, the committee main responsibility has been to review capital requests before Town Meeting and determine the most urgent needs in the town.

The Capital Budget Committee becomes much more effective to the town if there is an acknowledgement capital is worthwhile and it needs to be maintained and replaced periodically, said, chairman of the Capital Budget Committee.

To that end, the Capital Budget Committee at Monday night's Board of Selectmen meeting proposed having a $500,000 override this year in order to build up reserves for capital maintenance and small expenses. The "capital stabilization fund," a separate fund dedicated to capital improvements, in the future would maintain a balance of $2 to $3 million. The money would be used for capital maintenance; new, non-bonded purchases; and possibly down payments on bonded projects.

"We've been dealing with things as they come up, rather than looking ahead," said Gaumer, with a predictable amount of funding available, the Committee believes it will be able to anticipate town capital needs and put more forethought into acquisition. It would also lessen competition between town departments for limited capital resource monies.

The committee, with extensive help from Director of Finance Michael

Other side of the tracks

Cohasset home is landlocked by train

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

At the very edge of town, there is an island. A home with no way to get in or out, an address no one can find and one woman looking for a resolution. That woman, Rosalie Collins, is finding out exactly what it is like to be from the "other side of the tracks."

While Collins' address is 425 South Main St. during the duration of her 30-year home ownership access to her home was by Lincoln Lane, off South Main Street just before the Scituate line.

During construction of the MBTA's Greenbush line Lincoln Lane, a private driveway, was closed to through traffic. No grade crossing was planned for Lincoln Lane and therefore no through traffic to the Collins home. Both the Collins family and the town understood the MBTA would help the property owners obtain another access point to their property.

Two years later, Collins is still waiting for legal access to her property. With little time left before the MBTA wraps up Greenbush construction, Collins has taken her circumstances to the Town seeking aid and support.

Collins was scheduled to come before the Board of Selectmen on Monday night, but was advised by her attorneys to refrain from discussing the situation at this time. She declined to comment for the Mariner as well. In a letter to Town Manager Bill Griffin, she explains her "landlocked situation" and how she trusted the MBTA to solve it over the last two years.

"I have been without the town services of fire, ambulance, snow removal, bus route and access to my mailbox as the town of Cohasset has no access to my property."
Rosalie Collins, educator at Osgood School.

"I have been without the town services of fire, ambulance, snow removal, bus route and access to my mailbox as the town of Cohasset has no access to my property," states Collins, an educator at Osgood School. Tom Gruber, town liaison for Greenbush affairs, has been in contact with Collins throughout the Greenbush construction appeared at the meeting in her stead to explain Collins's "crisis situation."

"Right now, there is no legal access to the property," said Gruber, providing a map of the area surrounding the Collins

Parking predicament

Red Lion offers $500K to build parking lot

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Parking in the Village is a problem, but Red Lion Inn owner Gerd Ordelheide may have a solution. Along with a proposed expansion with 32 additional units, Ordelheide is interested in turning a one-acre town-owned parcel, nestled between the train tracks, the Teen Center and the Red Lion Inn into over 60 parking spaces — on his own dime.

The Red Lion Inn's wedding business is booming and makes up 65 percent of its business, Ordelheide reported. However, the Inn has limited space for the thousands of people who attend weddings each year.

"I'm filling up the Clarion [in Hull] and the Cohasset Harbor Inn," said Ordelheide thereby losing out on a significant amount of business generated from his establishment.

In conjunction with a proposed $5 to $6.5 million expansion, he is willing to invest $500,000 in creating a parking lot on the town-owned parcel. He would pay for the construction, but the town would still own the land and anyone would be allowed to park there. Preliminary designs estimate the lot could accommodate between 61 and 71 spaces.

The additional 32 units would be built on the current gravel parking lot behind the Inn. Some would be available for timeshares. In constructing the new units, the Red Lion Inn will essentially lose the only private parking it has, just how many parking spaces are on the property is unclear because the spaces are not lined. For that reason, the proposed parking lot on town land is vital to the expansion plans.

Vice Chairman Ted Carr was particularly concerned with the impact the additional rooms would have on the abutting residential area. Carr lives at 88 South Main St. across the street from the Red Lion Inn. Previous to the meeting, Carr consulted with Town Counsel and the State Ethics Commission to make sure he could participate in the discus-

Most memorable moment: The realization that the more effort I put into connecting with students, the more students will believe for themselves that they achieve their own level of success.

Pet peeve: Ignorance...what a wonderful world this would be if everyone just practiced a little more tolerance!

Goal: To leave the world a little bit better than I found it.

Person you'd most like to meet: Hillary Clinton.

Biggest worry: One day all of my students will be taller than I am!

Best part of Cohasset: The community here at the Middle School.

Dedication of Beechwood Ballpark

The Beechwood Ballpark has a whole new look. To commemorate the completion of ballpark renovations the Beechwood Ballpark Committee will hold a dedication ceremony and celebration on Saturday, Sept. 29 at 10 a.m. at the field. The celebration will be packed with activities for the whole family including a homerun contest, an old-timers baseball game, kids games, face painting, a basketball shooting contest, antique cars, food and more. Mark your calendar for this fun event.

Cohasset awarded stormwater grant

The Town of Cohasset has been awarded a $150,000 state grant to implement stormwater best management practices in the Little Harbor district. The grant will be matched with $100,000 of town funds already secured at the 2007 Annual Town Meeting. The section 319 nonpoint source grant will allow stormwater best management practices be installed to alleviate ongoing flooding issues in and around Little Harbor. Cohasset was one of only 11 municipalities to receive the grant from the state.

Cohasset was one of only 11 municipalities to receive the grant from the state.

Town Manager Bill Griffin congratulated the Stormwater Management Committee and its engineering consultant Mark Bartlett from Norfolk Ram for their work in securing the grant. The Stormwater Management Committee and the Town Manager will oversee the project and its funds.

Department of Corrections

An article, which ran in last week's Mariner, "Going to the dogs" incorrectly gave the All Four Paws business address. All Four Paws is located at 828 Chief Justice Cushing Highway, near the Cohasset-Scituate line.

Also, the new "official" start date of Greebush is Oct. 29, not Oct. 19.

This building, which housed the Donna Green Studio for 15 years, is empty and for rent. The historic, former blacksmith shop, is owned by the Vanderlugt family.

Historic blacksmith shop is empty

Former Donna Green Studio is for rent

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Donna Green has closed her art studio on Elm Street but the tiny, historic building might not be empty for long.

Judith Vanderlugt Bucher, whose family owns the building, which is across from Flemings and uses the address 11 Ship Cove Lane, says the family has received several calls from people interested in leasing the structure.

She said her family is not interested in selling the building that started out as a blacksmith shop but has also housed a newspaper store, barbershop, cooperage, curio shop and bakery.

Her father, the late Hubert Vanderlugt, who established Hub Shipping Company formerly on Elm Street, restored the 200-year-old structure 15 years ago.

"We would like to rent it and keep it in the family."
— Judith Vanderlugt Bucher

"We would like to rent it and keep it in the family," Bucher said.

So far a range of businesses from a gourmet food shop to a dress shop has expressed interest in the location, Bucher said.

Green described leaving the building as "very emotional for all of us." Green said her mother, daughter and son are all artists and they needed more space. She is opening an expanded studio on her farm in Marshfield, which will include the fairy loft — so beloved by visitors to her Cohasset studio.

Green's five-acre Marshfield Hills location at 575 Summer St. is also the home of the Magical Moon Foundation, an organization Green established for children with cancer.

"My son and daughter grew up there," Green said about 11 Ship Cove Lane where she spent 15 years. She said inside the building there were remnants of the old cooperage that made barrels for fish caught off Cohasset. "It had a real feng sui about it," she said.

POLICE BEAT

15-year-olds face marijuana charges

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Two 15-year-old Cohasset juveniles are facing marijuana charges after the high school contacted police last Wednesday (Sept. 5), the second day of school. The call came into dispatch at 8:39 a.m.

Chief James Hussey said, "the school through its rules and procedures discovered a situation and reported it to us as part of the Memorandum of Understanding between the schools and police.

"Based in the information supplied to us, the youths will be summonsed into court."

One of the juveniles is facing charges of possession of marijuana and conspiracy to violate the drug laws; the other is facing only the conspiracy charge because no marijuana was found in his possession.

Hussey explained "conspiracy" means two or more people acting in concert to break the law.

"We all want the schools to be safe havens and do not want anyone to bring in an illegal substance," he said. "The school was on top of this and contacted us. The schools and police are working to keep our schools free of drugs and alcohol."

The names of the students have not been released because they are juveniles.

Through the Memorandum of Understanding, schools and police have established an effective line of communication between the school and police departments and clear procedures regarding the reporting of hate crimes, sex crimes, weapons and the use, possession, and distribution of drugs and/or alcohol within the schools, on school grounds, and at school- sponsored events.

Shoplifting

A Hingham man is facing a larceny charge of property valued at more than $250 after allegedly shoplifting $460 worth of goods from Stop & Shop last Sunday (Sept. 9).

A witness, who is employed at Shaw's but was shopping at Stop & Shop, saw the man leave the store with a carriage full of unbagged items and put them into his car. The witness got the plate number and notified the manager, who called Cohasset police. Cohasset police determined the man's car was registered to a Hingham address; they met up with Hingham police and located the vehicle. The man will be summonsed to court on the larceny charge. There was another man who appeared to be with the alleged shoplifter at Stop & Shop, but further investigation revealed the second man was not involved, police said.

Identity theft

A Cohasset man has told police that his ex-girlfriend has set up Verizon accounts using his name and without his permission. He filed the report on Wed. (Sept. 5). He discovered this through a credit report and after talking to a collection agency.

The man wanted the issue logged but will try to work out some sort of resolution with his ex-girlfriend before seeking criminal charges, Chief Hussey said.

Faulty truck

A State Police truck team was called to inspect a 1990 Mack garbage truck that a Cohasset officer had stopped on Route 3A near Crocker Lane at just past 8 p.m. on Wednesday (Sept. 5). The officer called for the special team after discovering the truck had no taillights, no marker lights and one headlight out.

"The officer had concerns that there might be more problems with the truck," Chief Hussey said.

A State Trooper responded to the scene and found multiple problems including faulty brakes, tires and the lack of lights.

Multiple citations were issued to the driver; the truck was towed after it was put out of service by the State Police.

Appliances stolen

A builder returned to a property off Pond Street that is under construction to discover that someone had made off with the refrigerator stored in the garage of the new house.

The incident was reported on Labor Day. But before work finished up for the holiday weekend, someone also took the dishwasher from the future residence, police said.

Chief Hussey explained that at a building site, a lot of people and trucks come and go and perhaps the subjects in this case were able to blend in.

Police canvassed the area and detectives have taken photos and fingerprints. The incidents remain under investigation.

OUI blamed on accident

Police say alcohol was a factor in a single-vehicle accident on Sunday (Sept. 2), just after midnight.

A 50-year-old Cohasset man is being summonsed to court on charges of operating under the influence of alcohol; leaving the scene of an accident; and marked lanes violation.

Chief Hussey said the Ford pickup the resident was driving ran into a tree and stonewall near the intersection of Beechwood Street and Norman Todd Road. The officers at the scene saw some blood on the vehicle but the driver was no longer there. They initiated a search of the area and found the man in the bushes.

"Based on their observations of him and his condition, and the extent of his injuries, he was taken to the hospital," Hussey said.

Eyes off the road

A motorist, who explained he had taken his eyes off the road just for a second, ran off the road and into a tree on Hull Street last Sunday (Sept. 9). The accident occurred at about 10:20 a.m.; the man's 2005 Volkswagen was headed west on Hull Street near Cedar Street when the accident occurred. The man had a toddler in the car. Both the man and the toddler were checked out and neither had to be transported to the hospital, police said.

The VW had to be towed and the operator was cited for failure to stay in marked lanes.

Capital budget committee looks to future

Buckley and Town Manager Bill Griffin, estimated the cost to replace the town's capital assets (public buildings, land, athletic fields, parks, roadways, bridges, piers, seawalls, fire and police vehicles, sewer and water infrastructure etc.) would be $93 million. The rough estimate for annual depreciation of the inventory is over $3.1 million.

"This what we should be putting aside each year" to maintain current capital, said Gaumer. Currently, the budget allocates no funds to capital projects or maintenance. Like many other towns in the state, Cohasset has depended on free cash, a term used for surplus in the budget, to fund necessary capital projects or undertook major bonded projects to add to debt service.

"When times got tough, towns wouldn't do capital projects," said Griffin. In Fiscal 2006, there was no capital budget spending. In Fiscal 2007, $307,600 was appropriated for capital projects and equipment. So far for FY08, the town has appropriated $155,000, with some additional spending possible at the fall special Town Meeting.

"We've been dealing with things as they come up, rather than looking ahead."

Steve Gaumer, chairman

Selectman Paul Carlson asked how monies for the capital stabilization fund would be tracked and set aside. If the capital stabilization fund was established, each year Town Meeting would need to approve an article allocating monies to the fund, said Griffin.

All capital maintenance would not come out of the capital stabilization fund. Regular maintenance, cleaning and minor repairs, would still come out of the operating budget. Larger repair costs, like vehicle repair, would come from the stabilization fund as well as smaller capital investments. The capital fund may have a side benefit for larger bonded projects by improving the town's financial outlook it may lower the town's borrowing cost, said Gaumer.

One of the problems with using free cash for capital improvement is there is little to no predictability year to year of what will be available making it difficult to plan ahead even five years ahead, said Griffin.

"The town has survived for 200 years" without a capital fund like this, said Chairman Gary Vanderweil. However, Advisory Committee Chairman Merle Brown, who was in the audience, disagreed. He said maintenance has fallen to the wayside only in the last 20 years, since Prop. 2-1/2 was instituted. When the schools were built, maintenance and upkeep were a big issue and "people are interested in maintaining what we've got," said Brown.

Based on early projections of the Fiscal 2009 budget to be approved at the Spring Town Meeting, the town is facing a $400,000 shortfall and override vote. The Board of Selectmen took the proposal under consideration.

sion. Because he is not a direct abutter, the Commission determined there is no legal conflict, he said.

"I hear regularly there are noise issues associated with the Inn," said Carr and his fear was the additional rooms would not only bring the Inn closer to the surrounding residential area but also increase activity later into the evening.

Michael and Rowena Karp of 91 South Main St., direct abutters of the Red Lion Inn, seconded Carr's concerns listing numerous inconveniences created by living next to the Inn including noise, privacy and car safety. The Karps felt the issues would only be exacerbated (and create new problems) if the expansion and associated parking lot were allowed.

"Do we want to commit this vacant lot to parking? Could we put it out to bid for development purposes?" asked Chairman Gary Vanderweil. Determining if a parking lot was the "highest and best use of the land" seemed to be the major question. A parking lot on this land has been bounced around for a couple of years, ever since the MBTA took away about 30 of village parking spaces.

However, Rowena Karp felt the parking lot would only serve the Red Lion Inn and its various functions, not be a truly accessible parking option for the everyday shopper in the Village. She did not feel the parking proposal would solve the village's parking issues.

"It's not fair to give away town land for [Ordelheide's] purposes," said Rowena Karp. Yet, the opportunity may be too great for the town to turn down.

"From a town perspective, we've been looking to do a parking lot on the land," said Koed, "it is difficult for us to turn down a half a million dollars for something we were thinking about doing anyway. Frankly, the town will be looking to spend tax dollars on this in the future."

The Board of Selectmen requested Town Manager Bill Griffin seek comments from the Economic Development Committee and the Village consultant, Angus Jennings of Concord Square Development Company. The Selectmen requested Ordelheide draft an agreement between the Town and the Red Lion Inn, if they approve the proposal. The Board will take up the issue at a future meeting.

Peter Brown, chairman of the Economic Development Committee, said his committee would "fully support" the partnership between the Red Lion and the town to build the parking lot when reached for comment after the meeting, citing time and cost savings for the town as well as more parking for the village.

"[It will] be a win-win for the Red Lion and the Town since it would be close enough to encourage patrons of the Red Lion to park there—being directly opposite their primary convention/event building—and leave more parking available on the main municipal lot for other retailers, businesses and residents," said Brown in an e-mail.

If Ordelheide is able to get the appropriate approvals for his expansion, he plans to begin work in the late winter.

Liquor license application submitted

The issue of management was briefly discussed at the Selectmen's meeting. Gerd Ordelheide, owner of the Red Lion Inn, has at last found a suitable manager. Since May, the establishment has been without a reliable contact on the Inn's liquor license application.

Ordelheide submitted the liquor license application under the new manager a week ago. In Cohasset, the Board of Selectmen is the liquor license authority. A formal hearing will be set in the next few weeks to review the application.

Piano lessons to resume

Priscilla D. Daniels, professional pianist and teacher of pianoforte, will resume her lesson schedule at her Beach Street home in Cohasset. Her personalized instruction has attracted students who have had careers in music, while others play just for pleasure.

Daniels is a graduate of New England Conservatory of Music in Boston, magna cum laude. She is a member of Alpha Chi Omega, national sorority, and Pi Kappa Lambda, honorary professional society. She has taught in Swampscott, Lincoln and Norwood, and currently in Cohasset.

As part of each lesson, she incorporates music theory, harmony, rhythm study and expression. Daniels encourages her students to improvise and compose, and strives to communicate a love and appreciation for the fine arts through the medium of the piano.

SATs scores show upward trend

High marks for Cohasset students

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

"We hope it's only a sign of things to come."
— Supt of Schools Denise Walsh

Students who took the SATs last year gave the School Committee and administrators much to brag about: the mean scores on all three sections of the SAT test are on an upward swing.

The SATs, administered by the College Board, is the essential test for the college-bound high school student. Between 97 and 100 percent of Cohasset High students take the SATs during their high school career, says guidance counselor Ed Leonard.

"We are very proud of the fact almost every student takes the SAT once or even multiple times," says Leonard, explaining many school-wide results are distorted because not all the students take the test. Cohasset's results are reflective of the entire student body, instead of just a portion.

Cohasset students scored an average of seven points higher on the Critical Reading portion, an average of 11 points higher on the Mathematics portion and an average of 14 points on the Writing portion over 2006 SAT test scores (see table for score comparison).

A little more than two years ago in March 2005 the College Board changed the format of the SAT, its flagship standardized test. The most significant change was the addition of a writing portion. Superintendent of Schools Denise Walsh was impressed, but not surprised, by the 14-point jump in writing scores.

"There has been an inclusion of more writing across all disciplines and grades. Writing isn't just in English class anymore. All disciplines have the responsibility to teach both reading and writing," says Walsh. Curriculum and textbook changes to create more cohesion throughout the district Walsh hopes supports continued improvement.

"We hope it's only a sign of things to come," says Walsh. Although the writing portion is new to the SAT Reasoning Test, Leonard says the format is similar to the MCAS so students are familiar with it.

The increase in SAT scores is measurable progress the schools have made toward goals delineated by the School Committee about a year ago, says Chairman Rick Flynn.

"The scores are indicative of higher level of achievement at the High School," says Flynn. More assets have been brought to the High School including increased course offerings, new textbooks, teachers and technology. "I hope we continue this upward trend."

Encouraging as well, says Walsh, is the amount of students taking the SAT Subject Tests. Last year, 13 students took the US History SAT subject test and scored a mean average of impressive 700 out of 800. Across the board of the subject tests, the mean averages were above 600.

"We have very strong programs and it shows in the results," says Walsh.

The solution could involve the town or the MBTA executing an eminent domain land or access taking, then giving the access back to Collins.

property to walk to the Selectmen through the complicated and intertwined property lines and rights.

The Collins' property is sandwiched between two towns, two counties and two developments. On the Cohasset side there is a six-home cul-de-sac subdivision on Ledgewood Farm Drive. In Scituate is Gannett Pasture Way, a three-home cul-de-sac. In the middle is 425 South Main St., the Collins home.

The MBTA provided Collins with a paved driveway to Gannett Pasture Lane in Scituate. However, Scituate zoning bylaws limit three homes on a private driveway. The addition of the Collins home makes four and violates the bylaw. The MBTA hired a local attorney to draft an agreement between Collins and her neighbors on Gannett Pasture Lane to bring before the Scituate Planning Board for a variance.

Signatures from the neighbors on Gannett Pasture Lane and the Collins were obtained this past summer. However, the proposal never made it as far as the Planning Board.

In a letter, noteworthy for its curtness as well as its content, an agent of the MBTA informed its attorney they would no longer be assisting the Collins family with their access issues.

"It is suggested that the Collins family continue to work with both towns and their neighbors to resolve any access issues that may exist," states the letter from James Rush, the MBTA's right of way agent.

"The MBTA dropped the issue," said Gruber, essentially leaving Collins to her own devices.

To further complicate and worsen the issue for Collins, in late August the Ledgewood Estates developers, part owners of the private driveway from Gannett Pasture Lane — the Collins' sole, albeit currently illegal, access in and out of her property — have issued a cease and desist order from accessing Gannett Pasture Lane.

Although the order has no legal weight, because it is not authorized by land court it has caused additional concern and angst for Collins, said Gruber. Deed and easement rights are also under scrutiny by all parties involved additionally obscuring the situation.

The Board of Selectmen responded with surprise the circumstance has escalated to this point, "I thought the T assured us this would be taken care of," said Selectman Fred Koed. Gruber said it has been an issue since his involvement in Greenbush mitigation for the town, but nothing was ever firm. However, the MBTA did pave a new driveway and illegally connected the Collins property to Gannett Pasture Lane._

"We need to bring the T back to the table to bring this to a resolution," said Gruber. Selectman Ralph Dormitzer said the MBTA has created the problem and will need to be a key player in the resolution.

Glenn Pratt, Chairman of the Water Commission, said the water department is seeking to connect two water main dead ends at South Main and Ledgewood Farm Drive. The MBTA installed pieces of pipe under the tracks on Lincoln Lane in preparation of connecting the water mains. However, the Water Commission has run into the same easement problems as Collins.

"The homeowner is rightfully petrified that no one knows how to get to her property," in the event of an emergency, or even in everyday occurrences like having a package delivered to her home, said Pratt, "some town agency has to make a bold move."

The solution could involve the town or the MBTA executing an eminent domain land or access taking, then giving the access back to Collins. The government has the right to take private land by eminent domain for a greater good, and there is usually compensation awarded to the owner in return. However, the proposal is only one of many possible resolutions.

"The hardship [the MBTA is] creating for an individual is enormous, that's the injustice here," said Koed.

Realizing the urgency of the situation, Senator Bob Hedlund and Rep. Garrett Bradley have been informed of the situation and are addressing it from a political standpoint.

"We need to do the right thing here," said Dormitzer. The Board of Selectmen will send a letter to the MBTA General Manager Dan Grabauskas requesting the MBTA to address the situation and help bring it to a fair and equitable resolution.

AROUND TOWN

Blake Alexander Marshall arrived on Sept. 1.

OH BOY!

Alex and Anne Marshall of Fair Oaks Lane are thrilled to announce the birth of their second child, a healthy boy, Blake Alexander Marshall. He arrived at South Shore Hospital Saturday afternoon, Sept. 1, weighing in at 6 lbs., 6 oz and measuring about 19 inches. His proud big sister Taylor is joined by his grandparents, Penny Marshall and the late J. Howard Marshall, Jr of Biddeford Pool, Maine and Bent and Ruth Hermansen of Listed, Denmark, in welcoming him home.

BRICK FUNDRAISER

The Beechwood Ballpark is complete. There is a brick fundraiser under way to help pay for maintaining this wonderful new space. Engraved bricks are $100 and will be placed in the grassy area behind the outfield scoreboard. If you are interested, please contact Michelle Loughlin at mloughlin521@hotmail.com.

The dedication ceremony will be on Sat., Sept 29th, beginning at 8:30 a.m.. Kids' activities starting at 10.

BEST WISHES!

Congratulations are in order for Nick Salerno, who turned 80 on Sept. 12. Nick was surprised by his eight children, spouses and 12 of his 13 grandchildren at a dinner in his honor in the North End. If you see Nick around town, offer him your best wishes on this milestone!

GIFTWRAP

It's time to get movin' and groovin' with the Cohasset PSO and Innisbrook Giftwrap's fall fundraiser, "Innisbrook's Got the Beat". The students at Osgood and Deer Hill will be offering the chance to jump into the spirit and purchase the quality and stylish wrapping paper Innisbrook is known for, as well as countless new and exciting gift items, magazine subscriptions and delicious chocolates made by the Helen Grace Company. This fundraiser provides almost half of the PSO budget for the school year, and funds the schools' character education programs, curriculum enrichment programs, provides for teacher and library grants and various teacher appreciation activities. Last year the funds aided in the purchase of new playground equipment, 50 percent of the engineering lab at the Middle/High School and the training of Peer Leaders.

All students rockin' to the beat at the Osgood School will be entered into various raffles throughout the fundraiser. At Deer Hill, students who sell 10 items will receive a Hip Hop Back Pack Clipper. Deer Hill students will also be eligible to earn prizes for their total number of items sold, with the top prizes being Best Buy Gift Cards valued at $100, $150 and $250.

Get into the groove and make your purchases soon as 50 percent of sales go to the PSO, and thus, our children and our schools. If you do not have a student at the Osgood or Deer Hill, you can pick up your own catalogs in the school offices, as well as the office at the Middle/High School, at the library and at Town Hall. Purchases can be placed online (free shipping with orders of $75 or more) and delivery will be within a week. The sale ends on Sept. 28 and items ordered through a student (rather than online) will be delivered by early November. If you have any questions or would like a catalog, contact Carolyn Coffey at 383-8286 or Mary Jo Blackington at 383-0626.

Nick and Trudy Salerno at Nick's 80th birthday party.

TOP EQUESTRIENNE

Brittany Avila, daughter of proud parents Art and Debbie Avila, won fourth place in the Children's Equitation Medal Class on Sunday Sept. 2, during the Massachusetts Hunter Jumper Medal Finals. To be part of the Medal Finals a rider must qualify by obtaining 10 points during the show season. The finals consisted of one jumping round, jumping 10 jumps at 2 feet, 6 inches. The top 12 are called back to do a flat class and then the medals are awarded.

Congratulations to Brittany for a fourth place win. She is off to Northhampton on Sept. 14 for the Massachusetts Horsemans Council (MHC) Finals. Good Luck!

Brittany Avila is off to Northhampton on Sept. 14 for the Massachusetts Horsemans Council (MHC) Finals.

LAKOTA KIDZ

Second Congregational Church's Youth Group will be holding a Craft Sale at the Farmer's Market on Sept. 20th to benefit some of our nation's poorest children. Lakota Kidz is a non-profit organization that supports children of the Lakota Sioux in Pine Ridge, South Dakota. The Pine Ridge Reservation is part of the poorest county in the U.S. All local kids Grade 6 and up are invited to get involved with this and other SCC Youth Group outreach efforts

EQUESTRIAN STUDIES

Jennifer Roche, an equestrian studies major, has enrolled as a freshman at the University of Findlay for the 2007-08 academic year.

Jennifer Roche is a freshman at the University of Findlay.

Jennifer, a 2007 graduate of South Shore Christian Academy, is the daughter of Sarah and Adrian Roche, 11 Black Horse Lane.

Jennifer was awarded the University of Findlay Award from the University, which is in Findlay, Ohio

CONDOLENCES

Our condolences go out to Mickey Patrolia who recently lost his beloved wife, Ellen, after a period of failing health. Mickey and Ellen were frequently seen walking around the Town Common and Sandy Beach. Mickey is a long-time Cohasset Assessor and a retired letter carrier, who delivered mail to the Beechwood area of Cohasset. Ellen and Mickey were avid travelers who visited Mexico, South America, and the Dominican Republic over the years. Ellen was a volunteer at the Cohasset Consignment Shop and enjoyed Bingo and Trivia Day at the Cohasset Knoll. Services were private. Ellen will be missed by all.

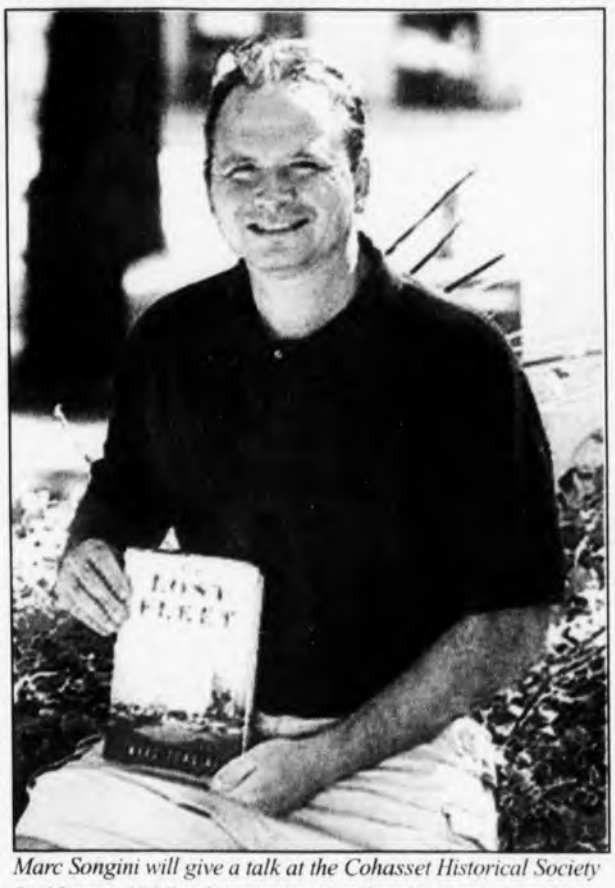
AAUW to meet Tuesday



Hingham Area Branch of the American Association of University Women welcomes Cohasset women to the first meeting of the season at 6:30 p.m., on Tuesday, Sept. 18, at Allerton House, 15 Condito Road, Hingham. This will be a potluck dinner featuring information on what AAUW is today, and an opportunity to learn about the programs scheduled for the year. The meeting is free and open to the public and all are encouraged to attend. For more information, call 781-749-6274.

AAUW seeks and welcomes new members who hold an associate or equivalent, or baccalaureate or higher degree from a qualified educational institution. Undergraduates may join the branch as AAUW student affiliates. AAUW members believe in the power of education to change women's lives. Members also recognize that women's education means not only attaining higher degrees, it also means becoming financially literate, daring to take risks to grow and learn throughout one's life, and helping others reach their potential.

Whaling's demise comes alive

Author of 'The Lost Fleet' comes to Cohasset

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Marc Songini will give a talk at the Cohasset Historical Society Building at 106 South Main Street on Sunday, Sept. 16 at 2p.m.

In the 1800s, Cohasset was a bustling commercial fishing community. Boats would go out for months, or even years on end in search of fortune, adventure and an often-illusive catch. Out of the larger New England ports like New Bedford and Martha's Vineyard set sail large wooden ships in search of whales.

The dangerous yet profitable profession attracted the brave and the daring to the sea. One such sailor, Thomas William Williams of Wethersfield, Conn., devoted his life to hunting whales. The 6-foot-2 man, tall for his time, traveled the open seas with his wife and two small children. Their trials and triumphs are captured in Marc Songini's "The Lost Fleet."

"It reads like a novel, it's completely true and has a central set of characters," says Songini, who will give a lecture at the Cohasset Historical Society building on Sunday, Sept. 16 at 2 p.m.

Out of a labor of love he researched and wrote the book for seven years. The book centers on one family during whaling's heyday in the mid-1800s, while illuminating the greater history the ultimate downfall of the industry. He stumbled upon the Williams during his first six months of research; they kept cropping up at the major events contributing to the loss of the Yankee whaling fleet.

The book chronicles the ongoing troubles of the American whaling fleet during the mid-1800s. Yankee whalers were already contending with harsh conditions in their line of work: icebergs, storms, rogue whales, sharks, hostile natives and disease. If that wasn't enough, in the later 1870s, whales became scarcer, ships journeyed deeper into the Arctic and roving Confederate privateers made the profession even riskier. Yet, Williams still remained driven to find the next big whale, making him the ideal hero for Sondini's narrative.

"I didn't want to write another book about the history of whaling," says Songini so instead he describes his book as "the 'Gone with the Wind' of whaling."

To get to his end product, he utilized all the historical resources at his disposal. He compiled letters from Williams and his wife Eliza, newspaper accounts from New England and San Francisco, ship's logs and other first person accounts of the life and times of a whaler.

"It took a lot of research to recreate these people," says Songini, and the more he found out the more he was amazed by them.

"It's incredible what these men could do in the worst conditions in the world," says Songini. Whalers used to travel from New England around Cape Horn, navigating icebergs under sail and traveling throughout the Pacific in search of their catch. Through his research, Songini gained a love and admiration for both the whalers of the 1800s and even today's fishermen, who brave the sea's fury day in and day out. Along with his wife and parents, he dedicated the book to "the brave fishermen."

"In a way I believe they were better people, stronger people. They were the real character of New England," says Songini, who thinks his hero is not atypical for the time period. He was a jack-of-all-trades: a husband, a father, a surgeon, a captain, a midwife and a huntsman rolled into one.

As his complement to Williams' tough and quiet exterior stands Eliza Williams was a petite woman with a kind and gentle side. She is the main reason Songini was able to write the book because of how much written word she left behind.

"She rounded out the picture of what life was like aboard a whaling ship," says Songini.

Although Songini "loves the book completely," he most enjoyed writing about the thrilling encounter between Williams and the Confederate cruiser Alabama.

"When I was reading [the historical accounts] I was on the edge of my seat," says Songini. He looked to Confederate ship's logs and a letter from Williams to fully recount the adventure, the end of which he will not divulge.

Songini grew up in Walpole and now lives in Foxboro, but has always considered the South Shore a part of his home, "if I wasn't physically on the South Shore, I was nearby."

He has kayaked Cohasset Harbor and the ocean beyond on numerous occasions. He describes Cohasset's offshore rocks and ledges as extremely dangerous to mariners before modern navigation gear.

"A northeastern snow storm could obscure Boston Light, a slight mistake meant a shipwreck on the rocks," says Songini. He plans on doing additional research on Cohasset's maritime history before his lecture on Sunday and will welcome any questions about whaling, New England and maritime commerce. He hopes to visit Cohasset's own piece of maritime history found in the Maritime Museum and the Captain John Wilson house on Elm Street before leaving town.

You can buy "The Lost Fleet" at Barnes and Noble, Baker Books and on Amazon.com. Marc Songini will give a short lecture and then answer audience questions at the Cohasset Historical Society Building at 106 South Main Street on Sunday, Sept. 16 at 2p.m. Free.

Offering of hope

It was six years ago, on a Tuesday. But as Cohasset and the country observed the anniversary of 9/11 this week, the passage of time has clearly not diminished people's sense of loss.

Members of the Cohasset clergy including the Rev. Gary Ritts of Second Congregational Church, the Rev. Jan Carlsson-Bull of First Parish, Collette Wood of St. Stephen's, the Rev. John Mulvehill of St. Anthony's and the Rev. John Maheras of the Nativity of the Virgin Mary Church, were flanked by local firefighters, police officers, veterans and sons of veterans as they each provided a message of hope and peace during Tuesday's 9/11 observance on the common.

Wood invited those in attendance to consider "not just where we were but where we are going as a people and as a world.

"May we be blessed with the courage and passion to dream a world where people everywhere live in safety and free from fear."

Although the crowd that had gathered on the common was small — cars turned their lights on as they passed slowly along North Main Street. Clearly no explanation was needed as to why the group had assembled there.

Bells rang from First Parish, Second Congregational and St. Stephen's. Mandy Burgoon played "Taps" as some saluted while others put their hands over their hearts. Selectmen and some other town officials were present, as was the entire Town Hall staff.

Maheras asked that everyone recall those who gave their lives in the "holocaust of hate on 9/11." He said people of all faiths were "unwitting pawns in a terrible tragedy."

Mulvehill asked that the strength of prayers and the power of love "help bring about an end of war, terrorism and violence."

Carlsson-Bull recalled never feeling more like a global citizen as she did when she stood "at the edge of the pit at Ground Zero."

"Let's do all we can to work for peace," she said. She said the best way to honor those who were lost is "by living in peace and by practicing peace."

Ritts of the Second Congregational Church, said in his remarks, "As we hear the ringing of these bells, may we be reminded…of those innocent loved ones who came to work one day or boarded particular airplanes, unaware of the intolerance so close and all-consuming.

"…Hope is here at this sacred gathering," he said. "May it grow and expand, as the peels echo across the common, to family, to friends, to neighbors, to all of those beloved children of God whom we may be blessed to encounter."

Many communities have stopped observing 9/11. We are proud that Cohasset continues to pause, to reflect, and to remember.

The Iraq dilemma

TO THE EDITOR:

One of the signs displayed by the tiny band of Saturday morning protestors implies that we are shedding our soldiers' blood for oil. Well, sacrificing lives and treasure to ensure access to Iraq's huge oil potential can't be defended. What is important is ensuring that the current chaos doesn't result in a victor regime dedicated to destruction of the West in general and the US in particular, and financially enabled to limitless purchases of weapons and subversion of other regimes by the vast revenue potential of that oil.

One can dream the embargoes will sufficiently limit the oil revenues, but a successful embargo depends upon a convincingly evident will to use military muscle to enforce. Occasional high level bombing or random missile strikes isn't convincing enough, especially if accompanied by demonstrated reluctance to sustained boots on the ground.

The penalties of cost and tragic loss of life must be weighed against the whirlwind of disaster that will result from abandoning the chaos rather than resolving it to our long-term advantage. Railing about the misjudgments that led to the chaos is fruitless; resolving it for the long term (not to avoid pain in the short term) is what is relevant. It's a brutal world, but history isn't kind to those who took the easy way out.

Train horn from 'hell'

TO THE EDITOR:

In response to Shirley Brown's letter (which ran last week) – please have mercy! I live across the street from the tracks, set back 200 feet, with a row of houses between me and the train. It's a horn, not a whistle, and is exponentially louder than the old fashioned train whistle.

I can clearly hear the rumbling as the train passes but have gotten use to that. It's no worse than an 18-wheeler or a low-flying airplane. Even the ding, ding, ding, of the bells is louder, but I can get use to that. It'll just take a little longer.

The horn is something else. The first time I heard it I jumped; the second time it woke me from a nap. Then they started to run the train every 10 to 20 minutes. The stress from the noise accumulates to the point that by the end of the day I am ready to kick the dog, hit the kids and snarl at my best friend. Nostalgia is no justification for torture; for us it's the train horn from Hell.

MEETINGS

The following meetings are posted at Town Hall:

Advisory Committee, Sept. 19, 7 p.m.

Alternative Energy Committee, Oct. 9, Nov. 13, all at 7:30 p.m.

Board of Health, Sept. 18, 7p.m.

Cohasset Housing Authority, Sept. 19, 1 p.m. at 60 Elm St.

Conservation Commission, Sept. 20, 7 p.m.

Planning Board, Sept. 19 & 20, 7 p.m.

Recreation Commission, Oct. 3, 6:30 p.m.

Selectmen, Sept. 17 & 27, 7 p.m.

Sewer Commission, Sept. 24, 6p.m.

Stormwater Committee, Sept. 17 & 24, 7 p.m.

Zoning Board of Appeals, Sept. 20 and Oct. 2, 7:30 p.m.

All meetings take place at Town Hall unless otherwise noted. Call the Town Clerk's office at 781-383-4100 for updates and additions.

Town Meeting begins on Tuesday, Nov. 13

Mark your calendars — Special Town Meeting has been set for Tuesday, Nov. 13 at 7 p.m. Although Special Town Meeting typically begins on a Monday evening, this year Nov. 12 is Veteran's Day.

The Warrant will be loaded with weighty issues including Village zoning bylaws, establishing a housing trust by the Housing Partnership Committee and the Stormwater bylaw.

The deadline for article submission is Friday, Sept. 21. The warrant will be sent to the printer on Oct. 23 and sent to voters on Oct. 30, two weeks before Town Meeting.

HEALTH NOTES

Mind your meds; pills are national pastime

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

Almost everybody takes pills. It's a national pastime. Recently, many people have been asking the same question. It's generally a version of: "Is this the best I can do?" Whether you have a medical plan, get medications from your doctor or pay for them yourself, there's always a question.

Is it the right medication? Discuss this issue with your doctor. Get the list of side effects and report them if you sense you're having any. In order for a medication to be declared as having side effects, the same symptoms must occur to a number of patients. So, if you take a medication and you feel strange, report it to your pharmacist, doctor or health care professional. That person should be able to tell you how many other reports like yours have been received. Remember, drug interactions and side effects are different, so you should always tell your health care provider about all your other medications as well as any side effects you've discovered.

Are you taking it properly? The instruction manual accompanying a drug is usually comparable to that issued with your VCR. Clearly, though, it's not OK to ignore the instructions or forget about some of the restrictions. It's necessary to read and obey the fine print, even if reading the label requires a magnifying glass. Most drugs give instructions about what to do if you miss a medication. Serious consequences sometimes accompany missed medication. Likewise overdosing is a mistake. "If some is good, more is better" is generally not a sensible option.

Is it doing the job? Is the medication creating an effect it was intended to have? Generally, a doctor will know when to expect an improvement of a condition as a result of medication. Ask him when you should check back to report on the medication's success or failure.

Costs: Medical plans vary as to how they cover medications. Nevertheless, they all have provisions that can work in your favor. Prescriptions for most medications have time limits. At renewal time, verify the cost. Sometimes the cost from a pharmacy is less than the co-pay and there is no reason to pay the larger amount. In other words, you are not locked into the price the insurance company pays for medications if you can find it at a lower cost elsewhere.

Generics versus Brand Name: A generic drug is identical or bioequivalent to a brand name drug in dosage form, safety, strength, route of administration, quality, performance characteristics and intended use. Although generic drugs are chemically identical to their branded counterparts, they are typically sold at substantial discounts from the branded price. According to the Congressional Budget Office, generic drugs save consumers an estimated $8 to $10 billion a year at retail pharmacies. Even more billions are saved when hospitals use generics.

Fraud: However, in the present environment there is an enormous inducement for unethical organizations to sell fraudulent medications, and indeed, such traffic exists throughout the industry. You should obtain drugs from the most reputable source available. It's no longer reasonable to expect the drugs obtained from sources other than registered pharmacies and medical insurance companies to be above suspicion. Doctors and nursing homes have been implicated and the number of drug fraud cases being investigated has risen sharply. So it's up to you, the consumer, to be vigilant and obtain information on how best to protect yourself. If you need help in sorting out the medication maze either talk to your insurance company or a doctor you know and trust.

A visitor to Tuesday's Health Fair, sponsored by the Board of Health, has his blood tested for cholesterol levels.

Multiple Medications: For those taking many medications, to do so at the right time and in the right amount is sometimes challenging. There is an almost infinite variety of pill containers for organizing medications, vitamins, etc., even a talking pill case. One suggested source for automated pillboxes is bindependent.com.

If all else fails, we at the BoH are good at handholding.

'What is the cost of the train to Boston?'

MAKING TRACKS

TOM GRUBER & MARK BRENNAN

Greenbush fares — One of the most frequent questions we get is, "What is the cost of the train to Boston?" The following table is from the MBTA's web site and will give you an idea of travel times and cost from each Greenbush Station to Boston, South Station.

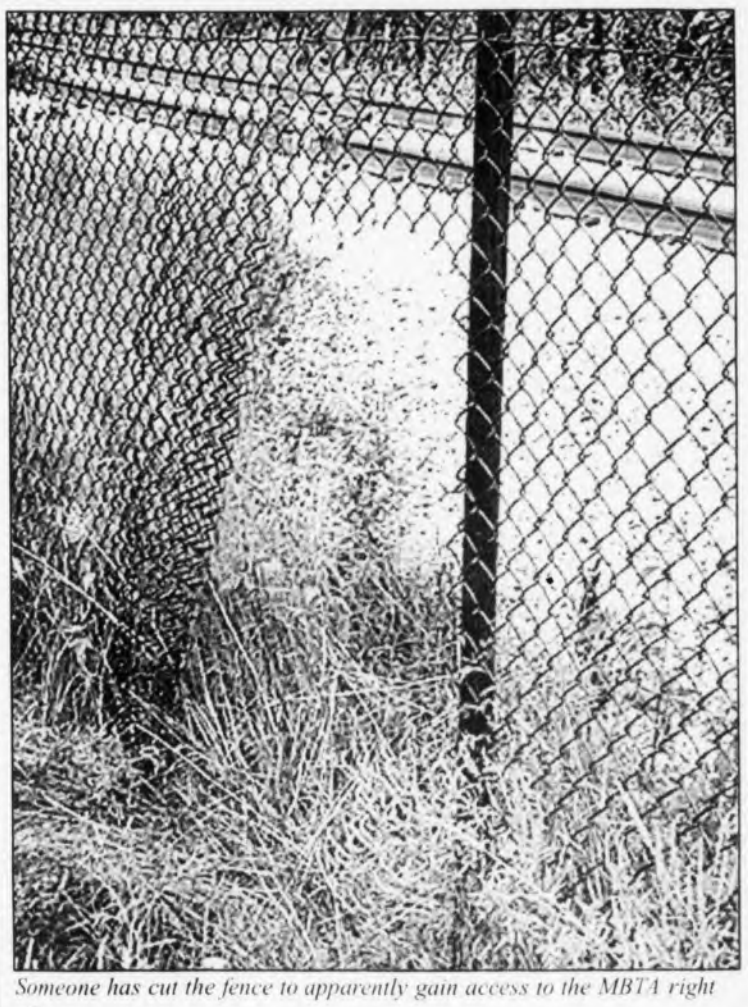
Greenbush RR Crossings — The MBTA continues to work on the crossing safety systems. If you should witness what you perceive to be a malfunction or a crossing situation that makes you feel unsafe, please let us know. We have an excellent communication channel directly to the state safety personnel charged with the oversight of the crossings. You can call us or email us at the links at the end of this article. However, we need to remind all readers that all of the crossings are still in the "test" mode and you need to proceed with caution at all of the crossings. This is not an operational railroad, yet.

The Greenbush grand opening — Last week we had a chance to meet with marketing personnel from the MBTA who are tasked with planning the celebration associated with the very first run of the Greenbush. Here's how the planning looks at this point in time. (We say at this point in time, because the plans are not cast in stone and are subject to change.) The first train run will originate in Boston and make its way to the Greenbush station where the formal dedication will take place. The train will make one stop in each Town prior to reaching Greenbush. At each station there will be a local program, prior to the train arrival. When the train arrives, the MBTA and other Commonwealth dignitaries will disembark and join local representatives for a formal ribbon cutting at that station. Then about 50 people previously identified and invited by the Town will board the train for the balance of the ride to Greenbush.

The train will make one stop in each Town prior to reaching Greenbush. At each station there will be a local program, prior to the train arrival. When the train arrives, the MBTA and other Commonwealth dignitaries will disembark and join local representatives for a formal ribbon cutting at that station.

We are also told that there may be a second train, following the first train, which will be available for anyone to board for the trip to Greenbush for the festivities. The event planners have indicated that most likely the inaugural run will be made on a weekday, rather than a weekend. As we hear more, we'll keep you posted. As we mentioned last week, this should all happen around the end of October.

Greenbush errata — Last week we erroneously reported that the new "official" start date for the Greenbush was Oct. 19th. It is scheduled for Oct. 29th of this year.



Revitalization update — If you look closely at the result of our Revitalization project there are a few loose ends that need to be tended to. Tuesday, the masonry contractor was working, rounding the top edge of the curbing along Elm Street. The curb in this area, and several others, has a special configuration. Rather than have a square-cornered top and 6 inches exposure, which is decidedly unfriendly to tires, we have lowered the curb to 4 inches and rounded the corners to be more car friendly. The contractor chose to round the top of the curb after installation rather than prior to its installation. We are not altogether happy with the results of altering the curb after it was installed and plan to have the contractor correct some of his work. Additionally, work needs to be completed to plant another lilac tree on Elm Street and correct a drainage issue on Main Street in front of Darylinn's gift shop, among other items.

A serious problem in Cohasset — On Wednesday of this week, we received a call from a resident that someone has maliciously cut a door into the MBTA safety fencing near the Scituate line (see photo). Someone has cut the fence to apparently gain access to the MBTA right of way.

Although this may seem like a neat thing to do, it is wrong and illegal. Whoever did this is endangering the lives of themselves and the entire neighborhood, especially the younger children. This cut was done in a neighborhood with lots of young children and it creates an attractive nuisance for these young children. We look to the neighbors to find out who created this cut and report it to the police. This is a sad day that this action could cause an innocent child to be seriously harmed or, heaven forbid, killed.

Some lessons from Chester

THE FAR SIDE OF PERFECT

DIANE K. DANIELSON

This summer I attempted to pacify my son's ongoing quest for a dog by hosting my friend's Labradoodle for a week. (Labrador + Poodle = less spastic, supposedly smarter, hypo-allergenic dog … with a need for weekly grooming appointments.) While Chester's 90-lb frame would normally be too big for our condo, he's a city dog who lives with cats and apparently thinks he's of the feline persuasion. Now, I have absolutely no problem with his desire to switch teams, but it does create a spatial issue when he wants to sleep in our beds and cuddle on our laps. Not to mention that a rub up against a leg can knock an unsuspecting person completely off-balance.

Well, we all know that you can't teach an old dog new tricks, so I didn't really try much, especially after the Frisbee banged off his snout the first 10 times. However, I was surprised to be the one who actually learned a few new things during his visit.

Lesson 1: How to make new friends. Walking around town or the dog park with an animal that strongly resembles an enormous mutant mop is a huge icebreaker. While Chester made new friends by sniffing their rear ends, I opted instead for polite chitchat.

Lesson 2: We should have an eco-tax on beverages, junk food, junk mailers, phone companies and cigarettes. Why? Because every day we would walk along Jerusalem Road and I would use one of his poop bags to pick up trash. Each day, approximately 60 percent of the trash was beverage-related; 20 percent was junk food wrappers; 10 percent was junk mail and pages from phone books, and 10 percent was cigarette butts (had to leave those – way too gross and too many of them).

Lesson 3: Large moving objects already in motion should probably stay in motion. Chester is great off-leash and generally comes back when called, UNLESS he sees a large body of water on a hot day. On our first trip to the dog park, he caught a glimpse of the ocean and just exploded, heading full-steam for the water. Realizing that I had no towels in my car I screamed "Chester, No!" only to have him look back mid-leap and subsequently tumble head over heels through the sand right into the water. Oh no, I thought, I just totaled my friend's dog on the very first day. But Chester quickly righted himself, sat up in the water and gave me a delusional, but happy look that said: "Totally awesome, dude … your turn!"

Lesson 4: The laws of centrifugal force pertain to doggie dry-offs. After I coaxed him out of the water, Chester ran right over to an elderly woman and took his dry-off stance. Everything moved in slow motion as I made like the Bionic Woman and sprinted across the beach, barely managing to throw myself between him and the woman just in time to take the brunt of the water that flew off his shaggy self in a 5-foot plus arc in every direction. I quickly apologized to the woman and the rest of the crowd. However, being dog-lovers and therefore my new best friends, they waved it off with a chuckle and pointed over to my "rental dog" who was now rolling his wet self around in the dirt.

Lesson 5: How to use centrifugal force to clean a bathroom. Lifting an unwilling, wet, muddy dog nearly matching my body weight into a bathtub surely defies the laws of physics, and possibly even gravity. But I did learn a few things at the dog park. In preparation, I removed everything that wasn't bolted down out of the bathroom. After soaping him up with Johnson's Baby Shampoo (the only thing I had on hand in my son's bathroom), and hosing him down with the shower spray, we were both sopping wet. I let him out of the tub and joined him in a big old shakedown that drenched the entire bathroom. I then sent him out to sit on a towel in the hallway where he lazily watched as I grabbed some disinfectant and scrubbed the entire bathroom (including the ceiling).

Lesson 6: I miss the smell of wet dog. After a week in the ocean, subsequent baths, walks in the rain, and a son who for the entire week hung his own head out the car window to escape the wet dog stench, we were both surprised to find that we really missed the smell of a big old damp dog.

So, that's what I learned from Chester. However, the question is — did Chester learn anything from me? Let's just say I don't think he'll ever try waking me up by licking me in the face again.

LIBRARY CORNER

Book group meets Sept. 26

The following events will take place at Paul Pratt Memorial Library.

Library Book Group –The next meeting will be at 10 a.m., Wednesday, Sept. 26. The group will discuss Nathaniel Philbrick's book "Mayflower."

Independent Film Night – The library will show the independent film "Viva Cuba" at 6 p.m., Thursday, Sept. 20, in the Meeting Room. Malu is from an upper-class family and her single mother does not want her to play with Jorgito, as she thinks his background is coarse and commonplace. Jorgito's mother, a poor Socialist proud of her family's social standing, places similar restrictions on her son. What neither woman recognizes is the strength of the bond between Malu and Jorgito. When the children learn that Malu's mother is planning to leave Cuba, they decide to run away and travel to the other side of the island to find Malu's father and persuade him against signing the forms that would allow it. Free admission and free refreshments will be served, courtesy of the Friends of the Library.

Great Decisions Group – The first Great Decisions Discussion group will begin at 2:30 p.m., Sunday, Sept. 16, in the Meeting Room. For those who have registered for the program, the group will discuss Global Warming found in Chapter two of the assigned text

Artist Reception – South Shore Art Center will present "Fragments of Place: 42 Deg. 14'N 70 Deg. 46'W," featuring monotypes by Susan Denniston through Wednesday, Oct. 31. Meet the artist at a reception from 5 to 7 p.m., Sunday, Sept. 23. Gallery hours are 10 a.m. to 8 p.m., Monday, Tuesday and Thursday; 10 a.m. to 5 p.m., Friday; 9 a.m. to 5 p.m., Saturday; and 2 to 5 p.m., Sunday. Free admission.

"Rise and Fall of the Big Dig" – Sean P. Murphy, reporter for the Boston Globe, will give a free presentation at 7 p.m., Thursday, Sept. 27, in the meeting room. Murphy, an award-winning investigative reporter and editor, has spent the last 20 years breaking stories on the Big Dig, including the state's failure to hold Big Dig contractors accountable in 2003 and the cause of the ceiling collapse in 2006.

New Database – Cohasset library cardholders have the privilege of logging on to a new database from home or the library. The Literary Reference Center is a comprehensive database that provides users with a broad spectrum of information on thousands of authors and their works across literary disciplines and timeframes. Access author biographies, book reviews, plot summaries, and articles and essays of literary criticism. This is a great tool for students. Click on Good Books from the library web site at cohassetlibrary.org.

FOR CHILDREN

Story & Craft – For Cohasset residents ages 3 through 6, for a four-week commitment. Each week students explore a theme through literature, songs and crafts. Story & Craft will take place in the Story Room on Thursdays, Oct. 4, 11, 18 and 25. Registration for Story & Craft begins Friday, Sept. 21. To register go to cohassetlibrary.org, click on Calendar, click on Calendar, click on Oct. 4, either 10:30 or 1:00, and fill out the online registration form including child's name and age. Telephone registrations are also accepted by calling 781-383-1348, ext. 3.

MamaSteph – Performances will be Mondays, Oct. 1, 15, 22 and 29, from 10:30 to 11 a.m., in the Meeting Room. Come sing and dance. All ages and communities welcome. Funded by the Friends of Cohasset Library.

Drop In Story Time – Join others in the Story Room from 10:30 to 11 a.m., on Tuesdays, Oct. 2, 9, 16, 23 and 30 for Big Book adventures, music and movement. All ages and communities welcome.

Jack Buckley guest on Our Town

Jack Buckley, Cohasset High School teacher and president of the Center for Student Coastal Research sits down with co-hosts Mark DeGiacomo and Pat Martin on their next show to discuss the important work of the Parker Avenue center and the learning opportunities it provides to students.

Jack details the area water and coastal region monitoring that has been going on and how it benefits the entire Cohasset community.

Tune in at 9p.m. on Mondays, Tuesdays and Thursdays on Comcast channel 10.

Also on Channel 10, Catch Cohasset High School football on Sunday nights, starting at 7p.m., when the previous week's varsity and JV games are aired. Go Cohasset!

Political Notes

Political forum holds Iraq discussion

The last time the Forum discussed Iraq, a large number of interested people participated and enjoyed a lively discussion. Every point of view is welcome and all are invited.

The Cohasset Political Forum will kick off its third season on Saturday, Sept. 22, at 10 a.m. at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library, with a discussion of possible "endgames" for the Iraq War, General Petraeus's testimony before Congress and his anticipated "surge" report, the Bush Administration's response and the positions of the many presidential candidates. All are welcome to attend, participate, discuss and debate this very serious topic. The last time the Forum discussed Iraq, a large number of interested people participated and enjoyed a lively discussion. Every point of view is welcome and all are invited.

If you have any questions, call Agnes McCann at 383-0222.

Friday night at the movies — The Cohasset Democratic Town Committee's popular movie series resumes on Friday, Sept. 21, at 7 p.m. at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library, with the screening of Director Robert Greenwald's searing indictment of the activities of four major American companies pies operating in Iraq. "Iraq for Sale — The War Profiteers" is described as "the story of what happens to everyday Americans when corporations go to war." The film takes you inside the lives of ordinary soldiers, truck drivers, widows and families who have been changed forever as a result of alleged profiteering in the reconstruction of Iraq. "Iraq for Sale" attempts to uncover the connections between private corporations making a killing in Iraq and the decision makers who allow them to do so. More information about the film is available at iraqforsale.org

The film will be shown on Friday, Sept. 21, at 7 p.m. in the Meeting Room at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library, 35 Ripley Road, Cohasset. Doors open at 6:30 p.m. Admission is free. For information, call Agnes McCann, Chairman, 383-0222 or visit us atcohassetdems.org

Fred Koed chairs state Draft Gore campaign

"Gore received more than 50 million votes when he ran for President in 2000 and most of those voters still believe that he won."

— Fred Koed, Draft Gore Massachusetts

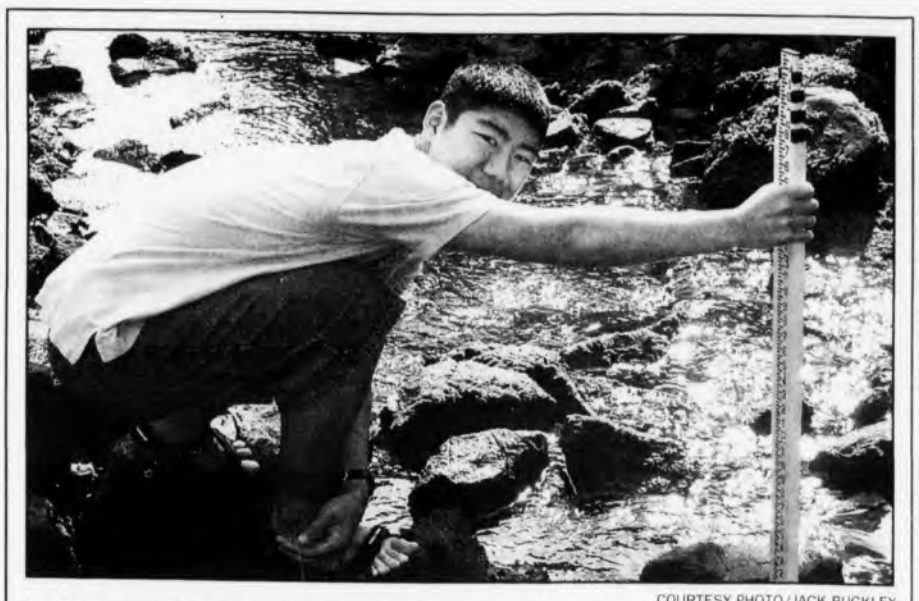
A new statewide grassroots political organization will launch a petition drive Sept. 18 seeking to make Massachusetts the first state to place former Vice President Al Gore on a Democratic presidential primary ballot.

The new group, Draft Gore Massachusetts, announced today that nominating petitions would be carried into communities throughout the state by volunteers that include teachers, health care workers, homemakers, political activists and retirees. In making the announcement, Fred Koed of Cohasset, a member of the Massachusetts State Democratic Committee, and the chair of Draft Gore Massachusetts, said:

"This is that rarity in American politics — a genuine draft movement organized by citizens who believe firmly that America needs a specific candidate to lead the country," Koed said. "Gore received more than 50 million votes when he ran for President in 2000 and most of those voters still believe that he won."

Koed points out that Draft Gore Massachusetts and its parent group, Mass For Gore, now join similar draft Gore initiatives already operating in states that include California, New Hampshire and Michigan.

A total of 2,500 signatures meeting all legal requirements plus Gore's approval are needed by Dec. 21 to include Gore on the ballot for the Massachusetts Democratic Presidential Primary to be held March 4, 2008.



To volunteer to work on nominating petitions and other Draft Gore Massachusetts initiatives, please call 508-713-2720 or email: DraftGoreMA @gmail.com. Additional information can be obtained from www.Mass4Gore.com.

CSCR and CHS students go pro, Part II

JACK BUCKLEY

Can Cohasset students really perform bacterial analyses as well as a professional lab? Part I of this two-part series answered that question: Yes. Today, we address the skeptic who asks, "How do we really know that they can? What outside evaluation has confirmed your in-house analysis? Certainly, you must be fudging the data for this quaint PR piece, for we all know that high school students can't produce such high quality work."

On Aug. 28, Mr. Gil Dichter, Worldwide Manager of Technical Support for IDEXX Laboratories, drove down from his Maine office to see our students in action. Mr. Dichter, whose company manufactures the bacterial analysis tools used by CSCR/CHS students, observed students processing samples, recording lab notes, and reading incubated samples from earlier runs. Impressed, Mr. Dichter wrote in a follow-up correspondence, "The results obtained in your lab are quite acceptable. You should take pride in what you are doing with your students, as well as serving your community with care and skill." What led him to this conclusion?

Mr. Dichter is the second outside professional to audit our student practices in bacterial analyses. Back in February, Richard Chase and colleagues from the Massachusetts Dept of Environmental Protection trained and critiqued CHS students in their bacterial work at CSCR. Mr. Chase soon thereafter penned his official imprimatur on CSCR's Quality Assurance Project Plan, signifying state review and approval of student procedures. Now it was Mr. Dichter's turn to examine the data produced by our state approved methods.

Mr. Dichter departed Cohasset with several weeks of split and duplicate student data and G and L data, the Quincy-based professional lab with which Cohasset and other towns contract to perform bacterial analysis of beach samples. G and L uses the EPA approved membrane filtration method while CSCR/CHS students use the EPA and DEP approved Enterolert method developed by IDEXX Laboratories, Mr. Dichter's employer. Upon return to his Maine office, he "crunched the numbers," running the data sets through his statistical analysis program, InStat. After calculating standard deviations, converting data to log values, conducting a T-test and performing various other tricks of the trade, he informed us, "The values are within the 95 percent confidence interval for each method. The data indicated that there is no statistical difference between the two methods."

There you have it, folks. CSCR/CHS student work has been assessed by another third party professional who has provided confirmation that our student data is as good as that produced by the pros. "Oh, c'mon," cries the skeptic who wants to raise a conflict of interest complaint. "Your third party analyst works for the company that produces the lab equipment you use. Doesn't that constitute a vested interest in proving the efficacy of its products?" Very well, point taken. But such a complaint of conflict of interest is predicated on the assumption of analyst bias, if not downright unethical analytical practice, and frankly folks, there's nothing at stake here to provide motivation for "cooking the books" in any way. We stand behind our data and the analysis referred to herein.

Conceding the point raised, however, where do we go from here? We continue the quest for the undeniable, unequivocal, irrefutable, incontrovertible confirmation and validation of student work. Like Dorothy in the Wizard of Oz, through trial and tribulation, we march forward in our quest for the broomstick of the wicked witch of the west, the quest that will bring us home to the satisfaction of all.

Toward that end, CSCR will soon be hosting an after school mini course in statistical analysis, in collaboration with CHS staff. Students will be taught essential analytical tools to enhance their math skills and to equip them with the proficiencies they need to be ever more professional in their volunteer work for the community. And of course, we will continue to work with all of the highly dedicated professionals such as Mr. Dichter and Mr. Chase who expresses an interest in supporting our students, their education, and their abilities to provide value added contributions to the community. Likewise, professional statisticians in the community are most welcome and encouraged to join this effort, as we collaborate in ways to provide students with educational experiences and training that feeds directly back into enhanced community understanding of our harbor and watershed.

"Third graders need to know the importance of reading and we thought this would be a good way to do it," says Roche. Although schoolteachers and administrators extol the values of reading day in and day out, as an outside organization the Rotary Club is another voice with a different perspective for the third graders, Roche says.

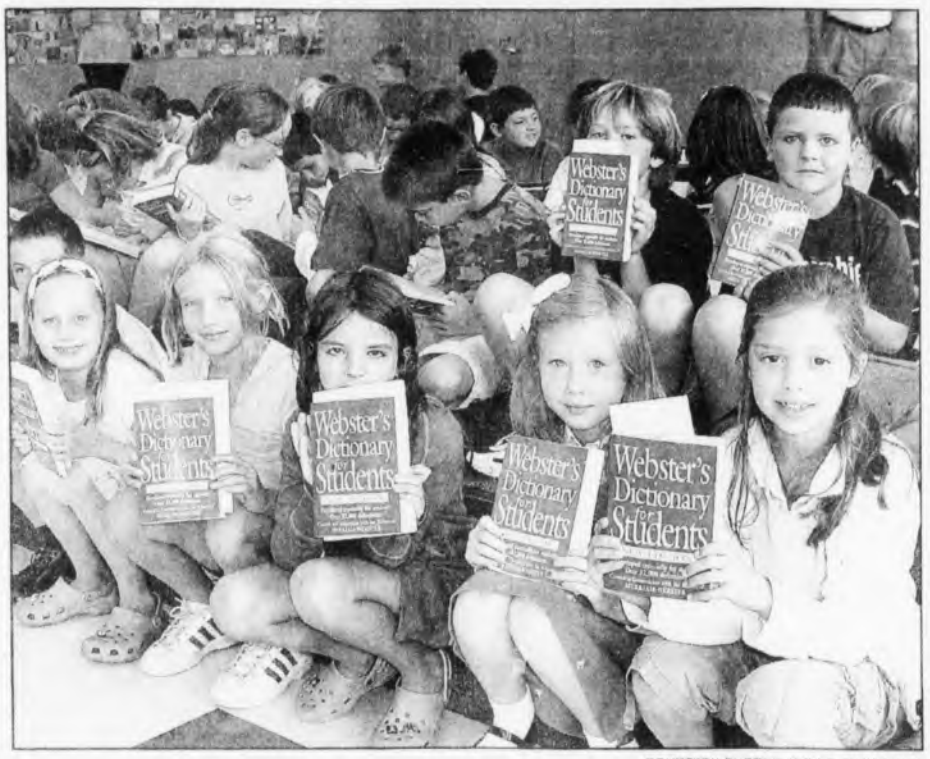
Twelve Rotarians attended the distribution of the dictionaries last Thursday morning along with the entire third grade class, their teachers and aides. Roche explained to the third graders some of the projects the Rotary Club is involved with around town, including the re-building of the Beechwood Ballpark, the construction of the Veteran's Memorial and Boy Scout endeavors. She conveyed the Rotary's motto "service about self" and how much its members enjoy giving back to the community. When the kids were handed the dictionaries, "they were pretty excited," says Roche.

A student representative from each classroom stood up to thank the Rotary Club for the donation on behalf of their classmates. A letter was sent home to parents explaining the donation.

"The dictionary is theirs to keep and use throughout the year," says Roche. The gift ties in to the third grade curriculum where dictionary skills are worked on, says third grade teacher, Arna Lewis.

"It is a perfect year for them to have their very own. We have large hardcover dictionaries in the classroom so we all appreciate the size of the paperbacks - the ease of use means that they will choose to use them more often," says Lewis, "the kids love the dictionaries and the teachers are thrilled about them, too."

This is the Rotary's first year being involved with the Dictionary Project. The Braintree Rotary Club started the project recently and passed along the idea to Cohasset Rotary Club.



"We wanted something to bring our presence down to the lower elementary levels," says Roche, who has a third grader of her own. The Rotary Club also awards college scholarships to Cohasset High seniors. Since their inception in town, the Rotary Club has given about $500,000 worth of scholarships.

Following the success of the project at the third grade level, the Rotarians plan on continuing and expanding the project to higher grades, targeting both fifth and seventh grade students. For the fifth graders Roche said a thesaurus would be an appropriate gift, while the seventh graders starting out in foreign language studies would find use for a French or Spanish dictionary.

The Cohasset Rotary Club is part of the International Rotary Club, which is a volunteer organization with over 32,000 clubs in over 200 countries and geographical areas. The organization initiates humanitarian programs that address today's challenging issues, such as hunger, poverty, and illiteracy. The Rotary motto is "Service Above Self". Rotary clubs are non-religious, non-governmental, and open to every race, culture, and creed.

In Cohasset, the Rotary Club is responsible for the organization of the Road Race by the sea and the annual Cohasset phonebook. Internationally, the Rotary Club strives to eradicate polio and provide clean water to third world countries, both endeavors supported by the Cohasset club. Locally, Rotary has sent a dentist to Cambodia to help children with cleft lips; they support the Appalachia Project and other service trips. They donate to other projects around Cohasset like the Beechwood Ballpark and the Veteran's Memorial Park.

The Rotary Club is always looking for new members to join its ranks. Members meet for dinner every Monday evening at 6:30 p.m. at the Lightkeepers Residence. Anyone is welcome. On Monday, Sept. 17 Tom Hall of Scituate will give a presentation on the only seven-masted schooner - the Thomas Lawson.

Deer Hill third graders hold up their new dictionaries given by the Rotary Club. Dictionary skills are part of the third grade curriculum making this a perfect gift for the students, says teacher Arna Lewis.

Jean Roche personally hands a dictionary to her daughter, Paige. The new project for the Rotary Club gave each third grader a dictionary to help them with their studies.

Wrapping it up

Mary Jo Blackington and Carolyn Coffey, co-chairs of the PSO Innisbrook wrapping paper drive, stand beside their display in the Osgood School lobby. Colorful wrapping paper designs, gift items, magazine subscriptions and chocolates are available through the PSO fundraiser. Last year, the sale raised nearly $16,000 for the PSO and the schools.

PSO kicks off another year

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

School opened just last week, but the dedicated parents of the PSO have wasted no time getting back into the swing of things. This week, the PSO kicked off its second largest fundraiser for the schools with the Innisbrook wrapping paper drive at Deer Hill and Osgood.

The PSO, or Parent Schools Organization, is a parent volunteer driven group devoted to providing support to Cohasset schools through fundraising, organizing and donating time.

"The PSO performs almost a silent function," says PSO President Isabel Blackburn explaining how the small tasks the PSO undertakes, from finding room mothers to creating a school calendar of events, are essential to the success of the schools as a whole. "The schools depend on it," she says.

Fundraising is a key aspect of the PSO. The wrapping paper drive raised nearly $16,000 for the schools last year. The co-chairs of the drive, Mary Jo Blackington and Carolyn Coffey, hope to meet or exceed that amount for this year's drive.

"The money is used for myriad events and programs at all grade levels," says Blackburn. Teachers can apply for grants to enhance the classroom experience through innovative programs or supplies. Last year, the PSO funded the middle-high school adoption of the Anti-Defamation League's peer leadership program and along with the Cohasset Education Foundation the engineering lab at the middle-high school. Throughout the school year, the PSO sponsors curriculum enrichment programs in the Deer Hill and Osgood schools.

"We try to make learning more interesting and exciting, but also tie it in to the curriculum," says Blackburn. Other school-related events and spirit days, like Snapper Sneaker day at Osgood, are completely funded and carried out by the PSO.

Last year, the money raised from the wrapping paper drive solved a major problem for the Osgood School. They had a new pre-school program, but no age appropriate playground equipment, says Blackburn. Instead of a recess on the playground with friends, the teachers took the children for walks to get fresh air and exercise. The PSO stepped in and used the funds raised from the wrapping paper drive to purchase three pieces of pre-school age appropriate equipment. Colorful pieces of equipment, a slide, a seesaw, and monkey bars, are now incorporated into the playground for all the students at Osgood.

"I think you naturally want to help your children any way you can. Their focus right now is school, so that's where I am."
— Mary Jo Blackington, PSO

To get the kids excited about the wrapping paper sale, Blackington and Coffey have set up eye-catching displays of the various products available through the Innisbrook catalog in the lobbies of both elementary schools. They have expanded this year's fund drive theme of "Innisbrook's got the beat" by posting signs in the shape of musical notes and playing music on the playground during recess. This year's catalog features a selection of new items and old favorites. The Innisbrook website offers hundreds of products from wrapping paper to gift items to magazine subscriptions and chocolates.

The Innisbrook products have won over the chairs of the wrapping paper drive, "the wrapping paper is easy to wrap with and easy to cut. It's good quality and a good value," says Coffey. Blackburn says she stocks up on the wrapping paper so it will last for the whole year.

Better still is the fact 50 percent of the profit goes directly to the Cohasset PSO and back into the schools.

About 200 parents volunteer time and skill to the PSO at some point during the school year, but the group is always recruiting more parents to be involved.

"I think you naturally want to help your children any way you can. Their focus right now is school, so that's where I am," says Blackington. To her, joining the PSO was a "no-brainer." All three women say the PSO is also a great way to meet other parents and people in the community. There is a PSO committee in every school that meets monthly, typically during the day.

"There are opportunities for different kinds of time commitments," says Blackburn. Parents can help out with the Deer Hill or Osgood book fairs, another fundraiser, or help organize a curriculum enrichment program.

"We need the presence of the PSO and parents to make the schools run," says Blackburn.

The Innisbrook wrapping paper drive began on Sept. 19 and will continue through Sept. 28. If interested in purchasing Innisbrook products, but don't know any school-age children, catalogs can be picked up at school offices, the library, Town Hall, and at each nursery school. Purchases can also be made online at www.innisbrook-wraps.com. If placing an order online, each school has a code to ensure a portion goes to the Cohasset PSO. Osgood's code is 105210. Deer Hill's code is 105257. For each order over $75, there is free shipping.

If you have any questions or would like to receive a catalog, please contact Carolyn Coffey at 383-8182 or Mary Jo Blackington at 383-0626.

Watershed Academy enrollment underway

CSCR, Microsoft and Cohasset Middle High School announce that enrollment for South Shore middle and high school students is now underway for the Watershed Academy.

With a grant from Microsoft's Partners in Learning program, CSCR announces three reasons for students to join the Watershed Academy:

By joining Watershed Academy students will learn new science skills and make contributions to the community; they'll be taught by a faculty of professionals with expertise in marine science, ecology, computer technology, global climate change, engineering and math; and will develop and hone a resume that distinguishes them as desirable candidates for college admission and/or as a competent employee.

What is the Watershed Academy? CSCR's Watershed Academy is an after-school science, technology, engineering and math program funded by a grant from Microsoft. Watershed Academy teaches the scientific inquiry skills that students need to help their communities address environmental problems, and the Watershed Academy method emphasizes collaborative learning. Students are partners with professional scientists, town officials, community leaders and teachers focused on developing skills and knowledge needed to expand community understanding of a particular project. It's a project-based, goal-driven curriculum with a process that immerses students in scientific thought, exposes them to the complexities of environmental sciences, challenges them to become community leaders and gives them the opportunity to develop globally connections.

CSCR's Watershed Academy is an after-school science, technology, engineering and math program funded by a grant from Microsoft.

Watershed Academy begins the week of Oct 1. Academy expenses are grant-funded so there is no tuition fee for this educational opportunity. Enrollment is always open to accommodate student schedules.

Sign up and course information is available at CSCR's Web site at cescr.org. For information, call 781-383-0129 or email cscr@verizon.net.

From the Archives of the Cohasset Historical Society

Images of Cohasset's railroad history from the Society's archival collection include Cohasset residents waiting for the train, the second permanent Cohasset Station, and a ticket on the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad.

From the Archives is a weekly feature provided by Cohasset Historical Society.

The Cohasset Historical Society is preparing its fall exhibit on the history of the railroad in Cohasset and they are asking the residents of the town for help. They are looking for temporary loans or donations of Cohasset-related train memorabilia to include in the exhibit. Contact the Historical Society at 781-383-1434 if you have any items you are willing to loan. They greatly appreciate any assistance that you can provide.

Skippers running game worthy in game one win

By Joel Racicot
JRACICOT@CNC.COM

With preseason concerns about Cohasset's offensive line lingering, the first game proved those issues may not be so prevalent after all.

The line was hit hard by graduation last year, but 270 yards rushing and a 21-7 win over Pembroke in the season opener Saturday are the kind of results that will make any coach pleased.

"The line did a nice job and the backs executed really well," Cohasset High School football coach Pete Afanasiw said.

Senior captain Sam DeGiacomo scored twice to lead the Skippers, once in the first quarter and again in the second. The 5-foot, 9-inch, 170-pounder finished with 62 yards on only six carries. Six-foot, 2-inch, 185-pound Kyle Pinkus carried the bulk of the load totaling 117 yards on 13 carries. The senior captain added a 24-yard touchdown run in the third quarter.

Six-foot, 2-inch, 220-pound senior P.J. McCaw finished with 65 yard on eight carries from fullback. Five-foot, 11-inch, 190-pound sophomore Dana Valentine collected 48 yards on five carries.

Afanasiw's reasons for using so many rushers are simple – these guys are playing both ways and they get tired. Pinkus, for example, led the team with 12 tackles from middle linebacker and according to the coach, Valentine "is an even better cornerback than he is a running back."

"He took some big hits but bounced back. He has proven to be a leader on the field."
Cohasset High School football Coach Pete Afanasiw

Although Afanasiw acknowledged half jokingly the young tailback would never admit that.

Senior David Snowdale played well behind center finishing 5-of-12 for 88 yards. The 6-foot, 3-inch, 170-pounder also displayed a level of toughness quarterbacks need to be successful at the high school level.

"He took some big hits but bounced back," Afanasiw said. "He has proven to be a leader on the field."

Six-foot, 1-inch, 190-pound Cliff Musto recorded two sacks and a pair of tackles for losses from defensive end. The senior finished with six tackles.

"Cliff (Musto) had a tremendous game," Afanasiw said.

Working on the weekend

Lady Skippers nail down tourney victory

By Joel Racicot
JRACICOT@CNC.COM

What a way to start the season for the Cohasset High School girls soccer team. The Skippers went 1-1 this weekend at the Notre Dame Academy Tournament. Saturday they defeated Notre Dame Academy, 2-1, and Sunday lost to Sandwich, 2-1.

Both teams represented top tier competition, and head coach Deb Beale couldn't have been happier with how her team fared.

"All in all I am very pleased with the weekend and our performance," Beal stated through an e-mail. "I think we learned a lot and we now know just how tough we can be. It was clearly a more challenging opening week than in years past."

Juniors forward Tory Hart, midfielder Maggie McGoldrick and defenseman Sarah Coggins were named to the tournament all-star team.

The Skippers persevered through some serious late summer heat and a poor start Saturday against Notre Dame Academy. The host school scored first, but Cohasset responded when Hart hit McGoldrick on a throw in with the former finishing with a goal.

"We began disorganized and had trouble identifying our marks defensively right from the start," Beal said.

McGoldrick's goal was a boost for the Skippers going into halftime.

Kacy Kucinski added her second goal in as many games as Cohasset took a 2-1 lead with 12 minutes to play. Kucinski continues to make fans of both her teammates and her coaches.

"Kacy proved a lot to herself and to her teammates this weekend," Beal stated. "If what she showed this weekend is indicative of how she'll play we (are) very excited. Her desire to get the ball and score is contagious and I have seen a push from us offensively."

Despite the loss to Sandwich in the championship game, the Skippers put in an even better performance than the day before. One are that needed fixing was defense.

"Defensively we struggled and I ended up making some adjustments and putting some veteran players in the back and we made some improvements," Beal said.

The Blue Knights scored first but Cohasset responded soon after when Coggins beat the keeper high.

Although Cohasset went on to lose the game, many other players had notable performances in

Field hockey swings into action

Girls go 3-0 against tough competition

By Joel Racicot
JRACICOT@CNC.COM

The Cohasset High School field hockey team is displaying a mature level of leadership from its veteran players who have been more than willing to work with a talented group of youngsters. The result is a 3-0 record and one of the best starts in head coach Deb Bostwick's career as Skippers skipper.

"This is probably one of the better starts we have had in many years," Bostwick said after Monday afternoon's 2-0 victory over South Shore League rival Norwell.

Three wins to start the season is a good early indicator, but beating East Bridgewater, 2-0, and Nantucket on the road, 2-1, proves Cohasset can play with the big dogs.

"I feel like we are going to be really strong this season, better than we were last season. We have some younger girls coming up that are going to be positive members of the team and I think we are going to play really well together."
Sally Meehan

A first half goal from Izzy Franklin, assisted by Kaleigh Teague kept the Skippers afloat through much of Monday's game. They wouldn't score again until Sally Meehan found the back of the net with four minutes to play. Fellow senior captain Paige Strecker assisted on the play.

"I feel like we are going to be really strong this season, better than we were last season," Meehan said. "We have some younger girls coming up that are going to be positive members of the team and I think we are going to play really well together."

So far that combination has worked, due in part because captains Meehan, Strecker and Olivia Kimla allow it to.

"The veteran players are letting the new girls do their job instead of taking over," Bostwick said. "I commend them with positive communication and playing with a lot of heart."

"A lot of the younger girls worked (hard) over the summer and got their skills up," Strecker said. "They are amazing players and we have gotten really lucky with them."

A reel fish story

First Annual Mass Bay Football Tuna Tourney scores big

By Joel Racicot
JRACICOT@CNC.COM

Forty-four boats from the South Shore, including Cohasset, set off this weekend for the First Annual Mass Bay Football Tuna Tourney sponsored by Belsan Bait and Tackle in Scituate. The opening weekend of the National Football League, along with the nickname given to Blue Fin Tuna a little light in the pants, gave way to the clever name of the fishing derby.

There were two categories of winners, heaviest fish and lightest. All Blue Fin Tuna were weighed at Belsan's, and fish had to be caught anywhere in Mass Bay from Provincetown to Gloucester.

Steven Sloari of Newton, who keeps his boat "Toolin Around" in Scituate Harbor, won for catching the heaviest fish, a 74.8-pound behemoth Blue Fin Tuna. Eric Laudermilk, a Plymouth native aboard "Four Days Out," won the lightest category catching a 46.6-pound "football."

"It was a good tournament," said Pete Belsan the tournament director. "The weather was decent, it got a little rough late Saturday, the southwest wind started to blow pretty good."

In total 39 fish were caught during the two-day tourney.

"I want to thank everyone who supported, it was a big success," Belsan said.

Belsan plans on making the tourney a yearly event during the opening weekend of the NFL season.

the tournament according to Beal and continue to play well.

"Johanna Brophy has been stellar in net as usual and is working hard with Brittany Dunn to solidify our final gate to the goal," Beal said. "Sammi Lehr is working hard at sweeper and learning to organize her outside backs. Anna Haggerty and Meredith Kelly are defending the attack very well and have been working hard.

"Tori Lehr at sweeper is learning and adjusting to the varsity game and I have high hopes for her. Outside midfielders Caroline Fein, Meg Richardson, Mackenzie Hart, Rachel McMorris and Dominique Rioux are working hard and becoming very productive from the outside of the field. (Sarah) Coggins and (Maggie) McGoldrick are our field generals in the middle and have really taken on more of a leader role on the team along with Torey Hart up front. Krisitin Monaco has been bouncing back and forth between forward and center-mid and has proved that she can play there. Up front Hart leads the charge with tremendous support from Kucinski, Christine Coner and Meg Anderson. Anderson and Haggerty are our two seniors and captains and they have been doing a great job organizing and supporting the team."

Cohasset played Wednesday at Rockland after Mariner deadline. Monday, Sept. 17, the Skippers will travel to Harwich for a 4 p.m. game.

Skippers avoid early hazards

Three wins in tow as boys ready for Clippers

By Joel Racicot
JRACICOT@CNC.COM

With a 3-1 start, the Cohasset High School boys golf team is poised and ready to take on returning South Shore League Champion Norwell, Tuesday at the Cohasset Golf Club. The two teams have built up quite a rivalry over the past few seasons and this year should be no different.

The Skippers finished in second place behind Norwell last year with a 9-3 overall record and will return their number three, four and five golfers from a year ago. Cohasset beat Norwell in the league tournament last year.

That middle tier from a season ago is now leading the pack and head coach Torin Sweeney is excited about his guys chances against the Clippers, who return five of six starters.

"You have to win your home course," Sweeney said, acknowledging that Norwell may have a strong core returning, but not conceding his own guys chances.

Charlie Czerkawski returns as a senior captain and number one, while teammates John Wade (junior) and Chase Stebbins (sophomore) return as the two and three. Ian Quinlan (sophomore) who played a little at six last year will play at four, while freshman Rob Hill plays five.

Conor Michaud (senior), Harry Cipolla (sophomore) and Conor Queenan (sophomore) are all in the mix for the sixth starting position.

After losing to Quincy to open the season, the Skippers rebounded with wins against Cardinal Spellman, Mashpee and East Bridgewater.

Wade, Stebbins and Hill won their matches against the Presidents. The Skippers went on to beat the Cardinals 29-25, with wins from Czerkawski, Wade, Stebbins and Hill. They got league wins against Mashpee (28.5-23.5) and East Bridgewater (31-19). Wade, Stebbins, Quinlan and Hill won against the Hawks and Czerkawski, Wade, Stebbins, and Hill won against the Vikings with Cipolla tying his match.

9/11 puts problems in perspective

LIFE AT CHS

CHRISTINE KENT

As I sat down this evening, Sept. 11th, my mind wandered back to a candlelight vigil I attended six years ago at the international school I was attending in London, England. I was 11 years old and as a few chosen seniors from various cultures, stood in solidarity to read brief speeches and pieces of poetry to the shell-shocked crowd, I remember being sad, scared, and confused by the world I lived in. Maybe it's good to still remember how I felt that day it tends to put things in perspective. There have been rumblings among the members of the class of '08 regarding the lack luster senior lounge and relocation of the "senior hallway". I'll keep you posted.

"There is a time and place for everything", and Sept. 12th is a better day to worry about the injustices of the senior lounge and hallway.

Before this gets too heavy, here is a look at the week's top stories:

• Monday, Sept. 10th, the Girls Varsity Field Hockey Team beat Norwell on their home field...Good job Girls and go JV! Say cheese, the middle school kids' show off their pearly whites for picture day. And just a word to the wise, with the recent High School Musical scandal surrounding Vanessa Hudgens or Gabriella to those fanatical HMS, be careful what pictures you "expose" to the world wide web.

I remember being sad, scared, and confused by the world I lived in...

• Tuesday, Sept. 11th, during first period the entire school participated in a moment of silence in remembrance of the victims of 9/11.

• Wednesday, Sept. 12th, the senior peer leaders had lunch with their new freshmen friends...who's up for trust activities?

• Thursday, Sept. 13th, Happy Rosh Hashanah! Not much happened except for the ninth-grade parent coffee and conversation meeting in the library...let's hope they used their "one inch voices" and didn't forget to bring a pass down for Ms. Conroy!

• Friday, Sept. 14th, High school picture day! Hopefully you underclassmen combed your hair and put on a happy face!

Well, that's it for me. This column will return next week with its typical good cheer, cynicism, and lack of perspective. Until then, take care and have a great weekend.

Christine Kent is a senior at CHS. Her column appears weekly in the Mariner.

A.P.P.L.E. Project improves communication

Time is running out, and the Cohasset Parents Advisory Council would like a couple of more parents from the Cohasset School District to have the opportunity to be involved with the A.P.P.L.E. Institute — Advancing Parent-Professional Leadership in Education.

The A.P.P.L.E. project is a research project funded by the U.S. Department of Education to learn more about ways to improve communication and collaboration between parents of children receiving special education services and the school administration personnel with whom they interact. The A.P.P.L.E. Project will provide collaborative school system teams with training that will allow parents of children receiving special education services to learn skills that will help them become full and effective partners with their schools.

Currently they are recruiting parents of children with Individual Education Plans and 504 Plans – ages 6 through 16 – from Cohasset, Hampdon-Wilbraham, Northboro/Southboro School District, Sandwich and Tewksbury to fill the remaining slots available for a three-day Parent Leadership Development Institute scheduled for Oct. 18 through 20 in Marlborough.

Consider getting involved. If interested in participating, call the research team as soon as possible at UMass: Mathew Kusminsky, 617-287-4373, or Susan Foley, 617-287-4317; or the Federation for Children with Special Needs at 617-236-7210. More information about this project is available by email at southshorepac@comcast.net.

The entire group during the Appalachia Service Project in West Virginia, summer 2007.

Cohasset Appalachia Service Project to begin

Gearing up for their 21st trip, the Cohasset Appalachia Service Project will hold its informational meeting at 8 p.m., Sunday, Sept. 16, at the Second Congregational Church, next to Town Hall, for all interested teenagers and their parents. A newly designed presentation will include guest speakers and slides from this past summer's trip and pertinent information for the 2008 trip, planned for June 21 to 29.

Necessary registration forms will also be distributed. The deadline for registration is Monday, Oct. 1. Forms and information will be available beginning Tuesday, Sept. 18, by visiting www.cohassetasp.org. Adults are also needed to go on the trip.

The grand opening of the Pumpkin Patch, sponsored by Cohasset ASP, will be Saturday, Oct. 6, on No. Main Street.

Children's art classes filling up

Classes are filling quickly for fall children's classes at the South Shore Art Center. Courses and workshops are available for students beginning at age 4 and a half. Pre-k and kindergarten classes will be offered by Patrice Kelley and Ann Conte, both popular Art Center instructors who have been recognized by the Art Center with the Shirley Neer Teaching Award, an annual award honoring a children's art instructor.

Adult/child holiday workshops are also scheduled and are a great opportunity for parents or grandparents to take a class with their child(ren). Spooky Town, will be held on Sunday afternoon, October 21, from 1:30-3:30 and a two-part clay workshop Cocoa & Cookies, held on Sundays November 18 and December 12.

Our World

Sargis Karapetyan and Nune Hakobyan.

Violin, piano concert at St. Stephen's

As the first program of this year's concert series, St. Stephen's Church is pleased to present violinist Sargis Karapetyan and his wife, Nune Hakobyan in concert on Sunday, Sept. 30, at 3 p.m.

Karapetyan received his training in Armenia at the Komitas State University and is currently concertmaster of the Nashua Symphony. He not only teaches at Clark University, but is also an instructor for Conservatory Teaching in Your Community. Nune Hakobyan also earned her master's degree in piano performance from Komitas, and is now organist at St. James Armenian Church in Watertown, Mass. She is also pianist with the Nashua Symphony. The concert will be introduced by David Baker, Director of Music at St. Stephen's, and a reception will follow the program.

The church at 16 Highland Ave. is handicap accessible, and plenty of parking is available at the village car park. Admission is free, but donations will be accepted. For information, please call 781.383.1083.

THE HIGHLY ANTICIPATED NEW THRILLER FROM THE DIRECTOR OF A HISTORY OF VIOLENCE
Rolling Stone
"A MESMERIZING POWER-PUNCH OF A THRILLER. David Cronenberg is a visionary. Brilliant film. Brilliant director. His films pop and resonate. 'Eastern Promises' is Viggo Mortensen's tour de force. Naomi Watts is extraordinary."

The entire group during the Appalachia Service Project in West Virginia, summer 2007.

Cohasset Appalachia Service Project to begin

Gearing up for their 21st trip, the Cohasset Appalachia Service Project will hold its informational meeting at 8 p.m., Sunday, Sept. 16, at the Second Congregational Church, next to Town Hall, for all interested teenagers and their parents. A newly designed presentation will include guest speakers and slides from this past summer's trip and pertinent information for the 2008 trip, planned for June 21 to 29.

Necessary registration forms will also be distributed. The deadline for registration is Monday, Oct. 1. Forms and information will be available beginning Tuesday, Sept. 18, by visiting www.cohassetasp.org. Adults are also needed to go on the trip.

The grand opening of the Pumpkin Patch, sponsored by Cohasset ASP, will be Saturday, Oct. 6, on No. Main Street.

Children's art classes filling up

Classes are filling quickly for fall children's classes at the South Shore Art Center. Courses and workshops are available for students beginning at age 4 and a half. Pre-k and kindergarten classes will be offered by Patrice Kelley and Ann Conte, both popular Art Center instructors who have been recognized by the Art Center with the Shirley Neer Teaching Award, an annual award honoring a children's art instructor.

Adult/child holiday workshops are also scheduled and are a great opportunity for parents or grandparents to take a class with their child(ren). Spooky Town, will be held on Sunday afternoon, October 21, from 1:30-3:30 and a two-part clay workshop Cocoa & Cookies, held on Sundays November 18 and December 12.

Our World

Alphabet Immersion spells fun!

The fall session at Our World CGDM will be Wednesday, Sept. 19, through Wednesday, Dec. 12; and Thursday, Sept. 20 through Thursday, Dec. 13.

Upcoming events include:

Alphabet Immersion Fun – 12 weeks. Cost is $102 for members, $120, non–members. Using the letters of the day, children will immerse themselves in alphabet specific games and activities including Alphabet Role-Play, ABC Bingo, Alphabet Noises and letter-specific crafts. Children ages 3 through 6 can have fun playing with new friends while learning the alphabet. Meets Wednesday or Thursday, 9:15 to 10:05 a.m., or Wednesday or Thursday from 12:30 to 1:20 p.m.

Sports with Jan – 12 weeks. Cost is $102, members, $120, non–members. Sports-related skills are important to every child's social and physical development. Jan St. Pierre will teach children age-appropriate skills in a fun and safe environment. Meets Wednesday, 10:15 to 11 a.m. for ages 3 through 5; Wednesday, 11:15 a.m. to noon, for ages 4 through 6.

Artsy Fun – 12 weeks. Cost is $102 members, $120, non–members. Each week participants will work on two or three fun and creative art projects. Children will play with paint, clay, scissor crafts, collage, photographs and glue. Projects will follow the seasons and children will create art for framing or holiday gift giving. For ages 3 through 6. Meets Wednesday or Thursday, 10:15 to 11:05 a.m.; Wednesday or Thursday, 2:30 to 3:20 p.m.

Fantasy Fun – 12 weeks. Cost is $102, members, $120, non–members. Each week attendees will read themed stories of adventure; pirates, fairies, princesses, dragons, dinosaurs, etc. Afterwards, children will create a fantasy craft and act out an adventure of their own. For ages 3 through 6. Meets Wednesday or Thursday, 11:15 a.m. to 12:05 p.m.; Wednesday or Thursday, 1:30 to 2:20 p.m.

Discovering Science – 12 weeks. Cost is $102 members, $120, non–members. Scientists will keep a lab journal as they explore different aspects of their world through weekly experiments, observations and results discussions. For students in grades one through four. Meets. Wednesday from 3:30 to 4:30 p.m.

Jewelry and Sewing for Beginners – 12 weeks. Cost is $119, members, $140 for non–members. Participants will create several different projects including jewelry, bags, room décor and holiday decorations. Kids will learn about beading and wire twisting, and both hand and machine sewing. For students in grades one through four. Meets Thursday from 3:30 to 4:30 p.m.

Kitchen Kids at Our World – Six-week sessions $$120, members, $138 for non–members. Session I, Sept. 27 through Nov. 1; Session II, Nov. 8 through Dec. 13. Kids will be enlivened with bright colors, wonderful aromas and tantalizing flavors. Even the fussiest of eaters will be thrilled to eat something they have made with their own hands. Classes are hands–on with step–by=step instructions offered in a safe and clean environment. Those attending will cook "Around Our World" and learn about the different cuisines of different cultures. Ages 3 through 6 meet Thursday, from 1:30 to 3:30 p.m.; grades kindergarten through four will meet Thursday, from 3:30 to 5 p.m.

Kitchen Kids Workshops – Freakish Feasts, Saturday, Oct. 27, from 1 to 3 p.m., for grades one through four. Make freakish Halloween treats to delight even the most tempestuous eaters. Gingerbread Fun, Saturday, Nov. 10, from 1 to 3 p.m. For grades one through four. Get ready to decorate for the holiday season with a creation made from hand-made gingerbread. Cookies Around the World, Saturday, Dec. 8, from 1 to 3 p.m. For grades one through four. Attendees will make cookies and treats from different nations and learn that sweets taste great everywhere.

Birthday Parties – Our World offers many different ways to celebrate a child's birthday party at the museum. Our World can host a child's birthday party that includes an experienced instructor who will set up the room with provided decorations, lead several hands-on activities and clean everything up at the end. Or rent museum space and throw a party. Full use of the kitchen, function room and the Biodiversity 911 Exhibit offered. Call the museum at 781–383–3198 for more information.

Sargis Karapetyan and Nune Hakobyan.

Violin, piano concert at St. Stephen's

As the first program of this year's concert series, St. Stephen's Church is pleased to present violinist Sargis Karapetyan and his wife, Nune Hakobyan in concert on Sunday, Sept. 30, at 3 p.m.

Karapetyan received his training in Armenia at the Komitas State University and is currently concert-master of the Nashua Symphony. He not only teaches at Clark University, but is also an instructor for Conservatory Teaching in Your Community. Nune Hakobyan also earned her master's degree in piano performance from Komitas, and is now organist at St. James Armenian Church in Watertown, Mass. She is also pianist with the Nashua Symphony. The concert will be introduced by David Baker, Director of Music at St. Stephen's, and a reception will follow the program.

The church at 16 Highland Ave. is handicap accessible, and plenty of parking is available at the village car park. Admission is free, but donations will be accepted. For information, please call 781.383.1083.

It's time to stop the secondhand in our schools.

Every second our children are exposed to secondhand smoke, their health is in danger.

It's against the law for anyone, including teachers and parents, to use tobacco products on school property.

Secondhand smoke can make a child sick and can cause asthma, ear infections and respiratory illness.

STOP THE SECONDHAND

To report smoking on school property, call Stop the Secondhand at 1-800-992-1895. It's anonymous.

The Company Theatre announces its 2008 Concert Season

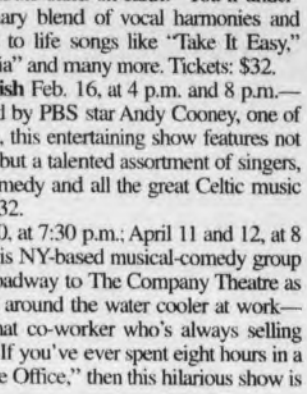
Tickets on sale Monday, Sept. 17, at 11 a.m.

The Company Theatre in Norwell, has announced its 2008 Concert Season, providing the area with the best in music, dance and comedy. Tickets for all shows go on sale Monday, Sept. 17, at 11 a.m. Tickets can be purchased at the box-office at 30 Accord Park in Norwell, by phone at 781-871-2787, and online at companytheatre.com

The 2008 Concert Season lineup is as follows:

Changes in Latitude Jan. 11, at 8 p.m.— Parrot Heads unite! America's premier tribute to Jimmy Buffett is serving up a "Cheeseburger in Paradise" washed down with a "Margaritaville" Tickets: $32.

John Mueller as Buddy Holly



Winter Dance Party Jan. 12, at 4 p.m. and 8 p.m.—Journey to Rock 'n Roll Heaven as this live concert recreates the final tour of Buddy Holly (John Mueller), Ritchie Valens (Ray Anthony) and the Big Bopper (his real-life son, J.P. Richardson, Jr.), with songs like "Peggy Sue," "Rave On," "La Bamba" and "Chantilly Lace." Tickets: $34.

Almost Heaven: The Songs of John Denver Jan. 18 and 19, at 8 p.m.; Jan. 20, and 3 p.m.— The Off-Broadway smash hit that the NY Times calls "Like flying with John Denver through some mountain air." Along with hit songs like "Take Me Home Country Roads," "Sunshine on My Shoulders" and "Leaving on a Jet Plane," these talented singers and musicians will take you on a "Rocky Mountain High" as they remember Denver's life through music, stories and video footage. Tickets: $30.

Tequila Sunrise: A Tribute to The Eagles Feb. 1 and 2, at 8 p.m.—This Nashville-based band has been called by Rolling Stone magazine "The best Eagles tribute band on earth!" You'll understand why as their extraordinary blend of vocal harmonies and excellent musicianship brings to life songs like "Take It Easy," "Lying Eyes," "Hotel California" and many more. Tickets: $32.

Andy Cooney's Forever Irish Feb. 16, at 4 p.m. and 8 p.m.— Direct from Ireland and hosted by PBS star Andy Cooney, one of Ireland's most popular singers, this entertaining show features not only Cooney's brilliant voice, but a talented assortment of singers, exciting Irish step dancers, comedy and all the great Celtic music you know and love. Tickets: $32.

The Water Coolers April 10, at 7:30 p.m.; April 11 and 12, at 8 p.m.; April 13, at 3 p.m.— This NY-based musical-comedy group takes their show from Off-Broadway to The Company Theatre as they satirize all we talk about around the water cooler at work—kids, husbands, wives, and that co-worker who's always selling their kid's Girl Scout cookies. If you've ever spent eight hours in a tiny cubicle, or love TV's "The Office," then this hilarious show is for you. Tickets: $28.

The Lettermen

The Lettermen April 20, at 3 p.m. and 7 p.m.— From their first hit in 1961—"The Way You Look Tonight," through 18 gold albums and scores of top singles like "Hurt So Bad" and ""Going Out of My Head", the popularity of The Lettermen are still going strong. Original founding member Tony Butala performs with Donovan Tea (who joined the trio in 1984) and Mark Preston as they continue the same smooth silky vocals and great showmanship this group is known for. Tickets: $36.

Barbra & Frank: The Concert That Never Was May 10, at 4 p.m. and 8 p.m.—They never shared the stage together… until now. All thanks to the dazzling talents of Sebastian Anzaldo as Frank Sinatra (seen last year at The Company Theatre in "The Rat Pack is Back") and Sharon Owens as Barbra Streisand, backed by a full band. Tickets $31.

Who's Next: The Ultimate Tribute May 17, at 8 p.m.—From the pinwheeling guitar of Pete Townshend, to the manic drumming of Keith Moon, to the wailing vocals of Roger Daltrey, this New York-based group recreates perfectly the band that brought us such legendary songs as "Pinball Wizard," Baba O'Reilly," "Won't Get Fooled Again," "My Generation," and more! Tickets: $29.

Auditions

AUDITION FOR "MUSICAL HOLIDAY PARTY #20," Oct. 1 and 2, at 7 p.m., Braintree Sons of Italy, 161 King Hill Road. Field of dreams in Beechwood

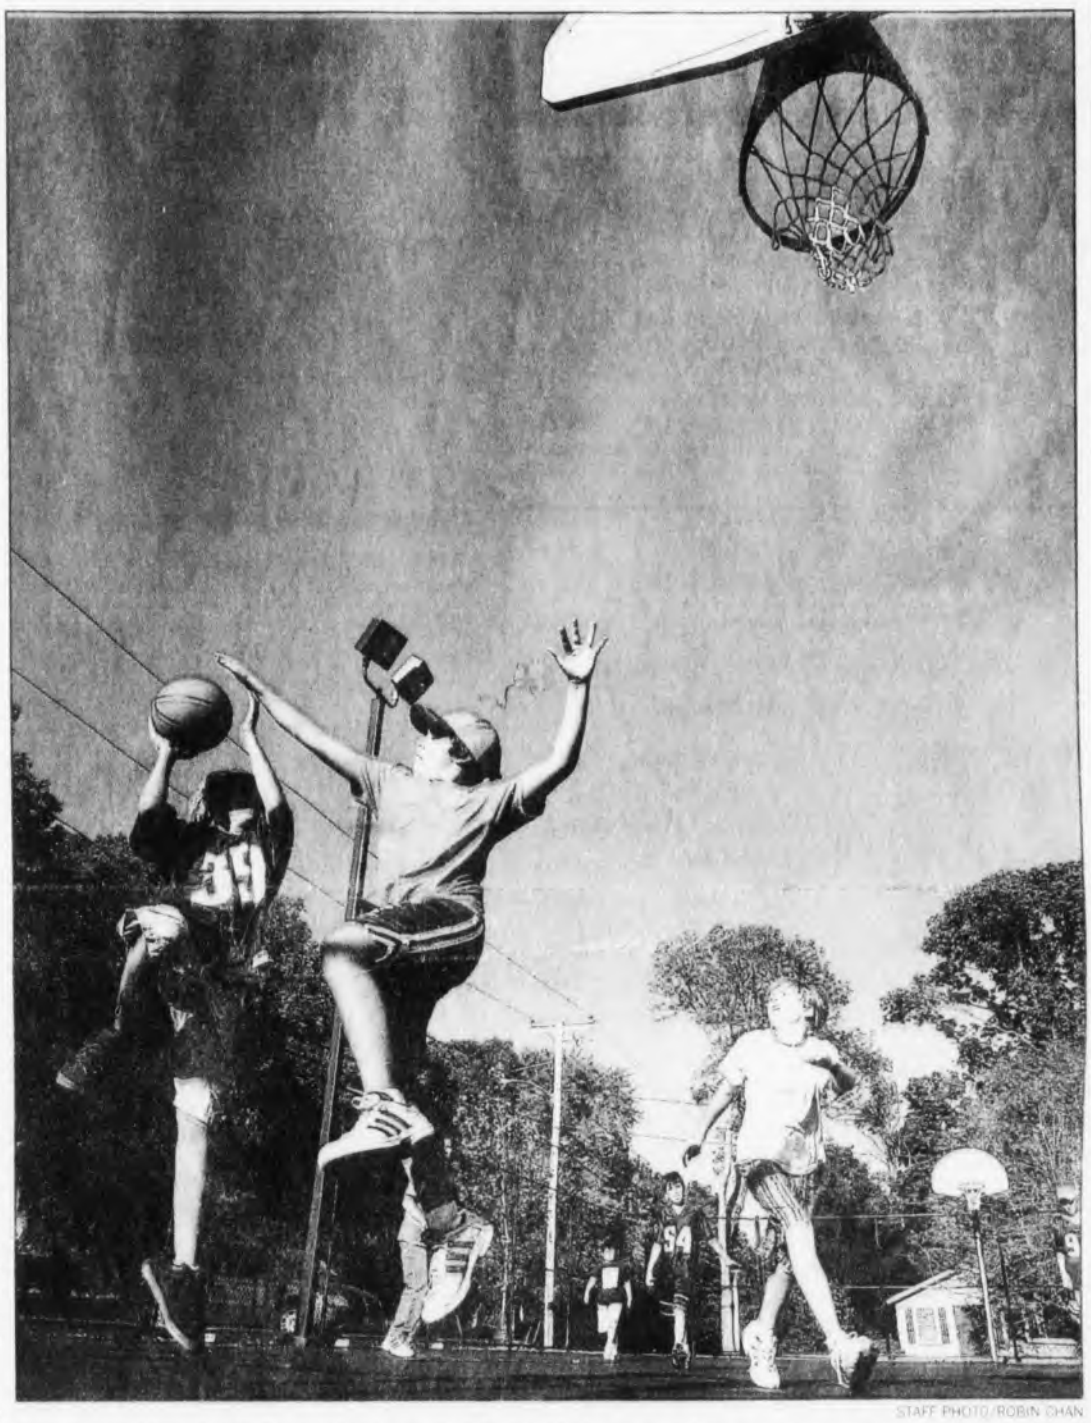
Ballpark celebration on Sat., Sept. 29

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

The crack of the bat, the bounce of a basketball, the laughing cries of kids on a playground — these sounds will converge soon enough on the newly renovated Beechwood Ballpark.

Located at the corner of Doane and Beechwood streets, the Beechwood Ballpark has been re-oriented, re-structured and re-vamped and at last is ready for its official unveiling. A dedication and celebration of the Beechwood Ballpark will be held on Saturday, Sept. 29 beginning at 8:30a.m.



The project is a testament to what true cooperation can yield: town boards, residents and volunteers came together during the four-year process to bring the project to fruition. In the next week, finishing touches will be placed on the baseball field, playground and basketball court.

A dedication and celebration of the Beechwood Ballpark will be held on Saturday, Sept. 29 beginning at 8:30a.m.

"We've re-built this field from the ground up," says Merle Brown, co-chair of the Beechwood Ballpark Committee with Glenn Pratt. From the ground up means a complete leveling of the field, a sprinkler system, then layers of loam and sod. On the playground, 18 inches of playground fiber, or soft wood chips that are splinter free, were brought in to cushion children's play. The basketball court was re-paved, lined and outfitted with lights for night play. A new building with storage, handicap bathroom and running water for a snack bar is tucked in behind the backstop.

"We took every inch of property available," says Pratt, by narrowing the intersection of Doane and Beechwood and extending the park as far as the property lines could go. Shifting the

DiNero's gets additional parking

In split vote Selectmen overturn decision in June

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

It was like déjà vu at Monday night's Board of Selectmen meeting but, in the end, the outcome was entirely different. The Board, contrary to their decision at a June 18 meeting, approved the addition of two legal parking spaces on Hull Street requested by the owner of DiNero's Restaurant. Like the decision a few months ago, the vote was split 3-2.

In the early summer, the owner of DiNero's, Frank Plotner, wrote to the Town Manager Bill Griffin to seek relief from a parking ban imposed on Hull Street from Grace Drive to the restaurant parking lot. He requested three additional spaces be authorized "to help with any overflow" from the restaurant's parking area.

Griffin had Police Chief James Hussey out to look at the area to see if three spots were feasible. In a report back to the Selectmen, Hussey said two additional parking spaces were possible on Hull Street due to overgrown bushes/weeds being cut back creating space for two vehicles without blocking the travel lane.

However, at the first hearing no representatives from DiNero's were present and the Board was left with little to go on but neighbors' comments and complaints. At the meeting both Vice

Better cell coverage coming

Selectmen OK DAS network, 17 more towers

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Cohasset's spotty cell phone coverage could change for the better in the near future. The Board of Selectmen approved the installation of 17 additional wireless towers throughout Cohasset; at least one wireless carrier is interested in utilizing the towers. The Selectmen conditioned their decision on finding out the pole numbers intended for the antennas and control boxes.

Mike Cooper, a representative from Lightower (formerly National Grid Wireless) made a short presentation to the Board. His company would like to bring a DAS (Distributed Antenna System) to Cohasset, a DAS network is already operational in Hull. A DAS network is a shared, fiber-based infrastructure. Wireless carriers can locate their equipment in a central location or hub, then signals are sent over fiber cables to control boxes. Control boxes and antennas are typically located on utility poles. One carrier, which he was not able to name citing a pending agreement, would like to have the towers in place by the end of the year.

"We're coming out of the gate with one carrier, but that's not really a moneymaker [for my company]. We're actively seeking other carriers for these towers," said Cooper. For the time being, the DAS network will

STM article deadline today

Special Town Meeting is Tuesday, Nov. 13 at 7 p.m.

The deadline for article submission is Friday, Sept. 21. The warrant will be sent to the printer on Oct. 23 and sent to voters on Oct. 30, two weeks before Town Meeting.

Register to vote for Special Town Meeting

Friday, Nov. 2 will be the last day to register to vote for the Special Town Meeting to be held on Tuesday, Nov.13. Registration will be held at the Town Clerk's office from 8:30 a.m. to 8 p.m.

Any citizen of the United States who is a Massachusetts resident and who will be 18 years old on or before a town meeting or Election Day may register to vote. There is no waiting period to be eligible to register to vote. If you move, you may register to vote as soon as you move into your new home. Registration is closed for a brief period before each town meeting and election to allow election officials time to prepare the voting lists. If you register during a "closed" period, you will be eligible to vote only in later town meetings or elections.

SW bylaw needs tweaking

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

The Board of Selectmen gave specific constructive criticism to the Stormwater Management Committee on Monday night. The Stormwater bylaw has been significantly revised since being indefinitely postponed at the Annual Town Meeting, but the Selectmen's comments indicated it might not be ready for the November Special Town Meeting.

The Stormwater Committee has streamlined its bylaw from 15 to four pages. It has simplified the process to get a stormwater permit and done away with a full-blown Stormwater Commission to issue the permits. The latest version of the bylaw utilizes existing town boards (Planning Board, Board of Health and Conservation Commission) to issue permits when they already have an applicant in front of them.

"We've attempted to create a bylaw that makes sense for the town," said Stormwater Committee chairman Marty Nee. Under the federal Clean Water Act, regulations about stormwater must be on the books by next summer. If something isn't in place, the town could face fines from the government.

The proposed stormwater bylaw goes a step beyond the federal requirements by instituting a stormwater permit process for any activity that increases the impervious area on a developed parcel of land by more than 30 percent. The federal regulations only require a town to regulate development disturbing one acre or more of land or in stormwater "hot spots," i.e. auto salvage, marinas and road salt storage facilities.

Selectman Ralph Dormitzer was concerned the bylaw did not sufficiently address the problem of neighbor-to-neighbor runoff.

"There's an assumption we're going to help people here," said Dormitzer. He also was concerned the permitting process allowed for too much additional judgment and overburdened the already busy Planning Board. He suggested the process could be simplified to include less town involvement. An applicant could submit stamped stormwater runoff plans by a professional engineer to the building inspector's office, abutters would be notified of the proposed construction and then have a chance to review the plans. If neighbors had concerns, they could hire their own engineer to review the plans and work it out from there. Dormitzer's process would lessen the costs for the applicant and lessen the burden on the town boards.

Another concern expressed by Dormitzer and shared by at least Chairman Gary Vanderweil and Selectman Paul Carlson, was the bylaw created a committee in perpetuity, rather than being "a creature of the Selectmen." The bylaw would mandate a Stormwater Committee and the Board of Selectmen would lose its power to sunset the committee if its charge was no longer relevant in the future. Vanderweil said he could not give his support to the bylaw if this aspect was not changed.

Deal breaking for Vanderweil as well was having the Planning Board be the primary stormwater permitting authority. He would like to see the majority of stormwater permits go through the Building Inspector's office, with the exception of developments disturbing over one acre and undeveloped parcels.

"For me to vote in the affirmative for the bylaw, I would need those. Otherwise I don't think I could support it," said Vanderweil. The Stormwater Committee will need to decide whether to bring the bylaw to the Special Town Meeting or wait until the Annual Town Meeting in the spring.

"Try not to rush it and get a rejection on the floor of Town Meeting," advised Dormitzer.

Although the committee will meet formally in the coming weeks to determine if it would like to go ahead with the bylaw for the fall Town Meeting, from a personal standpoint Nee said he would prefer to wait until the spring Town Meeting.

"Obviously we want to go into Town Meeting with the support of the Selectmen," said Nee in a phone interview, "it's important for us to make sure we get it right before Town Meeting. I think we're close."

Detectives help in Hingham drug bust

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

A Dorchester man is facing a host of drug charges following an undercover operation that resulted in him being caught in the act of selling a quantity of heroin and cocaine.

Hingham police department spokesman Lt. Michael Peraino said Hingham detectives teamed up with detectives from Cohasset, Sgt. Gregory Lennon and Garrett Hunt, to perform an undercover operation in a parking lot off Lincoln Street (Route 3A). Hingham detectives had received information that there had been drug dealing in the parking lot and also were able to determine the identity of the alleged drug dealer, Peraino said.

The Hingham and Cohasset police departments are part of the South Shore Drug Task Force.

One undercover Hingham detective set up the buy of some heroin and cocaine last Thursday (Sept. 13) at about 3:15 p.m. while other Hingham detectives and Lennon and Hunt surrounded the lot in unmarked cars.

Soon a red Mitsubishi drove up which was the car that police expected. The operator was later identified as Daniel E. Diaz-Febres, 20, of 189 Bowdoin St., Dorchester. Police said Diaz-Febres sold two bags of heroin and one bag of cocaine to the undercover officers for $130.

Once the sale was made the detective drove off. When Diaz-Febres tried to leave the lot, the other detectives locked him in and made the arrest.

A search of Diaz-Febres' car produced 10 additional bags of cocaine and a pill bottle containing 12 Oxycodones. Also confiscated was $856 in cash. The car was seized and could be auctioned off by the District Attorney's Office if Diaz-Febres is found guilty because the car was used in the distribution of drugs, police said.

Diaz-Febres was charged with the manufacture, distribution and dispersing of a Class A drug (heroin) and a Class B drug (cocaine); he was also charged with possession of a Class B drug (cocaine) with intent to distribute and a Class E drug (Oxycodone) with intent to distribute.

He was arraigned the next morning (Sept. 14) and was released on $1,000 cash bail. He is due back in court in October.

The Hingham and Cohasset police departments are part of the South Shore Drug Task Force and assist each other when conducting drug busts.

Cohasset Chief James Hussey said drug incidents can cross town lines and that is why the SSDTF is so valuable. "We share information and work together.

"Last week's drug bust was an example of good police work all around."

Truck into pole

A utility pole did not appear to have sustained any damage after a flatbed truck with a white cab backed into it on Monday (Sept. 10). The incident was reported at 11:30 a.m. but the caller was unable to provide a license plate and the truck had left the scene when police arrived. Chief Hussey said as a precaution Verizon was called to check out the pole.

Bench stolen

A wrought-iron bench was stolen from a landscape supply company off Route 3A last week. The theft was reported on Monday (Sept. 10). Police said the bench was for sale and is valued at $350. "Right now it is under investigation and we have no good leads," Chief Hussey said. "If anyone saw anything or has information, they should call us."

Grocery mishap

A Cohasset woman who was shopping at Shaw's with her middle-age son apparently reached for a pickle jar on an upper shelf and the item came down and hit her on the head. Police said her son then "made a scene" and argued with employees at the supermarket and the store called police to have him removed.

After police arrived, the woman and her son went home; however, she later complained of being dizzy and an ambulance was called.

The store was advised on procedures to obtain a "no-trespass" order for her son, police said.

The incident occurred at about 2:20 p.m. on Monday (Sept. 10).

Speeding

An officer who was on patrol along Route 3A observed a gray BMW traveling northbound at a high rate of speed turn from 3A onto Sohier Street. The officer followed the vehicle and "clocked" its speed as about 50 mph; the speed limit there is 30 mph. Chief Hussey explained that the officer did not use radar but made a judgment of the car's speed by observing how much faster it was traveling than the cruiser.

The officer pulled the car over on Sohier Street near Ripley Road. The driver had an expired Pennsylvania license and no Massachusetts license. He will be summonsed to court for driving without a license, speeding and having no registration in his possession. The motor vehicle stop occurred at about 9:35 p.m. on (Tuesday) Sept. 11.

Window smashed

The owner of an unregistered 1998 Mazda that was parked on his Summer Street property reported to police that the window to the vehicle had been "kicked in," sometime overnight. The call came in at 11:55 a.m. on Wednesday (Sept. 12). Police could not find a weapon or projectile used to break the window. Police took a report and have no further information at this time.

Vandalism

A 20-year-old Cohasset man was arrested after a witness reported seeing him spray paint a mailbox orange and tie a noose around it. Based on the description given to police, the officer pulled the man over on Hull Street and placed him under arrest. The man did not want to be taken into custody and resisted arrest. He is facing charges of vandalism, resisting arrest, disorderly conduct and operating an unregistered MV.

Near fight

Two elderly Scituate men nearly got into a fight during a heated argument over a parking space by Walgreen's last week. "It never got physical," Chief Hussey said. "However, the argument was pretty heated prompting the second caller to notify us." Police spoke to both parties and peace was restored. One of the men had apparently pulled into a space as the other man was getting ready to back into it. The incident occurred at about 4:29 p.m. on Thursday (Sept. 13).

Shoplifting

A Scituate man is facing a shoplifting charge for allegedly stealing a quantity of baby formula and diapers valued at $130 from Shaw's last week.

The caller reported the man left in a black SUV and provided a plate number which came back to a Scituate address. Scituate police were notified and went to that location, Chief Hussey said. The SUV was in the driveway. Cohasset police met up with Scituate police at the address; the items were still inside the vehicle. In the meantime, an officer reviewed the videotapes at Shaw's and based on the description of the man provided, police made the arrest and charged the 38-year-old with shoplifting.

Minor MV

A woman, who was dining reported seeing another car hit her parked 2002 Lexus, from inside the restaurant last Friday (Sept. 14) at about 7:15 p.m. She reported the matter to police, provided a plate number, and the owner of the 2000 Volvo was contacted. The Volvo driver bumped into the Lexus while trying to back into a space in the 100 block of Ripley Road. Damage was very minor, police said. The car owners exchanged papers and the insurance company will take it from there, police said.

Hit guardrail

A 50-year-old woman thought her car was in reverse when it was in "drive" and drove into the guardrail in a parking space at Sunrise last week.

Police said she ended up driving over the curb and hit the guardrail in front of her. The 2005 Toyota Corolla had to be towed. The mishap occurred last Saturday (Sept. 15) at 6:52 a.m.

Protective custody

A woman, who had apparently left her pocketbook at a local restaurant the previous evening and had returned to look for it, was taken into protective custody.

In talking with the woman, who was dropped off at the restaurant last Sunday at about 9:40 a.m., police determined that she was under the influence of alcohol. She could not find her car but police were able to locate it. However, police determined that she was not sober and should not drive. She was taken to the station and later a friend came to pick her up. Her pocketbook was also located at the restaurant.

Drunken men

Two men, who were drunk and who harassed a clerk at a convenience store on Route 3A, could be barred from going in there again. Chief Hussey said the store has the option of seeking a no-trespass order against the two men. The clerk reported the incident at 11 p.m. on Saturday (Sept. 8) and said the men were yelling at him and goofing around in the store before taking off on foot.

Police found the two men, who were over 21 and drove the two men to their homes in Scituate. The store employee was not interested seeking court action.

However if the store seeks a no-trespass order, then the police could arrest the men if they go back to the store.

Chairman Ted Carr and Selectman Paul Carlson commented they would have like to have a representative from DiNero's there to respond to neighbors' concerns. In a letter dated July 31, Gregory Sullivan, attorney for DiNero's, informed the town Plotner was hospitalized with a serious health issue during the time of the first hearing. On behalf of DiNero's he sought a re-hearing of the parking issue. At a meeting in August, the Selectmen agreed to have another hearing.

"We're back to the original issue of parking on Hull Street," said Griffin to conclude his summary of the issue.

Sullivan opened his remarks by apologizing for missing the original hearing in June. He said there are currently six on-street legal parking spaces on Hull Street and DiNero's is seeking two more, in accordance with Chief Hussey's recommendation. Patrons have been using the illegal parking spaces and police are often ticketing the area.

"It takes away the afterglow of a nice dinner when you get to your car and there is a ticket on your windshield," said Sullivan.

However, Chairman Gary Vanderweil recalled the neighbors complaining about litter, noise and safety concern generated from the restaurant — complaints Sullivan denied were valid.

"If there is a restaurant that does a better job of policing their parking area in the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, I'd like to see it," said Sullivan. DiNero's has hired a parking attendant for its busy nights (Thursday to Sunday) and regularly checks the property and surrounding area for litter, Sullivan explained. "DiNero's prides themselves on having a clean restaurant inside and out."

Vice Chairman Ted Carr asked the DiNero's representative what effect the additional spaces would have for the restaurant business from a financial perspective.

"The more parking you have, the better it is for business," said Sullivan. Plotner later explained a parking space could turn over twice, maybe three times, on a busy night so it is a significant gain. Carr then asked what the capacity of both the restaurant and the parking lot was, a question neither representative could answer.

Jim Reichart of 3 Grace Drive, a vocal resident at the first meeting, explained the situation has not changed since he came before the board in June.

"I find it very disheartening I have to be back here again," Reichart said. One of his main concerns was the visibility coming out of a private driveway on to Hull Street is limited when cars are parked in the two proposed parking spaces

Maria Plante of 18 Grace Drive came to the meeting armed with recent pictures and documentation from the decisions of the Zoning Board of Appeals and the Planning Board. She said the Planning Board conditioned DiNero's expansion on supplying enough parking on their property for patrons. The reality is cars regularly park in the street over the fog line and block the sight lines coming out of Grace Drive creating a potential safety hazard, Plante said. "Why should we put up with the inconvenience and unsafe conditions?" she asked.

Sullivan responded to the neighbors' comments by pledging to expend efforts to curb parking on Hull Street when there is space available in the lot.

"When DiNero's says the sky is blue, [the neighbors] says it's black. That's the nature of the relationship," said Sullivan.

The board moved 3-2 to reconsider its past vote on the same matter. The Selectmen were split on weighing the neighbors' concerns with the impact the two spaces may have on the area.

"My concerns are with the neighbors. This is the only chance we have to enhance the situation," said Selectman Fred Koed, who ultimately did not change his vote, casting it against making the parking spaces legal. Carr, unsatisfied with the answers given by the DiNero's representatives over the benefit of additional parking, voted with Koed.

"I think DiNero's has bent over backwards" for the neighbors, citing the hiring of a parking attendant and regular policing of the parking area, said Vanderweil. Like in the June vote, Selectman Ralph Dormitzer voted with Vanderweil.

Selectman Paul Carlson, who previously voted against the two additional parking spaces, changed his vote to the affirmative. After hearing both sides (the neighbors' and the restaurant's) he felt DiNero's was doing something to address the neighbors' concerns. The motion to allow two additional legal parking spaces on Hull Street passed 3-2.

As a side note, Griffin explained there is a possibility the state will install sidewalks where the proposed parking spaces are. If the state plans come to fruition in the coming years, the legal spaces would then need to be removed.

This "No Parking" sign on Hull Street will come down in the near future. The Selectmen overturned their decision in June to create two additional legal spaces on Hull Street at the request of DiNero's Restaurant.

improve cell phone coverage for the interested carrier. The 17 towers will be located throughout Cohasset, concentrated on the waterfront, Forest Avenue and Sohier Street areas.

The towers will be located throughout Cohasset, concentrated on the waterfront, Forest Avenue and Sohier Street areas.

In addition, Cooper also sought permission to install underground fiber on Jerusalem Road between Forest Avenue and Deep Run where there are underground utilities. The fiber would then be run to overhead poles on Linden Drive and Deep Run. The crews installing the fiber would coordinate with the upcoming sewer project as not to conflict.

Selectman Ralph Dormitzer said he took a look at the DAS towers already in place on Hull Street and was concerned with their size, describing it as double the size of a window air conditioner. He said while most residents want good cell coverage and reception, as representatives of the town they had to ensure the new towers would not block someone's ocean view.

"It would be desirable to have the pole numbers where the boxes would go," so the Selectmen could ensure they would not adversely affect someone's view, particularly on Jerusalem Road/Deep Run, said Dormitzer. "We have to make sure we're protecting the people of Cohasset."

Cooper agreed to providing the pole numbers slated for the boxes, "we're willing to work with you." However, he advised the boxes could only be moved to other poles within an approximate 125-foot radius.

Students get their feet wet on marine issues

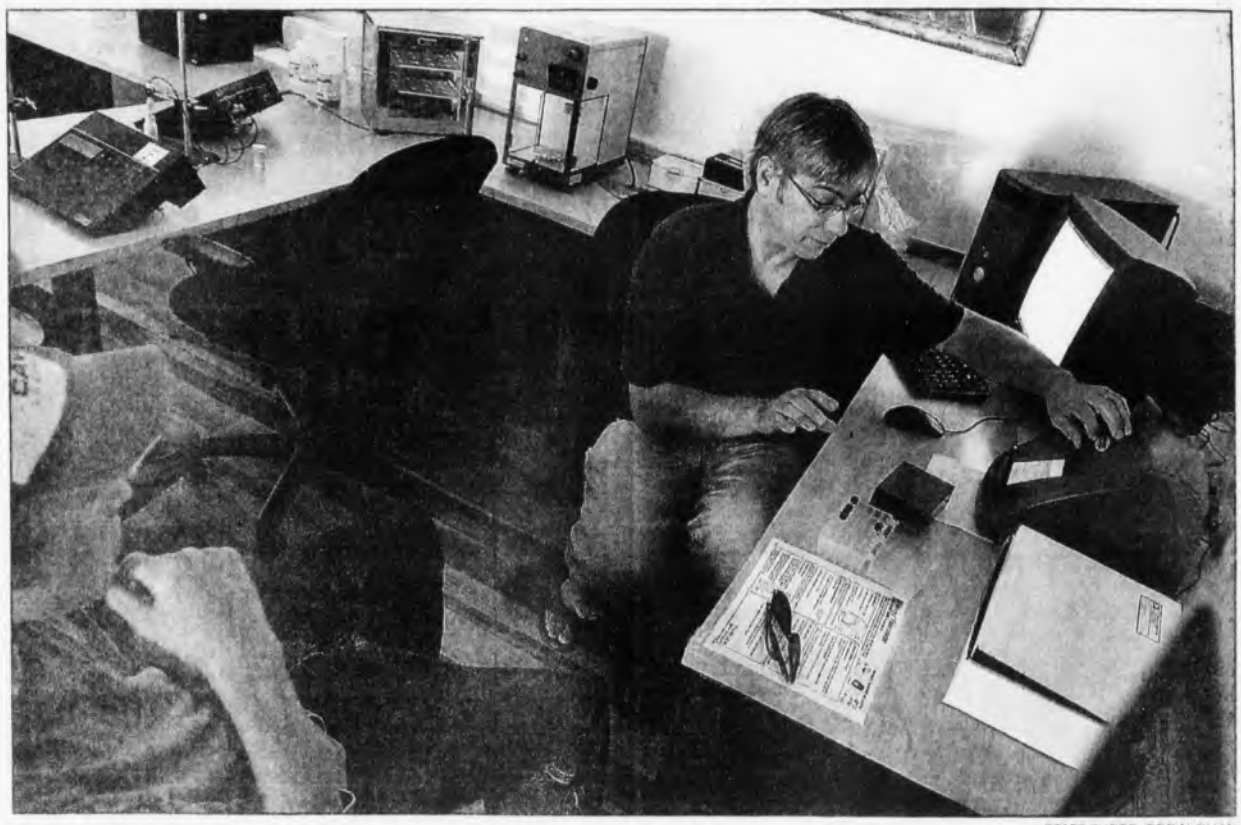
Microsoft grant gives students new opportunity

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Living in a coastal town brings many advantages. Cohasset has breathtaking ocean views, beaches to spend summer days, a harbor for lobstering and fishing and waterways for boating — just to name a few of the obvious. However, the coastal advantages also come with a responsibility to understand and protecting the nearby ocean and water bodies.

The Center for Student Coastal Research (CSCR) strives to balance the advantages and responsibility of living by the ocean. To that end, the CSCR is unrolling a new lineup of programming to run throughout the year, the Watershed Academy. Funded by a $70,000 grant from Microsoft Corporation, the CSCR will be bringing in professionals to teach South Shore middle and high school students lab science skills and work on issues directly affecting the community.

"It's the biggest fish we've caught so far," quips Jack Buckley, president of CSCR and a Cohasset High teacher. He found out Microsoft through their Partners in Learning program was looking to fund after-school science, math, technology and engineering programs in Massachusetts.



"It was a clear, natural fit with CSCR," says Buckley. CSCR ended up being one of four programs awarded the grant out of 78 applicants. Buckley set right to work designing and recruiting professionals to bring on to the program.

"[The Watershed Academy] is enrichment programs working toward community issues," says Buckley and students learn valuable scientific inquiry and laboratory skills from field professionals. The students will complete ongoing research projects started during the summer concerning environmental issues specific to the waters of Cohasset. Students will look at bacteria pollution and non-point source pollution, as well as analyze nutrients in various water bodies. A project monitoring Cohasset's wetlands is also underway. Each class will be goal-oriented, as well as skill-oriented, says Buckley.

Buckley has lined up marine professionals to interact and teach students in a relaxed, collaborative environment.

Buckley has lined up marine professionals to interact and teach students in a relaxed, collaborative environment. Christian Krahforst, a marine chemist from the Mass Bays Marine Monitoring Program; Sara Grady of Mass Bays Program and North South Rivers Watershed Association; and Cohasset High teacher Ann Thomae, a scientist, will all lend their expertise to the upcoming programs.

Krahforst has been working with students throughout the summer to collect water samples in nine Cohasset water locations and performing various tests on them to determine water quality and ecosystem health. Through the testing, he hopes he and the students can come to a better understanding of how Cohasset waterways work and change.

STAFF PHOTO/ROBIN CHAN

Cohasset High senior Nate Porter looks on as marine chemist Christian Krahforst instructs him on how to use a fluorometer, a sophisticated instrument that will measure the amount of chlorophyll in a sample. Nate is working on an independent study project on cholophyll-A, a measure of biology in the water, in Cohasset waters.

"It's been a real treat. This is the best part of my job," says Krahforst.

This week, he taught a group of Cohasset High seniors how to extract and read samples for chlorophyll-A, a measure of the biology in a marine system.

"[Chlorophyll-A] helps produce oxygen. We want to test it to make sure [the water] is healthy," explains Nate Porter who is beginning an independent study this semester on chlorophyll-A in Cohasset waters. Over a two-day process the samples the chlorophyll is extracted and then run through a highly sophisticated machine to determine just how much chlorophyll is in the water.

The water has also been tested for pH, nitrates, suspended solids and bacteria levels. Each test along the way teaches the students additional lab and analytical skills. Krahforst leads four students through the process, offering helpful hints to aid them in the future, "don't get frustrated. It takes a little bit of skill but once you've got it, you're golden," said Krahforst as he watched Nate dispense 10 mL of 90 percent acetone using a self-zeroing burette for the first time into the chlorophyll sample. It wasn't long before Nate got the hang of it.

"CSCR is a place where students can get involved in community coastal environmental issues," says Buckley.

Watershed Academy courses begin after-school the week of Oct. 1. There are no tuition fees for classes. Enrollment is open to middle and high school aged students from Cohasset and the South Shore. Sign up and specific Watershed Academy course information is available at CSCR's website at www.ccscr.org, or call 781-383-0129, or e-mail cscr@verizon.net.

AROUND TOWN

AT THAYER

Friends and family of Danny Sears would like to wish her luck as she joins her sister, Samantha, at Thayer Academy this fall.

Danny graduated this past June from Derby Academy. While at Derby she received many distinguished awards, which included academic honors, as well as numerous athletic achievements.

Danny received the Coaches Award six times in the last three years, broke a school running record, and was the captain of the Cross Country Team and the Spirit Team. She held high honors for the 7th and 8th grade and was awarded the Martignetti Language Award. Danny also received Derby's most distinguished award at graduation, The Madam Derby Pin, for embodying the values of the Derby community through demonstrated effort, interest and positive contributions in academics, arts, athletics and extracurricular activities.

Keep up the good work, Danny!

POST-PROM PARTY

Volunteers interested in planning the 2008 post-prom party are asked to attend a brief meeting at 7 p.m., Tuesday (Sept. 25) at the Paul Pratt Library. Questions call: Babette at 781-383-2561 or Ann at 781-383-2069.

DEAN'S LIST

Saint Joseph's University in Philadelphia has named local student Elisa A. Ninde Jerome of Cohasset to the dean's list of the spring 2007 semester. Elisa is currently majoring in international business. Students must achieve a grade point average of 3.5 or above, a B or greater in all their classes, and complete at least 15 credits to earn dean's list status for the semester.

BASEBALL TRYOUTS

The try-outs for the 2008 CYBSA major league baseball season will be held on Saturday, Oct. 13th at Barnes Field from 1 to 3:30 p.m.. All boys and girls who are age 10 prior to May 1, 2008 and no older than age 12 on April 30, 2008 and who are not currently on a CYBSA major league baseball team are invited to try-out. All 12 year olds (born between May 1, 1995 and April 30, 1996) who attend the tryouts are automatically selected for a Major League team, provided that these players attend the tryout. For more information, please visit the notice in the Sports section or our website: CYBSA.net

Danny Sears, a Derby graduate, has begun her first year at Thayer.

BRICK FUNDRAISER

The Beechwood Ballpark is complete. There is a brick fundraiser under way to help pay for maintaining this wonderful new space. Engraved bricks are $100 and will be placed in the grassy area behind the outfield scoreboard. If you are interested, please contact Michelle Loughlin at: mloughlin521@hotmail.com.

The dedication ceremony will be on Sat., Sept 29th, beginning at 8:30 a.m.. Kids' activities starting at 10.

GIFTWRAP

It's time to get movin' and groovin' with the Cohasset PSO and Innisbrook Giftwrap's fall fundraiser, "Innisbrook's Got the Beat". The students at the Joseph Osgood and Deer Hill Schools will be offering the chance to jump into the spirit and purchase the quality and stylish wrapping paper Innisbrook is known for, as well as countless new and exciting gift items, magazine subscriptions and delicious chocolates made by the Helen Grace Company. This very important fundraiser provides almost half of the PSO budget for the school year, and funds the schools' character education programs, the valuable curriculum enrichment programs, provides for teacher and library grants and various teacher appreciation activites. Last year the funds aided in the purchase of new playground equipment, 50 percent of the engineering lab at the Middle/High School and the training of Peer Leaders, three important and successful endeavors.

All students rockin' to the beat at the Osgood School will be entered into various raffles throughout the fundraiser. At the Deer Hill, students who sell 10 items will receive a Hip Hop Back Pack Clipper. The Deer Hill students will also be eligible to earn prizes for their total number of items sold, with the top prizes being Best Buy Gift Cards valued at $100, $150 and $250.

Get into the groove and make your purchases soon as 50 percent of sales go to the PSO, and thus, our children and our schools. If you do not have a student at the Osgood or Deer HIll, you can pick up your own catalogs in the office of these schools, as well as the office at the Middle/High School, at the library and at Town Hall. Purchases can again by placed online (free shipping with orders of $75.00 or more) and delivery will be within a week. The sale ends on Sept. 28 and items ordered through a student (rather than online) will be delivered by early November. If you have any questions or would like to receive a catalog, please contact Carolyn Coffey at 383-8286 or Mary Jo Blackington at 383-0626.

LEGION GOLF

American Legion Post 118, will host a golf tournament, Monday Oct. 1, at Hatherly Country Club, with a shotgun start at noon. The cost is $150 per person and includes a round of golf, use of cart and dinner. Checks should be made out to George H Mealy Post 118 and mailed to American Legion Post 118, Attention: Larry Sousa, P. O. Box 118, Cohasset MA. 02025.

PUMPKINS!

Mark your calendars! The grand opening of the Pumpkin Patch, sponsored by Cohasset ASP, will be Saturday, Oct. 6, on No. Main Street.

JUNIOR GARDENERS

The Community Garden Club of Cohasset is accepting registration for the second year of the Junior Gardener program. This free program, open to all 3rd, 4th and 5th graders, is totally subsidized by the Garden Club.

The students will be meeting after school from 2:45- 3:45 p.m. in the Deer Hill cafeteria. The meeting dates for 2007-2008 are on the following Mondays: Oct. 15, Nov. 19, Dec. 17, Jan. 14, Feb. 11, Mar. 10, Apr. 14 and May 12.

Space is very limited and students can register on a first come basis for all or whatever dates fit their schedules. Please send your child's name, grade level and requested program dates along with your name, contact phone # and email to: lcjschool@verizon.net.

WEDDING

Mr. and Mrs. David Andrew Carpenter

Carpenter – Silvia wedding

Amy Mae Silvia and David Andrew Carpenter were married on Aug. 18, 2007 in Centerville.

The garden ceremony was officiated by Matthew Silvia, the bride's brother. Members of the wedding posse were Jessica Aronson Estreicher, childhood friend of the bride; her daughter Sophie, the flower girl; Amy Carpenter, the groom's sister; Jill Silvia, the bride's sister-in-law; Doug Carpenter and Dan Silvia, brothers of the bride and groom; and friends Martin Allen, Ethan Kiermaier, Pat Donnelly, and Mike Boylan.

The bride is the daughter of Richard and Marsha Silvia of Cohasset. She graduated from the Massachusetts College of Art as a metal smith, and teaches at the Cushman School in Amherst. The groom, who arrived at the ceremony via water ski to the James Bond theme song, graduated from Williston Northampton School in Easthampton and George Washington University. He is the son of Richard Carpenter of Vermont and Joanne Carpenter of Hingham and Centerville, and has his own business, the New England Image Workshop in Amherst.

After a honeymoon on Martha's Vineyard, the couple is residing in Amherst.

Cohasset Cabaret is coming!

The Cohasset Cabaret will make its debut Friday, Nov. 2, and Saturday, Nov. 3, at St. Anthony's Parish Hall, 129 South Main St. Each evening will begin with a social hour from 7 to 8 p.m., featuring a raffle table with items from local artists and merchants, followed by the cabaret. Talented cast members from the South Shore area will perform songs from artists such as Sonny and Cher, Frank Sinatra, and the Dream Girls, as well as numbers from productions including "Fiddler on the Roof," and "Chicago."

Members of the audience may bring their own snacks to enjoy or purchase a snack box for $10. A cash bar will serve wine, beer, and soft drinks. Proceeds benefit the Friends of Cohasset Elder Affairs.

Talented cast members from the South Shore area will perform songs from artists such as Sonny and Cher, Frank Sinatra, and the Dream Girls...

Tickets cost $25 each and will be available from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m., each Sunday beginning Sept. 30, at St. Anthony's Parish Hall.

Keeping interest alive in math and science

Girl Scout begins program for middle school girls for Gold Award

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

When 2007 Cohasset High graduate Colleen Richardson took Advanced Placement (AP) French, the class was almost entirely female. However, when she enrolled in AP Biology only three other girls enrolled with her. The stark contrast was not lost on her: somewhere along the way girls veered away from math and science.

"I remembered a lot of girls in middle school who liked math and science, but in high school many of them thought it would be too much of a workload and not be worth it," says Richardson, but the explanation still didn't sit well with her.

Meanwhile, Richardson was one of six graduating seniors still involved in Girl Scouts. As a senior Girl Scout, Richardson decided to pursue a Girl Scout Gold Award, the highest possible award in Girl Scouts, similar to the Boy Scouts' Eagle Scout recognition.

To achieve a Gold Award, two badges — one in leadership, the other in career related activity — must be earned, and then a project involving 65 hours of volunteer service must be completed. The project must show leadership, longevity and impact on the community. She has to go before the Patriots Trail Girl Scout Council before beginning and after completing the project.

As Richardson brainstormed for a project idea, she recalled the apparent loss of female interest in math and science during high school. She decided to establish a program at the Middle School designed to cultivate and encourage girls to pursue math and science at the high school level and beyond.

"I wanted to let girls know they can have careers in math and science later in life."
— Colleen Richardson

Colleen Richardson, a 2007 Cohasset High grad, has started a program to keep middle school girls interested in math and science. Richardson has worked on the program, Looking Forward: Keeping Girls Involved in Math and Science, as part of her pursuit of a Girl Scout Gold Award, the highest achievement in girl scouting.

"I wanted to let girls know they can have careers in math and science later in life," says Richardson. The program, called "Looking Forward: Keeping Girls Involved in Math and Science," confronts the problem on several levels.

Richardson has lined up a variety of speakers whose careers involve the daily use of math and science. Doctors, nutritionists, actuaries, nurses, teachers and tech company professionals have all offered to come speak about their careers at future sessions. Often high school students don't see how algebra and calculus could help them in a future career, the professional women can show them how relevant math and science really is, says Richardson.

The program pairs up the middle school girls with high school mentors for the program in an effort to bridge the gap between middle school and high school.

"Since the middle school and high school are in the same building, it's good for the middle school girls to have someone to wave to or say hi to in the hallway," says Richardson, "it makes the high school not so intimidating."

She envisions the high school mentors not only being a friendly face, but also advising the younger girls about teachers, classes and the high school experience in general.

By incorporating middle school and high school girls into the program, Richardson involves both parties in math and science on a monthly basis.

"Mentors will have to keep their enthusiasm up" for the program to work, says Richardson, who headed off to start her freshman year at Dartmouth this week. She will coordinate the program as much as possible from school, but has approached a few high school juniors to help her out with hanging posters and running the monthly meetings. She hopes one of them will take over the program for next year.

Her first meeting last week had a great response with 18 middle school girls and 10 high school mentors in attendance. A high school chemistry teacher, Ann Thomae, or "Doc T" as her students know her, was the guest speaker. She discussed her past career working in the private sector and her current teaching profession with the students. Richardson says she concluded with a demonstration involving hydrogen peroxide and an explosion, "it was pretty cool."

Although Richardson likes math and science, she is unsure what form that interest will take in her undergraduate studies and future career. "Definitely not pre-med," is the only thing she's willing to rule out at this point.

To achieve her Gold Award, Richardson will have to get approval of the Girl Scout Council again before the end of this month.

WANTED
30 People

30 People Who Have Difficulty Hearing, Especially In Noisy Situations, To Evaluate New and Exciting Open Ear Digital Technology, Risk Free!

Mass Audiology will have State licensed hearing instrument specialists available to perform comprehensive hearing evaluations at no charge for the first 30 qualified callers to determine if you are a candidate for this new ultra-modern, open-ear hearing solution. Applicants selected will be asked to give their opinion on this remarkable new hearing aid in 2 weeks. This state-of-the-art instrument solves a really big problem by amplifying high frequencies without plugging up the ear canal as in traditional hearing aids and is virtually invisible when worn. This device will be fit and digitally programmed on the spot in one of our offices.

Participants who wish to keep their instruments can do so at a tremendous savings, due to their participation.

However, if you feel the hearing aids do not improve your hearing, simply return them.
The 30 participants also receive free batteries for the evaluation period.
A very small, fully refundable security deposit will be required.

Candidates will be selected by September 30, 2007.
Those interested need to call today.

'Kittendales' calendar to benefit non-profit shelter

Hull Seaside Animal Rescue is about to make 2008 very interesting!

The non-profit cat shelter has released its first ever "Kittendales" calendar for 2008.

The all-volunteer project focuses on some hunky and not so hunky men, who wanted to help the shelter raise money.

The idea of showing the hunks with kittens came from HSAR board member and volunteer Chris Crotty.

"When I was thinking about how to raise much needed money for our shelter, a calendar came to mind" Crotty said. "Everyone loves kittens and the contrast between hunky men and our little furry felines seemed like a unique approach to putting together a calendar."

Along with volunteers Susan Davis who coordinated every shoot, and Shirley Moloney, the project is finally finished over a year later.

"Many of these men went way out of their way and beyond the call of duty in order to get the right shot," said photographer Joanne Berman. "We are grateful to all of the guys who offered to be a part of this project, and more specifically because they wanted to help our shelter."

Every penny raised will go toward the day-to-day care of our feline residents at Hull Seaside Animal Rescue, which is a no-kill shelter.

If you would like to purchase one of these limited edition calendars ($20 each), please contact Hull Seaside Animal Rescue for more information: 1-877-378-1195 or hsar @hsar.org

Forester to lead tree identification tour

Experienced forester Phil Benjamin of South Easton will lead a tree identification walk through the woods of Cohasset's Holly Hill Farm at 2 p.m., on Saturday, Sept. 29.

The guided hour-and-a half walk, which starts in front of the Main Barn at 236 Jerusalem Road, will follow the trails and paths that traverse the farm's 140 acres of woods and fields. The farm with its diverse habitats including a salt mash, uplands, ledges and rock outcroppings, brooks, ponds, wetland and swampy areas supports numerous varieties of trees in various stages of development. Besides its natural groves of American holly from which the farm receives its name, the woods are host to numerous varieties of oaks, maples, white pine, ash, shagbark hickory, black walnut, red cedar, beech, hornbeam, birches, tupelo and many more.

"We are lucky to have Phil as leader of this program."
— Frank White, Friends of Holly Hill Farm

By taking a closer look at leaves, twigs and bark, the tour's leader will provide hints as to how to identify the various specimens and will also disclose how the various trees are related to underlying soils and ground elevations.

Benjamin, who has been working as consulting forester throughout southeastern Massachusetts since 1978, is a graduate of the University of New Hampshire with a bachelor of science degree in forest resources and is recognized as a Certified Forester by the Society of American Foresters.

"We are lucky to have Phil as leader of this program," said Frank White, chairman of the board of the Friends of Holly Hill Farm, the nonprofit organization sponsoring the tour. "Phil is uniquely qualified as he knows the woods well. In 1995 he conducted a survey of woods as part of a forest management plan the farm submitted to the federal government. Besides, his enthusiasm for the beauty of these woods is catching, as program participants will quickly discover."

To register for the program, which is open to families, call Friends' education director Jon Belber at 781-383-1455. Fee is $5 with no charge for members of the Friends.

Cohasset Soccer Boosters pancake breakfast

The Cohasset Soccer Boosters will hold their annual Pancake Breakfast Sunday, Oct. 14 at the Deer Hill School from 8 a.m. – 12 p.m. The $5 ticket will automatically enter the buyer into a raffle drawing for a pair of Yankee/Red Sox tickets for the 2008 season at Fenway Park or a $500 cash prize.

Proceeds from the Pancake Breakfast go to support the Cohasset Soccer Boosters, which last year awarded four $1,000 scholarships.

Tickets can be purchased at the door or from team members at your local Stop and Shop and Shaw's supermarkets.

Field of dreams in Beechwood

Emma Stephens, 6, top, follows Hannah Mattey, 5, down the slide at Beechwood Ballpark. Wearguard of Norwell donated the playground, which includes equipment for toddlers.

baseball diamond 90 degrees counterclockwise created a uniform 250 feet semicircle to delineate the outfield boundary and opened up more land for the basketball court, a picnic/bleacher area, the playground and off-street parking, "we don't have much space left over."

Despite the major oversight and the challenges encountered day in and day out, both Pratt and Brown name finding the funding as their biggest hurdle. After embarking on a private fundraising campaign a few years ago, the Beechwood Ballpark Committee's prayers were answered when Town Meeting approved the spending of $630,000 to design and complete the project with Community Preservation funds. Over and above, thousands of dollars in private donations has been collected.

"We were able to use money from the town and state to restore this field and beautify this part of town, a part of town Community Preservation funds has not been used in to date," says Stuart Ivimey, chairman of the Community Preservation Committee. Not only does the park give kids and adults new playing fields and a playground, but also allowed severe drainage issues to be remedied, says Ivimey.

Pratt and Brown say the field is an investment in the future, not just because a future Red Sox player could get his start playing Cohasset Little League (or at least develop a love for the game) but also because it incorporates organic turf design and maintenance.

The Beechwood Ballpark is in the Lily Pond watershed making it of interest to both the Water Commission and the Water Resource Protection Committee. The drainage surrounding the park drains right into Lily Pond, the primary source of Cohasset's water supply. The committees did not want the traditional pesticides and chemicals to be used on a large area so close to the water supply.

The downside to organic sod and maintenance is the initial costs are higher in the first three years. The Water Commission agreed to take on the additional cost of maintenance for five years as part of the Water Commission's town-wide rain garden project and grant.

Neighbors and passersby alike are itching to get on the field and playground with their kids and grandkids. Michelle Loughlin of 502 Beechwood St., just two houses down from the field, has been an integral part of bringing the playground to the Beechwood Ballpark. The playground was a donation from the Wearguard daycare located in Norwell, which had closed sometime last year.

Although transportation and installation cost still had to be paid, the donation saved the committee thousands of dollars, says Brown.

Loughlin and her two kids, ages one and four, are looking forward to a neighborhood place where her kids can meet up with other children in the area.

"It's a safe place that's close by, everyone I've run into can't wait to use it," says Loughlin who plans on using the playground and ballpark at least twice a week, "I won't have to hop in the car and go to another playground in town."

A unique aspect of the field is how it will grow along with her kids, says Loughlin. Right now, they are happy using the playground equipment, which has equipment suitable for toddlers just learning to walk and kids up to 6 years old. Soon they'll be playing baseball on the diamond, or soccer in the outfield, or shooting hoops under the lights into the evening.

Another neighbor, Albert Irwin of 485 Beechwood St. has been watching the construction come together at the ballpark, "it's added so much to the community," he says. A Cohasset resident for over 25 years, Irwin hopes the ballpark will attract town kids and they'll be as attentive to the care of the field as those who built it.

Brown and Pratt have plans to keep the field in tip-top shape for the near and distant future, in fact it is Brown's foremost hope to keep the field looking as great as it will on dedication day. The Department of Public Works will be in charge of the regular upkeep of the field, while Brown is recruiting neighbors to help with keeping the area free of litter and in general good condition. The older little league teams will take care of the field before and after each game.

"We think there's enough interest in the field to keep it up," says Pratt. As the co-chairs sit on the outfield picnic benches on a recent warm day, it's clear they are proud of what they, along with the support of the entire town, have accomplished, "we've really turned a baseball field into a park," says Pratt.

Beechwood Dedication Day

The dedication and celebration is again an example of local organizations coming together and promises to have something for everyone. The nearby Beechwood Congregational Church will grilling up some tasty hot dogs, while the Little League and Basketball Boosters host a homerun derby and shoot out contest. The Rusty Skippers will play during the day, and local vocalist Lilly Sestito will sing the national anthem for the dedication. The youngest attendees will be met with clowns, a facepainter and balloons in the playground. A team of Special Olympians will play a shortened game, followed by an "Old Timers Game" featuring Little Leaguers from the 1960s and 70s. Doane Street will be closed off from Beechwood Street to Church Street, the road will be used to display antique cars and a fire engine.

"[The dedication day] is really about the kids and fun," says Pratt.

The Beechwood Ballpark Committee is still accepting donations. To make a donation to the Beechwood Ballpark Restoration Project, send checks to the Cohasset Town Treasurer, 41 Highland Ave., made payable to the Beechwood Ballpark.

Although this year's Cohasset High School football team, having defeated their first two opponents, is off to a fast start they have a way to go before matching two of their predecessors who are marking major anniversaries this year.

As the roster and schedule pictured above indicates, seventy years ago the Cohasset High School football team, nineteen members strong, won their first 7 games only to lose their final game on November 20, 1937 to Hanover High School by one touchdown. Twenty years later the 1957 Cohasset High School football team completed an undefeated season and won the league championship title. The Gridiron Club and Cohasset High School will honor the 1957 team on this the 50th anniversary of their undefeated season on Friday, November 2 during halftime at the Cohasset/Abington football game. Support the 2007 Skippers and celebrate the past by attending the game at Alumni Field on November 2.

Cohasset Historical Society fall events

Historian David Wadsworth will conduct a tour of 19th Century Cohasset, "Looking Back," at 7:30 p.m., Wednesday, Oct. 17, at the Pratt Building. Visit through the town as it was through slides and a lecture and compare those pictures to the town known today.

The Historical Society annual meeting and dinner will take place Sunday, Oct. 28, at the Cohasset Harbor Resort, beginning with a cash bar at 5:30 p.m., followed by dinner at 6 p.m. The guest speaker will be Stephen Puleo, author of "The Boston Italians: A Story of Pride, Perseverance and Paesani." Stephen tells the story of the Italian migration to Boston and the perseverance that helped these poverty-stricken people to overcome the many obstacles in their path to success in America.

The lecture series will visit the other side of the world at 7:30 p.m., Wednesday, Nov. 14, at the Pratt Building, when Edyth Ford presents "Adventures Abroad: China and Tibet." As part of a global community, Cohasset welcomes the sights and cultures of other countries. Edyth will talk about her adventures on a recent trip to China and Tibet and will share the similarities and differences of life in lands so far from our shores.

There is no fee to attend the lecture series and light refreshments will be served. For more information, call 781-383-1434 or visit: cohassethistoricalsociety.org.

Puppetation art series starts Oct. 6

The skills taught will include drawing, clay sculpting, hand sewing and painting.

Puppetation is a new mixed media art series for youngsters in grades 1 through 3, held from 9:30 to 11 a.m., Saturdays, Oct. 6 through Nov. 3. Students will learn to design and construct a series of puppets: stick, felt finger and glove characters, as well as paint a backdrop. The skills taught will include drawing, clay sculpting, hand sewing and painting. Class size is limited. To reserve a space for your child call the Blue Barn Studio at 781-383-9883.

OPINION

EDITORIAL

Civic pride needed

While enjoying a cup of coffee with a friend in the "pocket park" between Tedeschi's and French Memories on a recent Saturday, we could not help but notice the amount of litter in the tiny oasis.

In fact, two girls – who were sitting on a nearby bench and who looked to be about 13 years old – finished their soft drinks and just left the containers behind.

No effort was made to pick up the containers and dispose of them properly.

Some would say what is needed are more trash receptacles. That could be the case, however, we — as a community — still have to figure out why people litter in the first place.

The girls who littered at the pocket park just added to what was already there. Also strewn along the walkway were food wrappers, beverage containers and dozens of cigarette butts.

How embarrassing for beautiful Cohasset to be marred by the thoughtlessness and bad behavior of its citizens!

Cohasset is clearly not alone.

In Hingham Square — where the Cohasset Mariner office is located — considerable effort is being made to "beautify" the area post-Greenbush construction. There are new lampposts, trees and benches. There is even a terrific-looking Town Clock, a gift from the Hingham-Hull Rotary Club.

But along the gutters, in the corners, and even blowing in the wind – is trash.

This week I counted at least four Arizona ice tea cans alone along the curbing and in the landscaping along South Street within 100 feet of our office.

We can spend a hefty sum for a large can of Arizona ice tea – but cannot put the empty in a trashcan?

The shoulders of our local highways are littered with mile upon mile of trash making the roadside a virtual dump. There are Styrofoam beverage cups, plastic water bottles, cigarette butts and cigarette wrappers, plastic grocery bags galore, broken glass bottles and so much more.

Massachusetts in general is careless with its trash. We have stopped caring about appearances.

Why do we have a lack of civic pride here in the Bay State and what causes us to be such litterbugs?

What makes us toss our trash out our automobile windows? What's the mentality behind dropping trash next to a barrel rather than inside it?

Massachusetts is surely not the only state with the problem, but judging from what we have seen — we're not the cleanest of the 50 states.

Expanding the bottle bill to include deposits on all plastic bottles might help. Keeping a litterbag in our cars is a necessity. But the problem goes much deeper than refunds and trash receptacles.

A public education program in Massachusetts and here in Cohasset would be a start. Let's put an end to littering.

Town should look back for its future

COMMENTARY

ALAIN PINEL

Cohasset is everything but a typical village. It is unique. It is uniquely beautiful. That's what drove us all to Cohasset.

A few weeks ago, I read an article in this paper regarding a rather critical meeting on the village. The subject proposed for discussion, as I understand it, was nothing less than what Cohasset was to become when it grows up. Some outside consultants were called in and made some proposals on the basis of both their expertise and the feedback they received from town people. The preliminary conclusions, which came out of such meeting, as reported by the Mariner, did surprise and even worry me, which is why I feel compelled to offer my take on this issue.

I do recognize that my jumping into the debate a little too late may appear gutsy and inappropriate, as my opinion was not even solicited. Besides, many residents may disqualify my opinion as irrelevant since I did not attend the meeting and furthermore, my wife and I have only lived three months in the village. It is indeed with great humility that I want to express some ideas and a different twist on this ever-important matter. Even though we only recently discovered Cohasset, I trust our reasons for choosing to live here are probably the same that motivated others to do the same, whenever it was.

Reading the Mariner's article, it did strike me that consultants and town people were seemingly focusing on what was missing in Cohasset, in terms of businesses particularly. The discussion was, in a way, centered on "filling the holes." Some wanted a furniture store, some a new hardware store, some a restaurant, etc. The idea was probably to make Cohasset more balanced, more interesting and convenient as far as shopping is concerned, more like some neighboring villages.

Let me suggest — again with humility — that this approach is wrong. Looking at what pieces of a puzzle need to be found to create another typical/nice village is not how we should pose the problem. Cohasset is everything but a typical village. It is unique. It is uniquely beautiful. That's what drove us all to Cohasset. Our town leaders, past and present, did a great job preserving the character, the ambience of this small, quaint and beautiful village. Let's keep this identity in mind when we start thinking about building for the future.

Before talking about details such as, for instance, attracting a nice restaurant, we need to have a clear vision of what we want Cohasset to be. Using the same example, a nice restaurant is not going to come to town because we need it, it is going to come because it needs it, because it cannot afford to miss the opportunity to locate in a newly defined Cohasset which is so appealing that it exerts a huge attraction among desirable restaurants as well as other well targeted businesses. Those which fit within the scope of what we want the town to be for the general good, rather than try to satisfy the punctual shopping need of a resident.

Besides, let's be truly objective: do you really believe that if we had, say, a generic furniture store in Cohasset, people would go there first and routinely to buy their furniture? I don't think so. Not only would the residents keep on shopping at Jordan's, Pottery Barn and fancy Boston stores, but it is hardly the type of business that would cause desirable tourists to come to town to spend their money. Same thing re: the suggestion to bring in a software store. Why would anyone buy there when choice and price are better in a larger store or when you can find even more for even less online?

So, what vision for Cohasset?

It is frankly quite simple. Look at the past. Why did so many wealthy Bostonians decide to build these magnificent mansions/vacation homes in Cohasset around the turn of the century? They had the answer.

The vision for tomorrow's Cohasset will need, in my view, to be inspired by and identify with the two single most important characteristics this village magnifies:

It's unique ocean situation.

It's unique artsy atmosphere.

A town or a village, and not unlike a product to market, can only successfully be built or enhanced by using its most basic strengths. In the case of Cohasset, it is the sea and art.

In the many extensive travels I was fortunate to do over the years, in the U.S. as well as Europe, I always found that the most beautiful, vibrant and successful villages are those which draw their character from their specific environment, and do not bother looking over their shoulders to try to duplicate so-called magic recipes. The value is in the difference and the proper understanding and use of the town core factors.

A few towns or villages come to mind to illustrate the point. I can think mostly of Carmel, in Northern California, which shares with Cohasset the same location by the sea and a wonderful art tradition, which is bringing to town exactly the type of tourists we can dream about. Santa Fe is another example of a town that chose to "specialize" to keep its charm and flavor and rip the benefits in terms of wealth. I do not know too many villages in Massachusetts just yet, but it seems to me that Chatham, in the Cape, did a good job building its image around beautiful surroundings. If we enlarge the scale, what would have Paris become without La Seine?

Does Cohasset need to change? Yes, it will change whether we like it or not. The train tomorrow will do many times over what the Music Circus did yesterday. More and more people will be coming, to spend a few hours or a weekend or a vacation, or to enjoy living here in order to have a piece of a good life. Change is welcome, so long that it is for the better, long term. All we need now is agree on the vision and then, time after time, monitor/control its implementation.

Cohasset will still be Cohasset. Same beauty. Same flavor. The only difference is that it will be home to select art galleries and shops taking advantage of the sea. That will bring the kind of restaurants we would like to eat at and beautiful hotels we would like to stay at. Useless to say, that will give a new life to the wonderful existing businesses, many of them in great need of TLC. Let's build a great Cohasset for us, the kids and the visitors we wish to welcome. And I am not sure we need outside consultants to tell us what it is we need.

MAKING TRACKS

TOM GRUBER & MARK BRENNAN

425 S. Main St. as seen from Lincoln Lane.

MBTA and Lincoln Lane – Most people we speak with really don't know where Lincoln Lane is in Cohasset. In fact, it is a very small lane that goes west from South Main Street across the street from the small condo complex built about 10 years ago near the Scituate Town line. The only give-away to its location is a small cluster of mailboxes on the corner of S. Main Street. If you read last week's Mariner or heard last week's Selectmen's meeting you probably heard about the problems the MBTA has caused for a homeowner at the western end of Lincoln Lane. There are three Lincoln Lane homes on the S. Main Street side of the railroad tracks, and one home on the other side of the tracks. The MBTA has closed Lincoln Lane at the tracks, so the homeowner on the other side of the tracks, whose address is 425 S. Main St., cannot access their property from South Main Street. In fact, the MBTA has left them with NO legal access, at all. The 425 S. Main St. property lies on the Cohasset / Scituate Town line.

The MBTA decided to illegally connect 425 S. Main St. to a shared driveway used by three Scituate homes to access a nearby Scituate roadway, Gannett Pasture Lane. This driveway also passes over two additional Cohasset properties; the Scituate homes have easements to do so. But 425 S. Main. St. has no easement. What's even more interesting, the MBTA actually hired a local attorney to draw up an agreement that would be the basis for a variance from Scituate to clear up the illegality of the connection they created and agreed they would look into the easement situation. After the necessary resident signatures had been obtained on the agreement, and the attorney was ready to file with the Town of Scituate for a variance, the MBTA pulled out and left the Cohasset homeowner literally stranded. The MBTA's letter to the attorney said, "... the MBTA has exhausted all avenues in an effort to assist the ... family with its access issues..." Yet, we know this is not true because the MBTA did have a solution and several other pieces of the access puzzle could have easily been put into place. In fact, we have a copy of a letter from the MBTA addressed to the homeowners agreeing to do all of the above things.

So, the MBTA has left the homeowner at 425 S. Main St. with a property they cannot sell because they have absolutely no legal access. We have pleaded with the MBTA, on behalf of the homeowner, to "just do the right and just thing." On at the Monday, Sept. 10th at the Board of Selectmen's meeting the Board directed the Town Manager to send a letter to the MBTA General Manager, Mr. Daniel Grabauskas, asking that the MBTA resolve this issue. The Town has also involved our Bob Hedlund and Garrett Bradley our State Senator and Representative to work on a solution for this homeowner. We await the MBTA's response as we go to press.

We have pleaded with the MBTA, on behalf of the homeowner, to "just do the right and just thing."

Greenbush testing – We have had many, many calls from residents concerned about what they perceive as malfunctioning railroad crossing systems. During the current Greenbush system testing, you will witness a lot of unusual situations. The facts are, the MBTA has turned off the advanced warning capabilities for some of the crossings. This means that when the trains approach those gates will not come down until the train is immediately at the crossing. In some cases, the train will only reverse direction and not enter the crossing. At other times the train will stop, make sure the road is clear and proceed across the street crossing. In the latter case, the gates will come down and the bells and lights will start. As you might imagine, either of these situations can be very off-putting for someone driving their vehicle near the crossing. We have also mentioned to the MBTA that these situations may leave a negative impression regarding the safety of their rail system. The MBTA is more focused on getting the testing completed and less concerned about these perceptions. We have just been informed by the Department of Public Utilities that testing is expected to be complete this week. If all goes well with the rest of the Greenbush line testing, all gate and warning will be reactivated for a Full Test next Monday. But that could change, so we'll try to keep you posted.

Forest Avenue project – The main contractor working for the Town has upped the pace considerably in the past week or so. Two additional crews have been added. Now that the blasting has been completed, work is proceeding at both ends of Forest Avenue.

You may notice that there are gaps along the road where the curb stops and then restarts. Most of these spaces will either be filled in with granite curb or asphalt for a cape cod berm. Which curb is used where depends on the amount of space at the edge of the road the engineers had to design the sidewalk. Where the space is quite narrow, the sidewalk must abut the curb. In these cases, the vertical separation that granite curbing affords is absolutely necessary for the safety of those using the sidewalk. Where there is more space, the sidewalk can be moved away from the street and a grass strip forms the safety separation. In these cases, the lower cost asphalt cape cod berm suffices.

We have been contacted by some of the residents from the Forest Avenue area who would like to have a "Grand Opening" celebration for the Forest Avenue project. We think this is a great idea. The Forest Avenue residents have waited so long for the sidewalks and repaving that most had lost hope that the project would ever be completed. Now, here we are, its completion is literally on the horizon. If you are contacted by the group planning such an event, pitch in and give them a hand. Neighborhood community building is a good thing. It's good for you and good for Cohasset. We are happy to play a small role in the finalization of this work.

The Beechwood sidewalk – Although it is not as far along as the Forest Avenue sidewalk, the Beechwood Avenue sidewalk project is still moving along, admittedly, not as fast as we'd like; and, probably not as fast as the residents would like. For those of you not familiar with the objective of this project, we are adding a sidewalk from S. Main Street to Talarico Lane. Two badly decayed trees were removed from the proposed sidewalk layout area. The advent of the new rail crossing has made this design a bit of a challenge. The MBTA has relocated crossing hardware smack dab in the area we need for a safe sidewalk. Additionally, National Grid has two poles that need to be moved out of the path of the new sidewalk. Until we get all of the poles and other hardware relocated, we really can't get going. CBB field people have been very helpful getting parts of the area prepared for our work. We do hope to get this work done as quickly as we can. There continues to be a design challenge at the crossing, but we are making progress. We will keep you up to date on our program.

My precious gifted children

DRIVING WHILE TYPING

JOHN LENGYEL

In our parents' day you had to wait at least until the birth of your baby before labeling it a savant.

Most parents are convinced deep down that their children are gifted and talented despite all evidence to the contrary. From very early on they're recognized as either extra smart, extra athletic, or extra cute, when in fact they're just extra loud. This "dear goggles" effect is rightly mocked by people who haven't experienced it, but as someone who suffers from the condition I think it's important to explain where it comes from.

Imagine you're walking down the street and you come across a large worm. The worm is helpless and ugly, so you feel obligated to take it home and put tiny little shoes on it. For months you feed it all kinds of disgusting mush that you would never consider eating. Then one day without warning it sits up in its terrarium and says, "dirt."

"Holy Christmas the worm is talking!" you call to your wife.

"You're crazy," she says.

"More dirt," says the worm.

"See?!"

"This must be the smartest worm ever born!" says your wife.

"I'm trying to tell you that! It's some kind of prodigy! I'm going to quit my job and manage this worm!"

"You know, he's not bad looking either," she says.

"I love that face!"

"That's not his face."

"I love it anyway!"

It doesn't matter if every other larva in the neighborhood has done essentially the same thing at his age. You're all too aware of what you started with. You brought home this hairless, half-conscious creature, spent months just trying to stop it from clawing its eyes out, and now it's handing you a drawing of a bunny. The bunny looks like a dying shrub, but you don't see that. What you see is a worm that can draw, for crying out loud! It's impossible. Who taught it that? No one! Clearly it's a born artist. Soon you've got dozens of paintings, all of which seem to depict the aftermath of a forest fire, taped to the walls of your kitchen as if it's a wing of The Louvre.

In our parents' day you had to wait at least until the birth of your baby before labeling it a savant. Now with the advent of ultrasound and the scanning electron microscope, you can begin overestimating your child's potential at the zygote stage.

"I think he's going to have a bigger medulla oblongata than that Jackson boy," says your wife, looking at a blob of 150 cells displayed on a computer screen.

"Oh heck yeah," you say. And then you hug.

Dear goggles can also make the most horrific sort of public behavior seem relatively benign when perpetrated by your own child. In this case the myopia is caused by your intimate knowledge of his private behavior and the shockingly low expectations that knowledge engenders. The fact is you can't spend every waking minute spanking your child. Inevitably your arm tires, your grip relaxes and he runs off and pulls his sister's hair. Given this as your daily routine at home, you can calmly watch your child clothesline a stranger's kid at the playground and feel little except relief that it wasn't a head-butt.

There's no cure for dear goggles, and they can be incredibly debilitating with your first child. But thankfully their effect diminishes with each subsequent birth. When your third daughter gives you a ceramic cup she made in preschool and your first thought is that it looks like a giant kidney stone, you know you're on the road to recovery. Steady, incremental improvements are the key. Then comes the final test. Your adult daughter and her boyfriend ask you to bless their engagement. You look at her, you remember the many gifts and talents she displayed as a child, you think of how well she's lived up to all that potential since, you look at the homely dimwit she's chosen for a mate, and you say, "Oh heck yeah."

Then you hug.

Tune in at 9p.m. on Mondays, Tuesdays and Thursdays on Comcast channel 10.

Also on Channel 10, Catch Cohasset High School football on Sunday nights, starting at 7p.m., when the previous week's varsity and JV games are aired. Go Cohasset!

New friends await at AAUW

AAUW CORNER

KAY HARDY CAMPBELL

Life quickens with the start of the school year, marking a season of milestones. Children go off to kindergarten. New freshmen take up residence at college. Taking on new projects and challenges seems natural in the cooler weather. As the leaves turn around us, many of us are also turning the leaves of our own lives' pages.

Whatever changes and challenges this fall brings you, consider making your own fresh start by meeting new friends and stimulating your mind. Attend a program sponsored by the women of the Hingham Area Branch of the American Association of University Women — AAUW. Its members from Plymouth to Quincy are sponsoring a series of intriguing evening lectures during the school year. These events are free and open to the public — both men and women are invited.

Like many civic groups in our South Shore towns, AAUW has a storied local history. The organization began more than 125 years ago in Boston, when a group of pioneering female college graduates formed an association for mutual support. The decades passed and women fought for the vote, and then climbed up career ladders in the public and private spheres. Meanwhile, AAUW grew into a nationwide network of local branches with more than 100,000 members. Its crowning achievement is the establishment and support of its Educational Foundation, the largest foundation of its kind funding women's higher education.

The organization began more than 125 years ago in Boston, when a group of pioneering female college graduates formed an association for mutual support.

On the South Shore, the Hingham Area AAUW branch has more than 50 members, made up of native Bostonians and transplants from around the country. Uniting them is a commitment to AAUW's vision, and a belief in the importance of women's friendships as we march through life's stages. The Hingham branch has long played a regional leadership role in the organization. Currently, the president of the Massachusetts AAUW is Hingham resident Patricia Bologna.

In October, local author-parenting expert Lynne Reeves Griffin will speak at the Hingham Middle School about her debut book, "The Negotiation Generation-Take Back Your Parental Authority." A visiting Chinese scholar will share her personal perspective on Women in Chinese Culture in November. The group will discuss Khaled Hosseini's best-seller "A Thousand Splendid Suns" over a potluck supper in January. This winter supper-book discussion has become one of the branch's most popular events. Social worker Barbara Tortarella will speak about humor in February. To honor women's history month in March, Dr. Margaret Bendroth, director of the American Congregational Association, will discuss "The Nineteenth Century Woman: A View from the Twenty-First Century" at Braintree's Thayer Public Library. In April, former Lt. Gov. Evelyn Murphy will discuss Pay Equity at Notre Dame Academy.

Branch members also run several interest groups. The De-Clutter Bugs support group (meeting Sept. 27), and a Girls' Game Night (meeting Sept. 25). In addition to these activities, AAUW will once again present its annual Recognition Award to a deserving scholar from the South Shore.

The public is welcome to attend the lectures. Holders of associates or bachelors degrees who live in the South Shore towns from Plymouth to Quincy are welcome to join the Hingham Area Branch. If you are interested in joining AAUW or learning more about the organization, please call Patricia McKay at: 781-337-3375, or e-mail hollie@gallivan.org. Visit the branch's Web site at aauw-ma.org.

HEALTH NOTES

Sports health facts and ethics

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

The argument can be made that there is a strong health incentive for a person when choosing a competitive sport in which to participate. It seems to me that sports can be classified as to whether they are clean sports or dirty. And those who play sports considered dirty live less healthy lives than those in clean sports. Perhaps, now it's time to worry about a visit from a bulked up football player from the SPDS (Society for the Preservation of Dirty Sports) arriving at the doorstep. Of course, some sports, wrestling for instance, stop being sports and become theater. We won't disturb our sport fan readers by pointing out the theatrics in other sports areas which trend in such a direction. In those sports where the line between ethical conduct and cheating becomes blurred, according to those who study ethics, "cheating, at minimum, diminishes interest in a sport."

Some may think of sportsmanship as passé, but in some sports, it is still considered fundamental to the game as in golf and tennis. Honorable play is primary, and even in high stakes matches players' ethics are expected to be above reproach. So, we still have some sports where it's not acceptable to secure an advantage by redefining or shifting the context of the rules. On the other hand, there is a large number of sports where participants adopt regimens that degrade their health.

And so, we see the gradual creep of relaxed standards of ethics invading our various sports enterprises...

And for those who wish to choose a sport in hopes of becoming a professional, we quote from www.anti-aging-guide.com "Professional sport has always been opposed to moderate exercise in terms of the effects it has on the health of a person engaged in it. Although there are many different reasons for the bad reputation ascribed to professional sport, the main factors are exhaustion, routine physical activity patterns and the injuries-related factors (both extrinsic and intrinsic). Professional sport is necessarily connected to the level of physical activity that tends to, and in most cases, exceeds the natural ability of a human organism to successfully overcome both the external and internal pressures. Thus, heat exhaustion is said to be one of the major causes of death of American football players. According to a North Carolina study: "Eighteen high school and college players have died from heat exhaustion just since 1995."

Moreover, some sports tend to give in to apologists who say it's OK to bulk up by using body enhancers such as human growth hormones. This trend affects younger players who may not perceive the risks. According to papers given at the Endocrine Society 2007 annual meeting, the risks involved in use of human growth hormone are: joint pain, fluid retention, swollen hands feet and face, carpal tunnel syndrome, increased likelihood of diabetes, high blood pressure, heart abnormalities including swollen heart muscle, breast development in men and possible shortened lifespan.

And so, we see the gradual creep of relaxed standards of ethics invading our various sports enterprises. And we see the drawing away from those sports considered in some way dangerous and greater adherence to those considered more appropriate such as soccer and lacrosse, noting that these are also beset by the devils of controversy, but for the time being, less so.

In summary, it's probably important for those responsible for informing our youth about sports decisions to consider the health impacts of the ethical framework in which they are carried out. It has been said the problem with gamesmanship is that it's the gateway to cheating. We all hear about somebody with a cast iron conscience and how well he sleeps at night. However, I find it's hard enough to get some sleep after you've given somebody a urine sample even if your conscience is clear. And almost all health experts say get plenty of sleep.

Steve Bobo is a long time member of the Cohasset Board of Health.

THE HOUSE AND SENATE. Beacon Hill Roll Call records local representatives' votes on two roll calls from prior legislative sessions. The roll calls are from debate on the House version of a $26.7 billion fiscal 2008 budget. The House and Senate eventually approved a version that was signed by Gov. Deval Patrick after he vetoed several sections. There were no roll call votes in the House or Senate last week

$15 MILLION FOR EDUCATIONAL MATERIALS FOR SCHOOLS (H 4000)

House 19-138, rejected an amendment providing $15 million to schools for educational material including text books, computers and lab equipment. The funding would be distributed on a per pupil formula with each school district receiving the same amount of money per pupil. Amendment supporters said that many parents have been buying educational materials for their children to go to school and argued that it is time for the state to absorb these costs. They noted that there are just under a million students in the state and that the $15 million would provide schools with an estimated $15 per pupil. Amendment opponents said that the budget already substantially increases funding for education and local aid. They argued that the state simply cannot afford the additional $15 million and noted that increasing funding for good programs is well-intentioned but would result in an unbalanced budget. (A "Yes" vote is for the $15 million. A "No" vote is against the $15 million).

$5 MILLION FOR SMART GROWTH HOUSING (H 4000)

House 20-138, rejected an amendment providing $5 million for the Smart Growth Housing Trust Fund. The fund is used to pay for a 2004 law that offers financial incentives to encourage communities to develop high density housing near town centers and other locations where there is already access to transit, water and sewer. The developments must designate at least 20 percent of the units for low-income people. The funds are designed to offset the increased education and public safety costs that result from the new housing. Amendment supporters said that the fund is quickly running out of money. They argued that it is crucial to replenish the fund in order to reimburse communities that are creating new housing. Amendment opponents said that they understand the need for replenishing the fund. They argued that one-time funding would not solve the problem and urged members to wait until separate legislation proposing a comprehensive and permanent solution is presented to the Legislature. (A "Yes" vote is for the $5 million. A "No" vote is against the $5 million).

ALSO UP ON BEACON HILL

NONTOXIC PEST CONTROL (H 809) - The Environment, Natural Resources and Agriculture Committee held a hearing on legislation to establish a Nontoxic Pest Management Center aimed at reducing the use of toxic pest management methods and to provide education and training in pest prevention and non-toxic methods of pest control.

$600,000 TO STUDY THE COST OF A PUBLIC EDUCATION (S 291) - The Education Committee held a hearing on a bill providing $600,000 for a consultant to conduct an independent study to determine the updated cost of an adequate public education in Massachusetts and to examine the formula used to distribute billion of dollars annually in Chapter 70 education to cities and towns. Supporters testified that it is time to fully examine the resources necessary to achieve the state's educational goals. They noted that the criteria and assumptions used to distribute education aid are outdated, inconsistent and unfair to many cities and towns. The committee is also considering several bills that immediately change the funding formula.

REQUIRE HOSPITALS TO NOTIFY PATIENTS OF DISCIPLINE OF DOCTORS - The Health Care Committee's hearing agenda included a proposal requiring hospitals to notify patients within 24 hours of any disciplinary action taken against their doctor (S 1246). Other legislation that was heard by the committee includes creating a new crime of impersonating a doctor and directing the attorney general to develop fines and penalties for violators (H 2133); requiring physicians and hospitals to notify patients of mammogram test results within 96 hours (H 2188) and requiring that physicians disclose in writing each gift, benefit or gratuity received from drug companies (H 2279).

PRICE GOUGING - The Public Safety and Homeland Security Committee held a hearing on a bill making it a crime to price gouge during a declared state emergency. The measure would impose up to a 2.5-year prison sentence and/or $5,000 fine on anyone who charges excessive prices for necessities including food, fuel and shelter (S 1375). The committee's hearing also included proposals protecting the privacy of persons who call 911 to report an emergency and exempting their names, addresses and phone numbers from the state's public records law (S 1386); requiring cities and towns' inspectors of buildings plumbing or gasfitting to be trained to administer cardiopulmonary resuscitation (H 2330) and requiring all establishments to provide signs that notify the occupants of the location of emergency exits and urges them to stay calm during an emergency and to proceed orderly to one of the exits (S 1343).

Where have all the Bancrofts gone?

COMMENTARY

ROY HARRIS

A tight-knit family once kept control of the Wall Street Journal on the South Shore. When the Cohasset connection dissolved, Rupert Murdoch pounced.

It was a long, sad trip back in time, even though it barely took me across the Hingham-Cohasset town line.

I was getting some background about the sale of Dow Jones & Co. and its flagship Wall Street Journal. Some of the reporting was for my employer of 12 years, CFO Magazine. But in a real sense my time in Cohasset was personal research. I myself had worked for the Journal for 23 years before moving to Hingham and CFO. And I wanted to learn more about the Cohasset-based Bancroft family, which for decades had held majority-voting control of Dow Jones stock, protecting a family ownership of the company that stretched back to 1902.

Much had changed since I left the paper. By the time the two Bancroft sisters died — Jessie Bancroft Cox in 1982 and Jane Bancroft Cook in 2002 — the remaining Bancrofts had become a fragmented clan. That played into the hands of media baron Rupert Murdoch, who for years had coveted the Journal as a potential addition to the global empire he had put together at News Corp.

Cohasset as a seat of power

As any follower of business knows now, News Corp. was successful with its high-profile $5-billion offer to acquire Dow Jones and the Journal. When the deal is consummated, the three-dozen descendants of Mrs. Cox, Mrs. Cook, and brother Hugh Bancroft Jr. will receive a total of about $1.2 billion, a 67-percent premium over what their stock was worth before the Murdoch bid. And 105 years of one family's control of the Journal — years when it developed into one of America's great newspapers— will be history.

I had fond memories of that Bancroft control. My late wife Andrea and I were both Dow Jones employees, and were well aware of the Bancroft sisters' dedication to maintaining the paper's independence. Even though we worked in Los Angeles, far from the New York headquarters of Dow Jones, we thought of the sisters as legendary protectors of the newspaper we admired. Even with the low public profile they kept, they were famous among Journal employees for their pledge to "never sell grandpa's paper."

Moving in 1996 to Hingham — where we settled in the World's End area, with our boys Dave and R.J. — had rekindled our interest in the Bancrofts. The Trustees of the Reservations' Whitney-Thayer Woods was a favorite dog-walking site. There, just across from the Cohasset Stop & Shop, we often chose the Bancroft Trail for romps with our border collie Omaha. We also learned about the beautiful one-time oceanfront estate of Jessie Cox just off Jerusalem Road. Known as The Oaks, the property had formerly belonged to Clarence Barron, the step-grandfather of the Bancroft sisters. A Boston business journalist, Barron had been the one to buy Dow Jones at the turn of the century. I knew far less about him.

Barron in a Book

Then, a year or so before Dow Jones and its Journal went up for grabs, I started to learn a little more about "grandpa."

In fact, he became part of my book. In 2002, I had begun research for a history of journalism's Pulitzer Prizes — a study focusing on the oldest and most respected of them: the single public-service gold medal awarded each year to a newspaper.

One of the earliest of those medals, in 1921, had gone to the old Boston Post, for a story that Clarence Barron had helped the Post develop. It was a story that exposed the first "Ponzi pyramid scheme" for cheating investors — this one perpetrated by none other than Charles Ponzi himself.

Barron — whose name is preserved in the Dow Jones investor magazine Barron's — continued to control Dow Jones until his death in 1928, when ownership passed to stepdaughter Jane Barron Bancroft and her husband Hugh Bancroft, and then eventually to Mrs. Cox, Mrs. Cook and Hugh Jr. It was under their ownership in the 1940s that a series of forward-looking editors transformed the Journal into the national business paper we know today, with more than two million subscribers. Hugh Jr. died in 1953, but the sisters lived in Cohasset, along with other Bancrofts, and owned expansive acreage stretching south from The Oaks, to Oak Hill Farm along Route 3A.

They had children and grandchildren. And when Mrs. Cox died, followed 20 years later by Mrs. Cook, the two-thirds voting control of Dow Jones the family held — through a stock ownership system set up to help keep the company away from corporate raiders — passed to those next generations.

A family's lost sense of self

That's why I looked eastward from Hingham when news began to surface of Rupert Murdoch's bid: to see which of the Bancroft family members had kept attachments with Cohasset.

There weren't any. A check with the Cohasset Historical Society showed that none of the children of Mrs. Cox, Mrs. Cook or Hugh Jr. seemed to have residences there. Several were still in New England, but had chosen places like Burlington, Vt.; Lyme, N.H., and Round Pond, Me. I took a drive along Sohier Street to the Oak Hills Farm home where five years ago Mrs. Cook had died, bringing Dow Jones dignitaries to the South Shore for a final good-bye.

Only a frightened wild turkey greeted me on the driveway. From the desolate hilltop, the view was expansive up toward the South Shore Music Circus, on land that formerly was the family's equestrian center.

It occurred to me that Dow Jones was in part the victim of one family's lost sense of itself.

as protector of a precious asset handed down by its matriarchs and patriarchs.

Like Mrs. Cox and Mrs. Cook, the surviving Bancrofts also were unused to the spotlight. But the spotlight found them. As cameras whirred, some family members voiced their reasons for selling, mainly citing News Corp.'s offered premium, just too high to refuse. Others stood firm against the sale, claiming that Murdoch — his reputation for meddling with his properties having preceded him — was the wrong man to run the long-independent Wall Street Journal. Throughout the discussion, though, the simplest argument for holding onto Dow Jones was never heard: "Mom said never to sell grandpa's paper."

And as for the dearth of Bancrofts in neighboring Cohasset? Well, we'll always have the Bancroft Trail.

Roy Harris, who worked for the Wall Street Journal from 1971 to 1994, now is a senior editor with The Economist Group's Boston-based CFO Magazine. His first book, Pulitzer's Gold: Behind the Prize for Public Service Journalism, is due out from University of Missouri Press around year-end.

Carr recuses himself from Red Lion discussion

After further reviewing the proposed expansion and request for developing the one-acre town lot for parking by the Red Lion Inn, Vice Chairman Ted Carr has decided to "err on the side of caution" and recuse himself from any discussion and vote on the matter. Carr is a neighbor of the Red Lion Inn residing at 88 South Main St. across the street from the inn.

"It could affect the village and my property," said Carr. He will be looking into whether he should be able to participate in more regular business that comes before the board regarding the Red Lion (such as Liquor License approval).

At last week's Board of Selectmen meeting (Sept. 10), Red Lion Inn owner Gerd Ordelheide came before the board to discuss the possibility of transforming the town-owned one-acre plot of land behind the Red Lion into parking spaces. Ordelheide is willing to put up $500,000 to construct the approximately 60-space parking lot.

Political forum holds Iraq discussion

The Cohasset Political Forum will kick off its third season on Saturday, Sept. 22, at 10 a.m. at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library, with a discussion of possible "endgames" for the Iraq War, General Petraeus's testimony before Congress and his anticipated "surge" report, the Bush Administration's response and the positions of the many presidential candidates. All are welcome to attend, participate, discuss and debate this very serious topic. The last time the Forum discussed Iraq, a large number of interested people participated and enjoyed a lively discussion. Every point of view is welcome and all are invited.

If you have any questions, call Agnes McCann at 383-0222.

Friday night at the movies — The Cohasset Democratic Town Committee's popular movie series resumes on Friday, Sept. 21, at 7 p.m. at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library, with the screening of Director Robert Greenwald's searing indictment of the activities of four major American companies pies operating in Iraq. "Iraq for Sale — The War Profiteers" is described as "the story of what happens to everyday Americans when corporations go to war."

Boys soccer loses against Norwell

By Joel Racicot
JRACICOT@CNC.COM

Wednesday's soccer game with Norwell may not have been the most enviable match-up for the Cohasset boys, but it was a measuring stick nonetheless. With a 1-1-2 record through the first four games of the season, the Skippers needed to see where they were before they could find out where they are going.

"I wasn't really sure where we were coming in and I knew today was going to go a long way to determine that," head coach Jim Willis said about the 4-1 loss at Norwell.

Willis is in his first year as head coach at Cohasset but he is no stranger to the game or the area, as he coached for eight seasons in neighboring Scituate before taking last season off to come to town as a teacher.

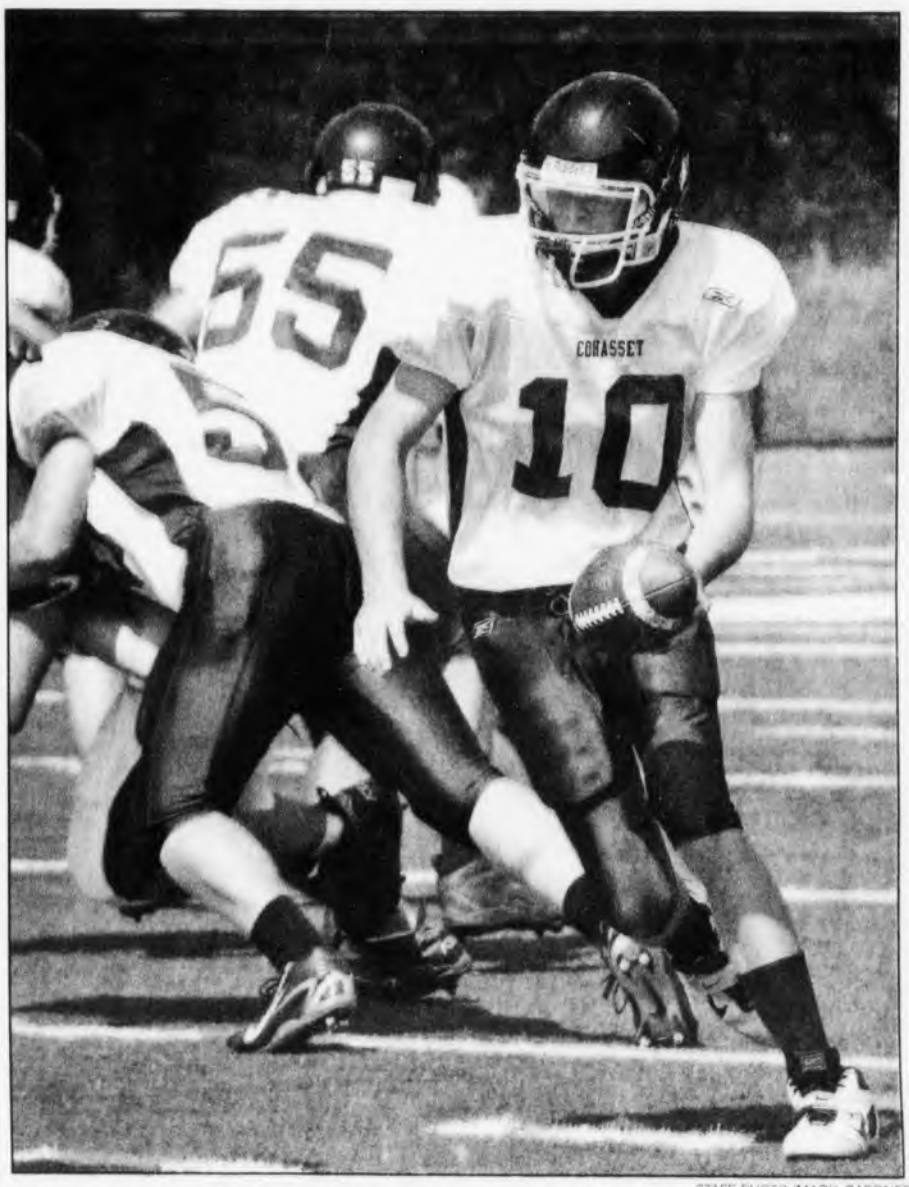
"It's great," Willis said about getting back on the sidelines. "I have a great group of kids, a good group of seniors that I really like, they have a good attitude they are working hard and they understand what they are doing wrong and what they have to do better."

Norwell jumped out early, scoring a pair of goals in the first half both by senior captain Michael McCarthy. The Clippers would continue to press Cohasset and added two more tallies before Sam Roth got the Skippers on the board with a free kick late in the game.

Cohasset entered the game playing well, including a 3-0 win over Harwich, a 3-3 tie with Nantucket and 0-0 tie with Abington. Despite playing up the last few contests things didn't carry over much against their South Shore League rivals Wednesday.

"Today we just came up flat," Willis said. "There is a certain mystique sometimes about the Norwell/Cohasset (rivalry) and some of our kids were beat before they got off the bus.

"We have to get used to winning again and (when) we win a few games (we will) get that confidence."



Through the season's first month Cohasset hasn't played many games. The core of the schedule will be coming up over the next few weeks. It's then Mike Grimm, Sam Roth, Ryan Crough and Evan Deutch, all senior captains, are going to have to carry much of the Skippers load.

With only 16 players on varsity, Willis needs a total effort from all his guys if the Skippers want to be successful in 2007. Matt Burgess, a senior at center/back is off to a good start, as is sophomore keeper Will Wise in his second stint as a starter. Conor Ofsthun and Owen Landon are getting their first varsity action this year and Willis will be looking for improvement each game. Adrian Lucas continues to be a versatile presence on the field.

Monday will mark the return of Cam Cunningham to Cohasset High School, a former student and resident who will be moving back to town from Connecticut. He will join the team as a transfer student and should be a valuable piece to the puzzle.

"The kids are excited to play with him because they grew up (together)," Willis said.

Tuesday afternoon Cohasset will host East Bridgewater at 3:30 p.m.

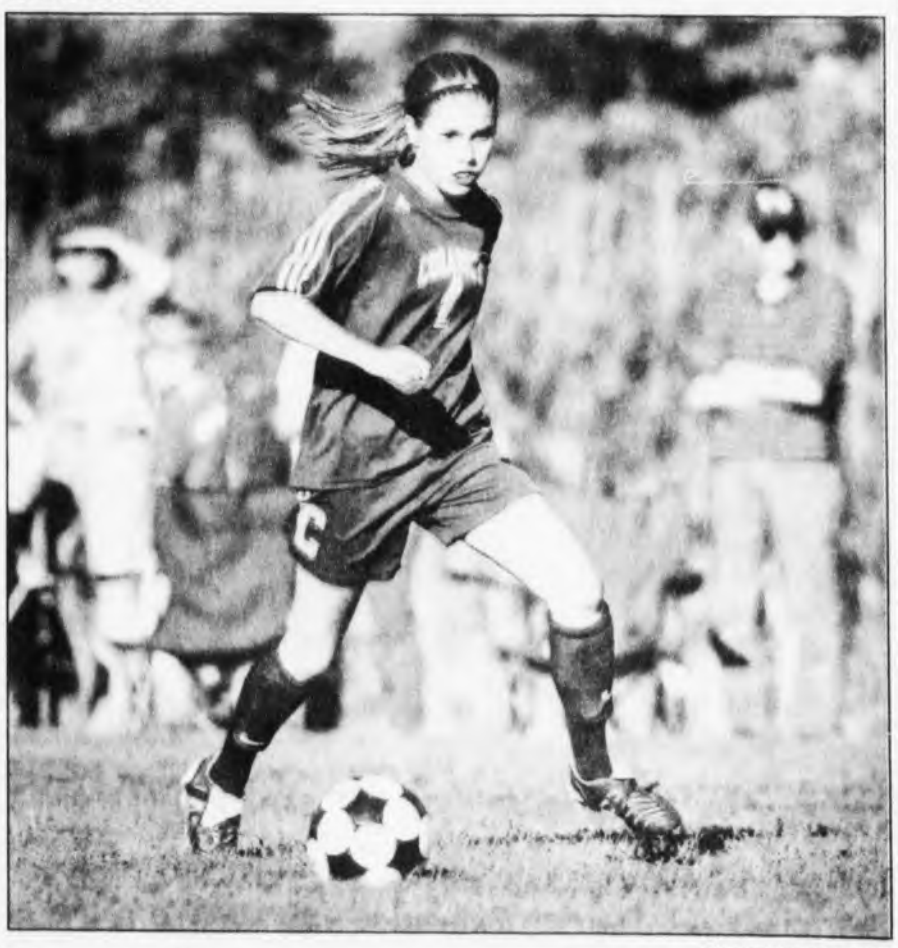
Pat Noonan was the main benefactor catching both touchdowns, including a 59-yard catch in the first quarter and a 45-yard catch in the second.

Hocus focus.

That may be a good spell Cohasset High School football Coach Pete Afanasiw can cast on his team this week in practice after the Skippers destroyed visiting Archbishop Williams, 42-6, Saturday.

Off to a 2-0 start for the second straight year, Cohasset looks to keep the momentum going at Cardinal Spellman Sunday. Game time is 1 p.m.

With most of the starters out of the game late in the third quarter against Archies, Afanasiw is looking for good practice habits this week.



"We want to get back to basics and never take any team lightly," Afanasiw said Wednesday night. "What you do Friday and Saturday is representative of what you do all week in practice."

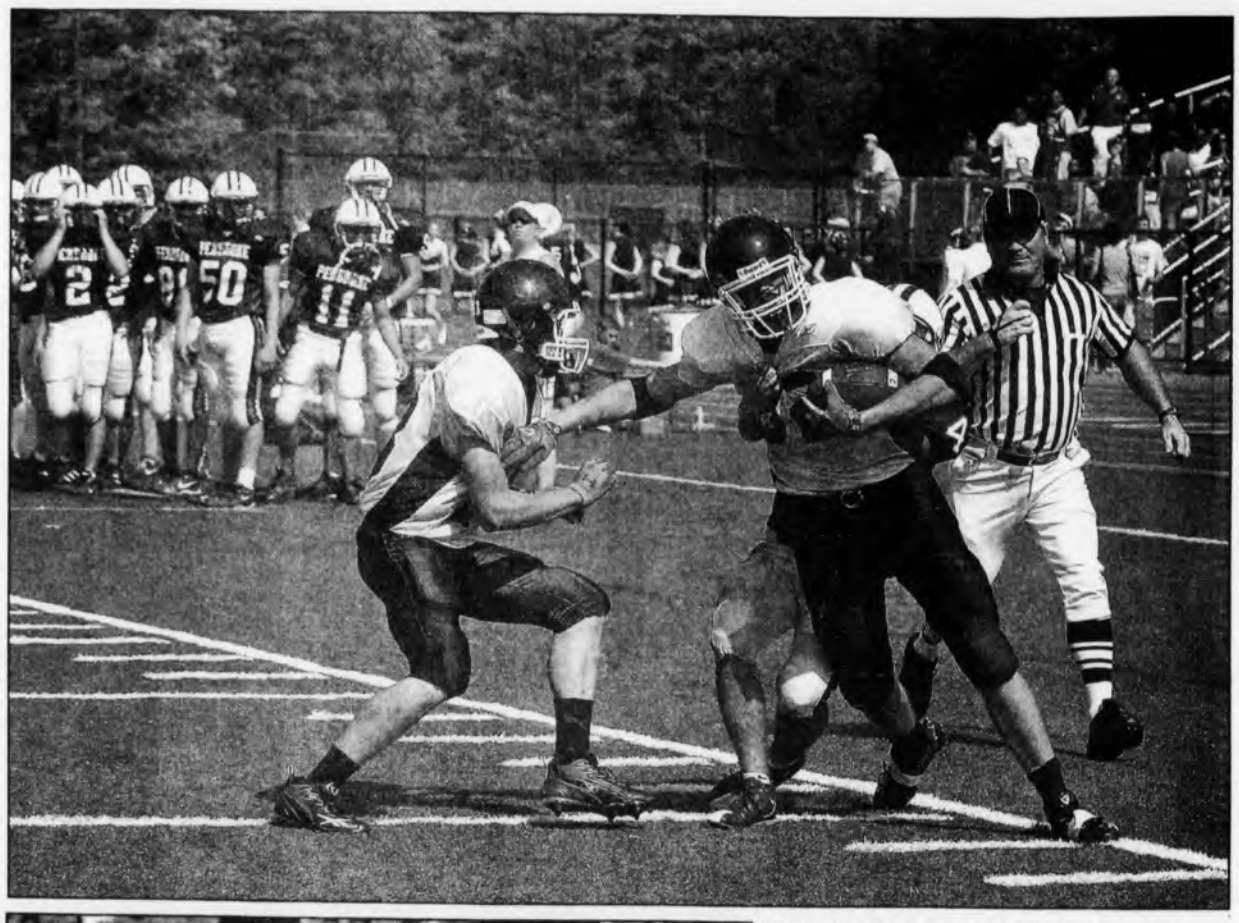
The Bishops decided to stack the box with eight players and Skippers offensive coordinator Tom Ventresca decided to go to the air.

It worked.

Quarterback David Snowdale finished the game 6-of-12 for 235 yards and two touchdown passes. Pat Noonan was the main benefactor catching both touchdowns, including a 59-yard catch in the first quarter and a 45-yard catch in the second.



P.J. McCaw, Dana Valentine, Alec Livingstone and Snowdale all ran in for touchdowns.

Valentine recorded 10 tackles and an interception, Kyle Pinkus notched eight tackles and Jake Cuneo forced a fumble on defense. Afanasiw was also pleased with the play of McCaw and Cliff Musto who kept the scrambling Bishops quarterback at bay for most of the game.

"We took advantage of what they were trying to do on offense," Afanasiw said about the Skippers defensive game plan.

Cohasset also received solid all-around performances from some inexperienced players, including Tyler Kelly, Nick Lieberman and Steve Hurlbut, all who continue to impress in the early going.

CYBSA majoy league tryouts

The try-outs for the 2008 CYBSA major league baseball season will be held Saturday, Oct. 13 at Barnes Field from 1:00 p.m. to 3:30 p.m. All boys and girls who are age 10 prior to May 1, 2008 and no older than age 12 on April 30, 2008 and who are not currently on a CYBSA major league baseball team are invited to try-out. All 12 year olds (born between May 1, 1995 and April 30, 1996) who attend the tryouts are automatically selected for a Major League team provided that these players attend the tryout. Players should register at Barnes Field beginning at 12 noon. This will be the only opportunity to try-out. The rain date will be Saturday, Oct. 20. Please visit our website CYBSA.net for more information. Questions regarding the tryouts may be directed to Liam O'Connell @ (781)383-9538 or Nancy Froio @ (781)383-1897.

BAMSI to hold annual AIDS 4K Walk/Fun Run

The Thomas J. Fahey Jr. Memorial AIDS 4K Walk/Fun Run hosted by BAMSI will take place Saturday, Sept. 29, at Massasoit Community College. Massachusetts Commissioner of Public Health, John Auerbach will be the guest speaker.

All money raised is for direct emergency services not regularly covered by available funds. Last year hundreds of individuals in the greater Brockton area were helped through this fund. BAMSI's HIV Case Management Program provides services to Brockton and the following towns: Bridgewater, East Bridgewater, West Bridgewater, Avon, Stoughton, Whitman, Holbrook, Abington, Rockland, Randolph and Easton.

Individuals can collect pledges before the event and make all checks payable to the Thomas J. Fahey Jr. Memorial AIDS Walk/Fun Run. People can register the day of the event at the Student Center at Massasoit Community College.

The day will begin at 10 a.m. with a continental breakfast and registration at the Student Center followed by opening remarks at 10:30 a.m. and the walk from 11 a.m. to noon.

The event is named in honor of the late Thomas J. Fahey Jr., BAMSI's Director of Case Management, who was a nationally recognized advocate for individuals with HIV and AIDS.

The walk/race course is a 4K (2.5 mile) looped route through Massasoit Community College in Brockton. Individuals who want to volunteer to assist the day of the event or who need information can call 508-580-0219.

LIFE AT CHS

CHRISTINE KENT

Today, the seniors eat lunch in the same lobby but in a different environment...

What's up everyone! Hope you had a great weekend, despite the bitterly cold 60 degree weather. Having basked in the warm sun for several months, it was a definite shock to the system stepping outside. Maybe it's just me but who remembered that cold weather even existed? Sadly, it's time to cover up the cute sun dresses and rad Element t-shirts with North Face jackets and bulky windbreakers, otherwise you might just freeze when you enter the school or boil depending on which "Class Hall" you're in (parents and visitors take note, it is always best to come prepared for severe temperature swings inside the school.)

During the cold seasons, it would have been nice to sit down and cozy up on a soft, comfy couch, while enjoying the beautiful ambiance of CHS.

The comfy couches have been terminated and replaced with cold, hard, shiny, plastic benches possibly intended to deter any "permanent residents." For those readers who have no clue what I am taking about, allow me to fill you in! For several years, seniors were provided a "lounge" formally known as the upstairs lobby (an open area connecting all upper class halls to this one spot), made up of coffee tables, armchairs, and couches soft enough to take a nap.... during lunch or break. This lounge was "seniors only" and most importantly allowed for easy access to the adjoining senior hallway. Today, the seniors eat lunch in the same lobby but in a different environment; essentially the once special lounge has become an extension of the cafeteria thanks to the round lunch tables and park benches that replace the once coveted and "classy" dinning/relaxing space. Anyway, I understand that the Senior Class President has spoken to the "powers that be"... but to no avail. So I guess this case is finally closed...sorry guys.

Moving on to the highlights of the week.

• Tuesday: Mr. Mag and his team of miniature marine biologists took a trip to Humolock Beach. Hopefully, there were no washed up whales on the beach this time...for any Juniors and Senior students looking for a great class, I recommend Marine Science but sadly one of the best things about the course will be missing after this year...Mr. Magnusen!

• Wednesday: Seniors met with their freshmen protégés for a Peer Leadership lunch. Freshmen don't be shy. We love you guys and we are running out of icebreakers!

• Thursday: CMHS rolled out the welcome mats for Parents Night. Let's hope the teachers had an upbeat and positive attitude as they explained our death sentences, aka the curriculum. Putting joking aside, earlier in the day CHS conducted real politics after student council speeches were presented in the auditorium. Who will be the next school president?

• Friday: Happy Yom Kippur Have a great week!

Christine Kent is a senior at CHS. Her column appears weekly in the Mariner.

SAT, PSAT prep

Summit Educational Group will offer PowerPrep, an approach to SAT preparation. Designed for juniors preparing for a year of standardized testing, PowerPrep consists of PSAT class instruction and one-on-one, in home SAT tutoring.

The PSAT Clinic begins at 9 a.m., on Oct. 6, at 9am at Hingham High School with a diagnostic test. Students gain hands-on experience with the PSAT by taking a real practice test under simulated test-taking conditions at the first session of the four-session program. Each session thereafter will give students an introduction to all aspects of the standardized testing process. Instructors teach strategies to help students maximize score results. Cost for the clinic only portion is $200. Students who move on to One-on-One In-Home Tutoring will receive a 10 percent discount on the cost of 10 or more sessions. For the full schedule, visit mytutor.com/powerprep.

After taking the PSAT, students may move on to an accelerated 12-week, One-on-One In-Home Tutoring program customized with the student's needs and goals in mind. Using the results from the PSAT preparation and a SAT diagnostic test, tutors work with each student to develop a customized preparation plan.

Our World

Kitchen Kids starts Sept. 27

The fall session at Our World CGDM will be Wednesday, Sept. 19, through Wednesday, Dec. 12; and Thursday, Sept. 20 through Thursday, Dec. 13.

Upcoming events include:

Kitchen Kids at Our World – Six-week sessions $$120, members, $138 for non–members. Session I, Sept. 27 through Nov. 1; Session II, Nov. 8 through Dec. 13. Kids will be enlivened with bright colors, wonderful aromas and tantalizing flavors. Even the fussiest of eaters will be thrilled to eat something they have made with their own hands. Classes are hands–on with step–by=step instructions offered in a safe and clean environment. Those attending will cook "Around Our World" and learn about the different cuisines of different cultures. Ages 3 through 6 meet Thursday, from 1:30 to 3:30 p.m.; grades kindergarten through four will meet Thursday, from 3:30 to 5 p.m.

Alphabet Immersion Fun – 12 weeks. Cost is $102 for members, $120, non–members. Using the letters of the day, children will immerse themselves in alphabet specific games and activities including Alphabet Role-Play, ABC Bingo, Alphabet Noises and letter-specific crafts. Children ages 3 through 6 can have fun playing with new friends while learning the alphabet. Meets Wednesday or Thursday, 9:15 to 10:05 a.m., or Wednesday or Thursday from 12:30 to 1:20 p.m.

Sports with Jan – 12 weeks. Cost is $102, members, $120, non–members. Sports-related skills are important to every child's social and physical development. Jan St. Pierre will teach children age-appropriate skills in a fun and safe environment. Meets Wednesday, 10:15 to 11 a.m. for ages 3 through 5; Wednesday, 11:15 a.m. to noon, for ages 4 through 6.

Artsy Fun – 12 weeks. Cost is $102 members, $120, non–members. Each week participants will work on two or three fun and creative art projects. Children will play with paint, clay, scissor crafts, collage, photographs and glue. Projects will follow the seasons and children will create art for framing or holiday gift giving. For ages 3 through 6. Meets Wednesday or Thursday, 10:15 to 11:05 a.m.; Wednesday or Thursday, 2:30 to 3:20 p.m.

Fantasy Fun – 12 weeks. Cost is $102, members, $120, non–members. Each week attendees will read themed stories of adventure; pirates, fairies, princesses, dragons, dinosaurs, etc. Afterwards, children will create a fantasy craft and act out an adventure of their own. For ages 3 through 6. Meets Wednesday or Thursday, 11:15 a.m. to 12:05 p.m.; Wednesday or Thursday, 1:30 to 2:20 p.m.

Discovering Science – 12 weeks. Cost is $102 members, $120, non–members. Scientists will keep a lab journal as they explore different aspects of their world through weekly experiments, observations and results discussions. For students in grades one through four. Meets. Wednesday from 3:30 to 4:30 p.m.

Jewelry and Sewing for Beginners – 12 weeks. Cost is $119, members, $140 for non–members. Participants will create several different projects including jewelry, bags, room décor and holiday decorations. Kids will learn about beading and wire twisting, and both hand and machine sewing. For students in grades one through four. Meets Thursday from 3:30 to 4:30 p.m.

Kitchen Kids Workshops – Freakish Feasts, Saturday, Oct. 27, from 1 to 3 p.m., for grades one through four. Make freakish Halloween treats to delight even the most tempestuous eaters. Gingerbread Fun, Saturday, Nov. 10, from 1 to 3 p.m. For grades one through four. Get ready to decorate for the holiday season with a creation made from hand-made gingerbread. Cookies Around the World, Saturday, Dec. 8, from 1 to 3 p.m. For grades one through four. Attendees will make cookies and treats from different nations and learn that sweets taste great everywhere.

Birthday Parties – Our World offers many different ways to celebrate a child's birthday party at the museum. Our World can host a child's birthday party that includes an experienced instructor who will set up the room with provided decorations, lead several hands-on activities and clean everything up at the end. Or rent museum space and throw a party. Full use of the kitchen, function room and the Biodiversity 911 Exhibit offered. Call the museum at 781–383–3198 for more information.

Registration for classes can be made by phone, mail or in person at Our World. Enrollment is limited. Membership discount is 15 percent per course. Violin, piano concert at St. Stephen's

As the first program of this year's concert series, St. Stephen's Church is pleased to present violinist Sargis Karapetyan and his wife, Nune Hakobyan in concert on Sunday, Sept. 30, at 3 p.m.

Karapetyan received his training in Armenia at the Komitas State University and is currently concert-master of the Nashua Symphony. He not only teaches at Clark University, but is also an instructor for Conservatory Teaching in Your Community. Nune Hakobyan also earned her master's degree in piano performance from Komitas, and is now organist at St. James Armenian Church in Watertown, Mass. She is also pianist with the Nashua Symphony. The concert will be introduced by David Baker, Director of Music at St. Stephen's, and a reception will follow the program.

The church at 16 Highland Ave. is handicap accessible, and plenty of parking is available at the village car park. Admission is free, but donations will be accepted. For information, please call 781.383.1083.

Story of the Tuskegee Airmen Oct. 5

Members of the renowned Tuskegee Airmen will host a talk and video presentation titled "Red Tails: The Saga of the Tuskegee Airmen" at 7 p.m., on Oct. 5, in the Parish House of the First Parish (Unitarian-Universalist) church on Cohasset Common. Tuskegee Airman and member of the First Parish congregation, Jack Bryant, will moderate the evening's discussion. The entire community is invited to come learn how these brave, young American men broke the color barrier of the Army Air Corps some 65 years ago.

The entire community is invited to come learn how these brave, young American men broke the color barrier of the Army Air Corps some 65 years ago.

At the start of World War II the U.S. Army had rules which enforced our country's attitudes towards black Americans. They were considered unfit for combat and were generally assigned to stereotyped jobs as cooks and waiters, or were rejected completely. The Army Air Corps certainly did not let black men fly or repair airplanes. In that time of great need, such prejudices were a luxury our country could no longer afford. Afraid of disrupting morale of the fighting units, but under moral pressure and persuasion from the NAACP, the black media, some members of Congress and the White House, the War Department started a "separate but equal" training program for black aviators. This "noble experiment" produced the Tuskegee Airmen. (Excerpt from The History of the Tuskegee Airmen).

The Tuskegee Airmen overcame racism at home and abroad...by the end of World War II these African American pilots had earned respect for their air prowess. The "Red Tails" (nicknamed for the color painted on their aircraft) flew more than 15,000 combat missions and never lost a bomber during Allied escort missions over Europe. This important part of American History is a story that holds life lessons for all generations.

A lasagna meal and beverages will be served. The cover charge is $10/person, or $20 per family. Proceeds will support the Tuskegee Airmen's Scholarship Fund, which awards many thousands of dollars annually to young people across the country. (all presenters and officers of this organization serve without salary or fee). This event is sponsored by the First Parish Unitarian Universalist congregation on Cohasset Common. For information call Sandy Bailey, Parish Administrator, at 781-383-1100.

Inly Arts Festival scheduled for Sept. 30

Uniquely American in the Arts is the theme of this year's Inly Arts Festival, an interactive community event to celebrate the arts and the value of arts education. Music, dance, theater, technology, art and architecture will be featured in workshops, hands-on projects and live performances from 1 to 4 p.m., on Sunday, Sept. 30, at Inly School, 46 Watch Hill Dr., off Route 123, Scituate. Visit inlyartsfestival.com for more information.

The annual Inly Arts Festival is not a fundraiser; rather it is a community event designed to celebrate the arts and the value of arts education.

Highlights include modern dance workshops by Boston Ballet; live zydeco music by The Rejuvenators; live jazz by the Cohasset High School Jazz Combo; interactive theater by South Shore Vocational Technical High School's drama club; an exhibit of original serigraphs by artist Corita Kent, along with paint-your-own miniature Boston Gas tanks; a collaborative geodesic dome-building project to honor architect/engineer Buckminster Fuller; larger-than-life puppets from the Boston Puppeteers Cooperative; interactive theater and green-screen technology; and hands-on art activities exploring styles of Jackson Pollock, Jasper Johns, Alexander Calder and other American greats.

The admission price of $10 per person, $40 maximum per family, covers all activities. Food will be available for purchase. The annual Inly Arts Festival is not a fundraiser; rather it is a community event designed to celebrate the arts and the value of arts education. This year, Inly Arts Festival is sponsored in part by Eastern Bank Charitable Foundation and the Marshfield Cultural Council, which is supported by the Massachusetts Cultural Council.

Lightkeeper's Boutique

The Lightkeepers Autumn Boutique will be held from 6 to 9 p.m., Thursday, Nov. 1, featuring wine tasting and informal modeling of the hottest new fall and holiday fashions. IT'S HAPPENING

'Women Who Travel' panel discussion Oct. 14

An extraordinary exhibition of the work of six artists, "Women Who Travel," will be held through Sunday, Oct. 28, at the South Shore Art Center. The exhibition includes the latest work by Nancy Cusack, Susan Gallagher, Joan Hausrath, Viola Käumlen, Dorothy Simpson Krause, and Esther Maschio. In addition a "Women Who Travel" panel discussion will be held at 2 p.m., Sunday, Oct. 14.

Exhibit organizer, Esther Maschio, states the show "will consider a variety of 21st century practices in printmaking and related media from traditional forms to the highly experimental. Cross disciplines will include book arts, digital technology, writing, and photography."

"Drawing and writing practices intersect in my work," states Nancy Cusack, professor of art at Mass Art, "as visual essays, they offer multiple layers and conclusions, inviting questions about content as well as process and materials."

Nancy Cusack has designed and led international cultural experiences in Latin America and Europe for more than two decades. Susan Gallagher, a photographer from Scituate, has traveled extensively including Great Britain, Turkey and Cuba. Joan Hausrath adapts the landscapes from her travels for the imagery in her art, primarily prints. Using journaling, Joan layers images one over another building a complex collection of marks and textures.

Viola Käumlen spends summers in Marshfield, travels widely, and lives in the Engadine Valley in Switzerland. She uses various cameras in her artist books, photo series and editions. Viola is constantly looking for new ways to share her work and ideas through intense collaborations with fellow artists. Dorothy Simpson Krause is a painter by training and a collage maker by nature. 'Stitch' finds new home in Square

By Carol Britton Meyer
CMEYER@CNC.COM

The newly opened Creative Stitch at 28 South St. in Hingham Square is more than a yarn shop.

It's a place where both novice and experienced knitters gather to knit and to improve their knitting skills, share ideas, socialize, and make new friends. The shop recently moved from 3A in Cohasset to Hingham Square, just three miles away.

Upon entering the shop, one's spirits are lifted by the hundreds of skeins of brightly colored yarn lining the walls. It's enough to make non-knitters who stop in to check out one of the Square's newest shops decide to take up knitting. There's yarn made from wool and other natural fibers, including camel hair, hemp, and bamboo (very soft), and even soy (organic yarn).

"It's a tactile experience," said shop owner Kristen Ross, a Scituate resident. "People like to touch and pat the yarns. Sometimes they come in for a color 'fix.' All this color cheers them up." Another plus is the "great natural light" streaming through the windows. "This is what a knitting shop should be like," Ross said.

There's always someone here knitting, so you always feel comfortable. I enjoy socializing with knitters of all different ages and backgrounds."
— Staci Gilbert, Cohasset

"Knitting is only half the reason we come here," said Cohasset resident Staci Gilbert, who has participated in the Friday morning knitting class for the past year, first in Cohasset and now in Hingham. "The other half is the camaraderie. Sometimes I just stop by to get some inspiration. There's always someone here knitting, so you always feel comfortable. I enjoy socializing with knitters of all different ages and backgrounds."

Ross remembers the first time Gilbert walked into her shop. "She was wearing a traditional plaid Burberry shawl," she said with a smile.

This winter, Gilbert will be wearing a multi-colored "Einstein" coat, so-called because of its bulkiness – that she knitted recently. "It took me an entire season to make it. Kristen walked me through the project," she said. "It's my first big success – something I will be proud to wear." Gilbert also makes handbags and brightly colored socks and decorated slippers for family and friends. The socks these knitters make aren't just any socks – they're ribbed, patterned, or striped – depending on how the creative spirit moves the knitter.

"Knitting teaches you patience and focuses and calms you," said Hingham resident Joan Santacroce, who works at the shop.

Knitters help Rwandan children

By Carol Britton Meyer
CMEYER@CNC.COM

Rwandan children display the dolls crafted by knitters at the Creative Stitch.

The Creative Stitch in Hingham Square is helping to bring joy and comfort to Rwandan children.

In support of CHABHA (Children Affected by HIV/AIDS), the shop collects hand-knit dolls from anyone who volunteers to make them and sends them to Rwanda for children whose families have been affected by the AIDS epidemic. The pattern for the eight-inch doll is available online or at the shop. Each takes an hour or two to make.

"Imagine how kids who have no toys feel when they receive one of these dolls," said Staci Gilbert of Cohasset, who stops by the shop frequently. "They carry them on their backs and pretend they're real babies."

CHABHA's mission is to raise awareness in the United States about the plight of children in Africa and to support community-based projects in Rwanda, Namibia, and South Africa.

The easy-to-knit colorful "Duduza" (or comfort) dolls are made from yarn scraps and filled with polyester stuffing. Each one is a different, depending on the creativity of the knitter. The facial expressions also vary. For example, there are Red Sox, cowboy, Eskimo, and rock star dolls. "It's amazing what people do," shop owner Kristen Ross said. The dolls go to children in child-headed households that are part of an association called Amahoro, meaning "peace."

Teenagers orphaned by genocide and AIDS formed the association. They have begun to combine families – some of which are headed by children even younger than they are – in order to survive. Photographs taken by visitors to the Rwandan community show boys and girls with smiles on their faces cradling the dolls and holding them close. One small boy is gazing lovingly into the eyes of his doll.

CHABHA has formed a partnership with Amahoro and has helped the association expand its mission. The Creative Stitch joined the CHABHA effort earlier this year when Hingham resident Ann Selinger, a participant in the Friday morning knitting class, told of a friend of hers in Vermont who was involved with the group. Participants in the Friday class got the project off the ground and led the charge to encourage other knitters to get involved in the doll project.

Gilbert sent one of the dolls she knitted to her daughter at summer camp. "Everyone loved it," she said. "They thought the CHABHA project was a wonderful thing." Her daughter brought the doll home with her in perfect condition so that it can be sent in the next shipment.

The next doll "journey" is Sept. 30. The Creative Stitch collected 250 dolls for the first shipment and has more than 550 dolls ready for the next one.

"We become very attached to these dolls," said Ross. "We can't change the children's circumstances, but we can help make things a little easier for them."

A woman from Middleboro who is wheelchair-bound has already made 167 "comfort" dolls. "It's a passion for her," Gilbert said gratefully. Other knitters have made large numbers of the dolls, too.

Those interested in participating in the grassroots CHABHA effort may pick up a pattern and instructions at the Creative Stitch at 28 South St. or online at www.creativestitchonline.com. For more information about CHABA, visit www.chabha.org.

'Stitch' finds new home in Square

Ross opened the Creative Stitch in Cohasset six years ago. When she began running out of space and the lease was up, she decided to move to Hingham Square. "I was looking for a community space with more of an eclectic atmosphere," she said. "When I first walked into the [South Street] building I said, 'this is home.'"

The move makes sense in the context of the ongoing post-Greenbush revitalization of downtown Hingham. "There's a good amount of foot traffic going by our windows," she said.

Jada Coyne of Marshfield, who also works in the shop, agrees. "Downtown Hingham has the old-town feeling of one of everything," she said. "This is a good location for us. It's user-friendly despite the construction [which will wrap up soon]. Some people have stopped by and said they had always been meaning to visit the Cohasset shop. Before we opened, people were knocking on the windows."

Help is offered to everybody who steps in the door seeking advice — on knitting or even another subject. It's a place where you can find solace when feeling troubled — a warm, welcoming atmosphere where you make friends with people you might not otherwise have the chance to meet, said Coyne. "Knitting is the one thread we all have in common."

Ross noted that her shop is a "perfect fit" with the fabric business and kids' sewing classes that are offered upstairs in the former Buttonwood building, part of which the Creative Stitch now calls home.

"Knitting is great therapy," Ross said. "It's like a sanctuary here. It's not just about knitting but also friendship and sharing our sense of joy and talents with others."

St. Paul Parish to host Liturgy Workshop

St. Paul Parish of Hingham is hosting a Liturgy Workshop sponsored by the Office of Worship and Spiritual Life of the Boston Archdiocese for the entire South Shore area. It is a two-session workshop that will take place from 7 to 9 p.m., on Thursdays, Sept. 27 and Oct. 4, in St. Paul school hall. Anyone who is seeking to better understand the celebration of the Mass as well as those who are currently involved in liturgical ministry in their parishes are welcome.

Highlights will include: The role of the assembly and ministers in the Mass and history and theology of the Mass, as well as what is liturgy and why it is celebrated on Sunday.

In order that materials needed may be available on time, register as soon as possible either by calling one's parish office or the Office of Worship at 617-746-5880. Email address is OfficeForWorship@rcab.org. Cost is $25 with the possibility that one's parish might be willing to defray the cost. St. Paul of Hingham parishioners are to register by calling the rectory at 781-749-0587.

Send in the clowns

Hull couple gets down to funny business

By Katia Opatkiewicz
SPECIAL TO TOWN COMMONS

When Susan Oberg and Harvey Jacobvitz are sitting on their couch in Hull watching next year's Summer Olympics in Beijing, they will have a special reason to tune in.

Oberg and Jacobvitz, a pair of clowns who live in Hull, are leaving for China this week to teach college students in Beijing the art of clowning. The married couple will be visiting the country for three weeks while they teach the students the history of clowning, types of clowns and types of makeup for the Olympics.

Though there will be very little free time and this is not the couple's first time performing outside the country, Oberg, who plays "Fruit," and Jacobvitz, who plays "Jingles," are very excited for the opportunity and hope that this trip will expand their business internationally.

They will spend the first two weeks of their trip teaching the Beijing students and the last week performing for a month-long festival China is hosting celebrating the art of clowning. They will be performing in the festival two to three times a day and are preparing to perform in Chinese.

"The people really appreciate it when you try to speak their language," said Oberg.

The couple has been told there will be a two-day tour and a bit of free time, but "they didn't really give us that much detail about the tour," said Jacobvitz. Though the hours will be long and the work challenging at times, "It is worth it to see the reactions on the children's faces," said Oberg.

Though Oberg and Jacobvitz are grandparents, there are no plans for them to retire any time soon.

An interpreter will help the couple relate to the students, and when asked about the language barrier being a problem, Oberg and Jacobvitz responded by saying it may be, but it will be a lot of fun. Both of them see teaching as an essential resource for clowning to continue.

"If we didn't teach the tradition of clowning, it would not continue. I always tell my students that they need to teach someone else what I have taught them for clowning to continue on," said Oberg.

Fruit and Jingles have been performing as "auguste clowns" — also known as "clowns that take the pie in the face," said Oberg — for more than 20 years and have had plenty of practice. They both have dedicated their lives to making other people happy and teaching children in innovative ways.

Oberg said she dressed up as a clown once for a men's club in her hometown, and when she saw the reaction the children had she knew that clowning was for her. Oberg developed the name "Fruit" because she said that it is a good way to interact with the children and her costume is covered in colorful fruit.

"I go up to them and ask them what their favorite fruit is," said Oberg.

Jacobvitz got his name "Jingles" because he use to wear jingle bells around his ankles and when he walked they would jingle.

Though the pressure of performing may be a little stronger when they are doing a performance for money, they always enjoy performing and teaching children. Both Fruit and Jingles are board members for Why Me, Inc., which is a non-profit organization to provide emotional and financial support and services to the children of the area with cancer.

The two also hosted clown camps in North Carolina June 18 to 22 and in Hull Aug. 6 to 10, for children who wish to learn the art of clowning.

"It is a five-day event; you bring your own lunch and we teach the children, face painting, juggling, creating your character, etc. The real pleasure is on the second day when the kids are there before you are," said Oberg.

Though Oberg and Jacobvitz are grandparents, there are no plans for them to retire any time soon.

"We'll retire when we put on the makeup and it doesn't look good anymore," said Oberg.

For information on Oberg and Jacobvitz, visit fruitandjingles.com or call 781-925-9793

Fruit and Jingles

Ambassadors of laughter Susan Oberg and Harvey Jacobvitz, better known as their clowning counterparts Fruit and Jingles, are traveling across the world to instruct 300 Chinese college students in the art of clown make-up and costuming.

Campbell Scott plays ethics-challenged journalist Augustine Early in the Huntington Theatre Company's world premiere production of "The Atheist" by Ronan Noone, running Sept 12-30, only at the Calderwood Pavilion at the Boston Center for the Arts.

'Atheist' makes headlines

By R. Scott Reedy
CORRESPONDENT

In "The Atheist," a new play by Ronan Noone now at Boston's Calderwood Pavilion, Campbell Scott portrays a newspaperman pursuing a headline-making career while giving not so much as a backward glance to journalistic ethics.

The one-man show, directed by Justin Waldman, made its debut at the Huntington Theatre Company's 2006 Breaking Ground Festival, and is now being given a full-scale, limited-run production. It tells the tale of Augustine Early, a morally bankrupt journalist willing to do anything, and use anyone, to get his byline on page one. When he stumbles upon some unsavory behavior on the part of an elected official, Early doesn't hesitate to toss his own girlfriend's questionable behavior into play in order to stoke the flames of political scandal.

Noone, an Irish-born writer now based in Boston, has brought to life an ink-stained wretch beyond redemption who seems only slightly aware that he just might drown in his own wretchedness. He's more than willing to use and discard anyone in his path if they make good copy.

Campbell Scott, a respected actor in his own right and the son of the late George C. Scott and Colleen Dewhurst, is perfectly cast as the writer who couldn't care less about doing the right thing. With each dubious success, Early is drawn further into the pursuit of the story at all costs. Scott does a superb job with this character who at times seems almost turned on by his own sleaziness.

The play's title is a reference to Early's claim that his success came after he abandoned his belief in God and was able to live a life based on rules of his own making. Scott's riveting portrayal makes Early's passionate pursuit of fame compelling and even relatable, all while his tactics remain reprehensible.

Campbell Scott stars in the Huntington Theatre Company's production of "The Atheist" at the Calderwood Pavilion, Boston Center for the Arts, 527 Tremont St., Boston, through Sept. 30. For tickets and information, visit the box office, call 617-266-0800 or go online at huntingtontheatre.org.

Village bylaw under scrutiny

ZBA wants dual board process

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

The crafting of the village zoning bylaw, a process nearly a year in the making, is finally reaching its culmination. A draft of the zoning bylaws has been filed at the Town Clerk's office as of last Tuesday (Sept. 18). Last Thursday (Sept. 20), a convocation of Planning Board and Zoning Board of Appeals members discussed the initial draft of the zoning bylaws.

The village zoning bylaw will have to pass muster with voters at Special Town Meeting on Nov. 13 to be entered into the books. All zoning bylaw amendments need a two-thirds vote at Town Meeting.

"The main thrust is to make village development a more attractive commercial opportunity."

— Stuart Ivimey, Planning Board

The bulk of the discussion at the meeting came down to what board will enforce the village bylaws. The Planning Board's intent in the bylaw was to simplify the procedure for development in the village by making the permitting a one-stop process. The Planning Board would review plans and grant special permits to developers.

"The purpose was to enable flexibility" in setback, dimensions and design guidelines, said Mike Westcott, Planning Board member and lead on the village bylaw project. The one-stop approval would make the process less onerous thereby encouraging property owners to renovate and expand. With the Planning Board reviewing all proposals, it would also give the elected board the ability to plan and see a larger vision for the village.

Then, if developers wanted to go outside the standards set in the bylaw, they

Assault on teen under investigation

Reports indicate incident may have been videotaped

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

A 15-year-old Cohasset High School sophomore has both wrists in a cast following an alleged assault by a fellow student or students after school last Friday (Sept. 21).

The victim was sitting with his skateboard, along with three friends – none of whom attend Cohasset High – in the parking lot near 1 Pleasant St. when he was approached and surrounded by a group of male CHS students. Unconfirmed reports put the number in the group anywhere from eight to nine.

One of the CHS boys in the group reportedly punched the 15-year-old twice in the face, then picked him up and threw him onto the ground. The victim tried to protect his face and broke both wrists when he hit the ground, according to the victim's father. Once on the ground, his attacker, a 16-year-old boy, who is facing assault charges, allegedly kicked him.

One of the group involved in the attack allegedly filmed the incident on his cell phone.

The details of the incident remain under investigation and police are still determining if more students will be charged, said Police Chief James

North Cohasset is all dried up

Hooking area up to town water floated

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

While the majority of Cohasset residents have enjoyed the benefit of plentiful water supply during the severe drought this summer, the 285 homes serviced by Aquarion water in North Cohasset have been under a strict water ban. Lawns are brown, gardens are dead and conservation efforts for everyday use had to be implemented. Yet, in the very same town, residents on Cohasset Water could run their sprinklers systems, water their flourishing gardens and had plenty of water to spare.

For North Cohasset resident, Joe McElroy of 59 Windy Hill Road, it's been a difficult scenario to observe.

"North Cohasset is part of our community."

— Joseph McElroy, Windy Hill Road

"It's extremely hard to accept being in an area with a water ban," said McElroy at the Water Commission meeting on Wednesday evening. He came before the Commission to see if incorporating North Cohasset onto the Cohasset Water system could be included in the Water Department's long-range capital plan. Although not an entirely new cause for McElroy, who said he talked with the Water Commission about this issue in the

Beechwood Ballpark dedication Saturday

The Beechwood Ballpark reopens Saturday, Sept. 29, and the festivities begin at 8:30 a.m., with the Dedication held at the infield. The Homerun Derby begins at 8:45 a.m., in the ball field and a Basketball Shooting contest will take place at 9:30 a.m.

Kiddie Fun begins at 10 a.m., in the Play Park and the Special Olympics ball game will be held at 10 a.m., in the ball field. The Old Timers Game wraps things up at 11 a.m., in the ball field.

Commemorative baseballs and information will be available at the Information Tent, as well as first aid.

Doane Street will be closed from Church Street to Beechwood Street from 7 a.m. to 3: p.m. Parking will be allowed on Church and Beechwood streets as marked.

Forest Avenue sidewalk celebration

Planning is underway for a kickoff event scheduled for Saturday, Oct. 27, to celebrate the completion of the long-awaited new sidewalk on Forest Avenue. Tentative plans include a ribbon cutting; a bike, trike, and stroller parade; refreshments and more. To join the planning committee or to offer suggestions, contact Trish Morse or Diana Van Etten at forestsidewalk@yahoo.com.

Unclaimed bike day

Police are asking any residents who have lost a bike or think their bike was stolen to stop by the police station between 8 a.m. and noon Saturday morning (Sept. 29) to look at the abandoned bicycles police have found.

Unclaimed bikes will be declared surplus.

Assault on teen under investigation

Hussey.

Hussey would not comment about reports the incident was recorded on a cell phone video but did say police are still gathering evidence from people at the scene.

"Based on the investigation done by officers and in speaking with the victim one youth is being charged at this time," Hussey said. "This incident remains under investigation and we will determine if others will also be similarly charged."

A 9-1-1 call to police reported a "fight" in the vicinity of 1 Pleasant St. at about 4:50 p.m. Friday (Sept. 21).

However, the victim's father described the incident as an attack, not a fight.

Hussey said officers searched the area and were able to find and identify three youths who were a few streets away. Further investigation by detectives revealed a fourth youth was involved and he was subsequently charged. The 16-year-old will be summonsed to court on charges of assault and battery and assault and battery with a dangerous weapon (his foot), Hussey said.

The victim was transported to the hospital, police said.

Hussey said police did notify the high school because the youths are students there.

"We are taking a hard look had how this may have started," Hussey said. "We are trying to determine what may have happened prior to the incident."

However, the Mariner has learned unofficially that earlier that Friday the victim, who was being picked on at school, asked the group of boys to stop throwing things, including food items, at him. The alleged "bullies" then asked if the victim wanted to fight them. A member of the high school staff stopped what was a potential altercation and apparently did not think it would escalate further.

However, the boys later allegedly went looking for the victim and tracked him down.

In an email to the Mariner, a concerned parent described the group as "premeditated" whose actions go way beyond bullying.

In a phone interview, the father of the alleged victim said his son is not a fighter and described him as a "passive kid." He said both the school and police have been very supportive.

"I hope this incident will raise awareness among parents and their kids that this type of behavior is unacceptable," he said.

Supt. of Schools Denise Walsh said the school department is unable to comment on any details with regard to an incident that occurred outside of school property.

"That is a matter for the police department," she stated in an email. "However, we can and will deal with anything that is reported under the Memorandum of Understanding with the CPD."

Through the MOU, schools and police have established communication and procedures regarding the reporting of hate crimes, sex crimes, weapons and the use, possession, and distribution of drugs and/or alcohol within the schools, on school grounds, and at school- sponsored events.

However, Walsh did say that Cohasset Public schools has a very clear goal (as outlined in the district's Strategic Plan) "to provide a safe, respectful and positive learning environment for students, staff and the community".

"It takes all community members working together to make this happen," she wrote.

Register to vote for Special Town Meeting

Friday, Nov. 2 will be the last day to register to vote for the Special Town Meeting to be held on Tuesday, Nov. 13. Registration will be held at the Town Clerk's office from 8:30 a.m. to 8 p.m.

Any citizen of the United States who is a Massachusetts resident and who will be 18 years old on or before a town meeting or Election Day may register to vote. There is no waiting period to be eligible to register to vote. If you move, you may register to vote as soon as you move into your new home. Registration is closed for a brief period before each town meeting and election to allow election officials time to prepare the voting lists. If you register during a "closed" period, you will be eligible to vote only in later town meetings or elections.

POLICE BEAT

Alleged drunk driver signals cruiser

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

A 28-year-old Hingham man is facing a drunk driving charge following a traffic stop in the early hours of Sunday morning.

Police said the man, who was driving a 1997 Jeep Wrangler, was headed north on Route 3A near lower King Street when he came up behind a police cruiser, started weaving, and started flashing his high beams at the cruiser. The cruiser pulled over to let him pass and then the officer continued to observe the Jeep weaving.

The officer pulled the Jeep over and after some conversation with the officer and further investigation, he was arrested for operating under the influence of alcohol; he was also cited for failure to stay in marked lanes.

Bike day

A police officer found a purple Cannondale M500 bicycle last week that is being held in the garage at the police station along with a number of other bikes, police said.

Cohasset police are conducting a "bicycle day" in the parking lot of the station off Elm Street from 8 a.m. to noon on Saturday during which people with lost or stolen bikes can take a look to see if any of the abandoned bicycles belong to them. Police said the bikes are in good shape and most are worth $200-$300.

Unclaimed bicycles will be declared surplus property and picked up by propertyroom.com, which will auction them off.

Dirt bike

A 15-year-old boy and his father reported that the boy's motorized dirt bike, valued at about $500, was stolen last Wednesday (Sept. 19). The officer who took the report checked with neighbors and spoke to someone who had observed a couple of boys, one of whom had a bicycle helmet, go into Wompatuck State Park through the Doane Street gate. The officer checked some of the trails but did not find anything. The boy's father, who is very familiar with the park, found the bike lying on its side on one of the trails.

The officer responded back to the park and preserved the bike as evidence. Detectives were able to take some fingerprints off the bike, which was not damaged and was later released to its owner.

"Detectives will determine if the prints are useable," Sgt. William Quigley said.

METRO-Lec

Officer Regen Steverman, who is the computer crime unit (CCU) officer from Cohasset for METRO-Lec, assisted Hingham police last week with potential computer criminal activity involving a Hingham resident. METRO-Lec is a consortium of area police departments that allows them to share resources. Cohasset has three officers who are part of its METRO-Lec team. One officer is part of the Investigation Support Unit (ISU); that officer and another are part of Child Abduction Response Team (CART).

Jewelry missing

A 50-year-old North Cohasset woman walked into the police station last Tuesday to report that about $1,700 worth of jewelry has gone missing from inside her home over the past three months.

The woman believes either a family member or a friend of a family member could be involved.

Detectives are investigating, police said.

Salad dressing

A 30-year-old North Main Street woman reported last Wednesday (Sept. 19) that someone had smeared honey mustard salad dressing on her 2005 Nissan Altima. She washed the salad dressing off immediately so there was no damage to her car. The woman suspects the perpetrator might be a neighbor that she is having trouble with but has no proof.

Air traffic

An Atlantic Avenue resident called police at about 1 p.m. on Sunday alarmed at how low the planes were flying over his house. Police said there is not a lot they can do about the air traffic or noise. However, Massport has a 24-hour noise complaint line, which is: 617-561-3333.

Wallet found

A woman called headquarters last Wednesday (Sept. 19) to report that her wallet was missing. She provided police with a description of the wallet.

When police called her back a few days later to follow up on the issue, she explained that her four-year-old son had hidden the wallet in the house. She had suspected that her son may have hidden the wallet but apparently he had forgotten that he had.

Blocked hydrant

Acting on a report from a caller, police ticketed a vehicle that was blocking a fire hydrant by the senior housing off Elm Street. Fines for blocking fire hydrants are now $50. As a safety measure, police will have a vehicle towed if it is completely blocking a hydrant and the owner cannot be located.

No-left turns

Apparently many motorists, who go through the Dunkin' Donuts drive-through on King Street in the morning, are ignoring the sign saying no left-turn until 9:30 a.m. The restriction was a condition the town instituted before agreeing to allow the drive-through at that location.

Police have been monitoring the area but hope that motorists will use common sense and not try to turn left against oncoming rush-hour traffic.

Police are continuing to look at the number of curb cuts and problems along Route 3A that includes a section of King Street.

P-lot accidents

There were two more parking lot accidents reported last week, both occurring on Friday morning (Sept. 21). At about 9:45 a.m., a 71-year-old Hull woman in a 2001 Taurus backed out of her spot at Bank of America and into a 2004 BMW belonging to a 74-year-old Hingham woman. There was a minor scrape on the BMW. An officer assisted with the paperwork.

At about 10:10 a.m., the operator of a 1992 Nissan pickup out of Scituate backed into a 1999 Chevy van, being operated by a 48-year-old Randolph male, that was parked at a pump for fueling at the Exxon Station. There was minor damage to both vehicles and neither vehicle had to be towed. There were no injuries. However, the officer did file a report because the damage was in excess of $1,000, the threshold that makes it a police matter.

MBTA still testing

Although Greenbush is now a live rail line, the MBTA is still conducting tests and that was probably the reason that the lights would not stop flashing at about 5 p.m. last Friday (Sept. 21) at the North Main Street crossing. Police received multiple calls about the lights.

Needed assistance

A 38-year-old South Main Street woman called 9-1-1 to report a past assault at about 4 a.m. last Wednesday (Sept. 19). However, the responding officer determined through talking with the woman that she had had too much too drink and that there had not been an assault. The officer helped the woman into her residence, police said.

Stay away

A Cohasset man, who said he is having problems with a woman at work, called police when the woman came to his house to try to talk to him. The woman had left prior to police arrival but police made contact with her and advised her to stay off his property.

Touring Time: one hour
Hours: noon - 4:00 pm
Open Friday through Sunday through November 25th, 2007
The Mayflower House, owned by the General Society of Mayflower Descendants, is a handsome 18th century mansion overlooking Plymouth Harbor. It reflects two epochs in Massachusetts history: the colonial period culminating with the Revolutionary War, as well as the summer life of the late 19th century when New England coastal towns attracted affluent summer residents.
The Mayflower House was built in 1754 by Edward Winslow, descendant of Pilgrim Edward Winslow, third Governor of Plymouth Colony.
Tours include the formal gardens, and nine rooms with authentic furnishings of the 18th, 19th, and 20th centuries.

Village bylaw under scrutiny

would then have to go before the Zoning Board for a variance.

"The main thrust is to make village development a more attractive commercial opportunity," said Planning Board member Stuart Ivimey.

However, ZBA member Ben Lacy quickly pointed out that intention was not clearly stated in the bylaw. As currently written, the bylaw grants the Planning Board the sole permitting authority over new construction and changes in use — anything structural change in an pre-1955 (when zoning was established) building, even within the proposed bylaws, would need to go before the ZBA as well. Since the majority of the buildings pre-date zoning, they would have to appeal to the ZBA for a variance.

Traditionally, in cases of commercial expansion or new construction the applicant would need to go before the Planning Board for a site plan review and before the ZBA for a special permit or variance. Lacy said the ZBA would like to keep this type of dual board procedure in place.

"Let's leave things the way they've been," said Lacy, "it's good to have two boards looking at a plan."

Lacy suggested the village bylaw expand the site plan review regulations to include added oversight on design and architecture the Planning Board wants for the village. The Planning Board currently has two other types of development solely under their jurisdiction, the Transit Oriented District and Cluster development.

Ivimey and Westcott largely disagreed with Lacy's substantial change of the proposed bylaw as it was intended. The bylaw was meant to streamline the process, said village consultant Angus Jennings of Concord Square Development Company. The Planning Board had seemed like the natural choice to enforce the village bylaw because it had been the pro-active force behind its creation.

"The concept of a macro vision for the downtown area disappears," if there is a dual board process, said Ivimey, "we lose our ability to plan."

Westcott said the intent was to make the planning board the permitting authority because it gave them the authority to encourage good development, whether it be including a pocket park or incorporating "green" construction. It also gives them the oversight to forge cooperation between several property owners for public space items like pedestrian access, walkways and parking.

"The application of the bylaws should be done by an elected planning review board," said Westcott in a phone interview. The Board of Selectmen appoints ZBA members. Westcott said voters then have the power to not vote in an incumbent if they don't like what they have done during their term.

The Zoning Board also had a list of smaller language changes and minor points after they reviewed the zoning bylaw draft filed at the Town Clerk's office last week. The larger points and vision of the bylaw, to encourage a mixed-use center enhanced with appropriate design, seemed to be supported by the ZBA members.

"We're on board now, so talk to us all the time. Let's work together on this," said Lacy as the meeting wrapped up.

"The objective would be to go before Town Meeting with the support of all town boards," said Jennings.

Since the bylaw has been filed with Town Clerk, it now has some legal weight to it. The Attorney General reviews all municipal zoning bylaws once they are entered in to the books. They look at the entire progression of the zoning bylaw from its filing with the Town Clerk to advertising to the version after the mandatory public hearing to the bylaw approved at Town Meeting. Jennings said changes to the bylaw between now and Town Meeting could be made as long as they do not exceed the scope of what was originally advertised for the public hearing.

A public hearing on the village zoning bylaw will be held on Oct. 2 at 6:30p.m. in Town Hall basement meeting room. All are welcome and encouraged to attend. Copies of the bylaw are available at the Town Clerk's office.

Village bylaw in brief

To the greatest extent possible, and to keep things simple, all existing bylaws are being preserved.

• Definition of apartment: Apartment has never been defined in the town bylaws. A single apartment will be between no less than 700 square feet, but no more than 1,500 square feet.

• Definition of floor area ratio: A new term and mechanism to limit the amount of development on a given piece of land. It is the relation between buildable lot size and sum of gross floor area of all buildings on a lot.

• Permitting authority: The special permit granting authority for the downtown village business district is the Planning Board. Any application that is outside the zoning bylaws set forth would have to appeal to the ZBA for a variance.

• Sidewalk sales: In the village business district merchants may display their goods on public sidewalks on a temporary basis as long as the display is routinely removed outside of normal business hours. The display must still allow for safe pedestrian passage.

• Inclusionary bylaw: The Village will be exempt from the inclusionary bylaw, which states all multi-family residential development of five or more apartment units must include one unit or 10 percent affordable housing units, whichever is greater. The Housing Partnership Committee is in the process of rewriting this bylaw so it is subject to change at a future Town Meeting. Given that, the bylaw crafters though it wise to leave the village exempt for the time being.

• Table of area regulations The table does away with the 40,000 square foot lot size requirement for apartments reducing it to 5,000 square feet. Frontage must be at least 50 feet. It defines minimum yard setbacks for the front and rear as 15 feet. Side yard setbacks are given a minimum of 10 feet. However, it enables narrower setbacks based on adjacent buildings and (to be written) Planning Board design guidelines. There is no change in height restrictions or lot coverage, which are set at 35 feet and 80 percent, respectively.

• Lots facing town parking lot: The bylaw allows rear setback flexibility for lots with frontage on the municipal town lot. Instead of a 15 foot setback, the rear yard depth can be reduced to eight feet provided a sidewalk is built and all other dimensional standards are met. The goal is to create a second streetscape facing the parking lot. In addition, the municipal parking way would be considered a street only for the purposes of providing frontage.

• Employee parking: Parking spaces for employees can be located up to 750 feet away from a business entrance. The intent is to have employees park farther away to keep spaces open for customers. The bylaw also stipulates any existing parking in the village business district should be maintained.

• Floor area ratio: The maximum allowable floor area ratio for new buildings will be 1.5, however, the maximum may be increased to 2.0 by the special permit granting authority based on providing a providing a public benefit, such as a sidewalk, parking or affordable housing.

Are you on the active voters' list?

Recently the Board of Registrars have mailed confirmation notices to voters who did not respond to the annual street listing (census) by the first of June. This mailing notifies the voter that their name has been removed from the active voting list and has been placed on the inactive voting list. In order to activate themselves they must return the postcard and they will be restored immediately to the active voters' list.

If a voter has moved to another city or town, they still need to sign and return the postcard. Their name will be immediately removed from the voters' list in Cohasset . To vote, they must register to vote in their new city /town. Mail-in forms are available.

If postcards are not returned the voter will be removed from the voters' list. Also, they will be removed if they do not vote in at least one of the next two state elections or take other action that would reinstate them as an active voter.

No sewer tie-in for Avalon

Housing Appeals upholds ZBA decision

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Wastewater is at the crux of the Avalon development plans to move forward. The developers have pursued wastewater treatment on two fronts — on-site wastewater treatment and a tie-in to town sewer. Last week, Avalon's appeal in pursuit of a town sewer connection to service their 200-unit apartment complex was denied by the Housing Appeals Committee.

The Housing Appeals Committee is the division of the state Department of Housing and Community Development that rules on 40-B issues if they are denied at the local Zoning Board of Appeals level and the town is under the 10 percent affordable threshold.

On the other front, Avalon has received a permit for on-site groundwater discharge of wastewater from the Department of Environmental Protection. However, the Water Commission has appealed the permit and it is currently under review by the DEP.

Despite the wastewater troubles, Avalon Vice President of Development Scott Dale said Avalon is still committed bringing the Avalon development and affordable housing to Cohasset. The complex is proposed for 62 acres off Route 3A, across from Good Sport.

"We are currently reviewing our options relative to municipal sewer," said Scott Dale, Avalon Vice President of development in a phone interview. Although he would not discuss the specific options Avalon is considering, they could pursue an appeal of the decision to Superior Court or seek a sewer tie-in with another municipality, like Hull.

"Connecting to the town sewer is the preferred option over an on-site treatment," said Dale. However, he names one of the main reasons Avalon pursued a town sewer connection was in response to the resistance the Water Commission has given to the on-site wastewater treatment.

The Water Commission has fought the Avalon development on the grounds it will contribute to groundwater pollutants and adversely impact water quality in Lily Pond several times. The commission appealed Avalon's comprehensive permit and were defeated. In the early spring, the commission requested a DEP audit of the site out of its long concern hazardous contamination remained on the site from prior owners. Avalon was subsequently issued a notice of non-compliance from DEP; Avalon's response to their concerns is forthcoming. Most recently, the Water Commission appealed the DEP on-site groundwater discharge permit last month.

"We're thrilled with the outcome," said Chairman of the Sewer Commission Sean Cunning, "we were stood our ground" in not allowing Avalon to tie-in to the system. Cunning said eight other developments, including Cedarmere, have gone down the same road in appealing the Sewer Commission's position there was no capacity. In each case, the Sewer Commission decision was upheld and the developments were not allowed to tie-in.

The Second Amended Judgment is part of the reason large developments can't tie into the system because the town has a responsibility to connect the Little Harbor homes first, Cunning said.

During the comprehensive permit hearings, an on-site wastewater treatment was proposed and approved by the Zoning Board of Appeals almost four years ago. In January 2004, the developer requested a change in the permit to allow the development to connect to the municipal sewer. Initially, the ZBA regarded the change as insubstantial and granted it, conditioning the connection on whether there was capacity in the system.

Avalon pushed forward in late 2004 and requested a definitive determination if there was capacity. After hearing testimony from the Sewer Commission, the ZBA denied Avalon's request for tie-in to town sewer. In March 2005, Avalon filed their appeal to the Housing Appeals Committee.

The Avalon project was issued a comprehensive permit from the ZBA for 200 apartments as a 40-B project. Under Chapter 40B, a state law, a town's zoning board can approve affordable housing developments under flexible rules if at least 20-25 percent of the units have long-term affordability restrictions. Towns that are under the 10 percent threshold of their housing stock deemed as affordable by state standards are vulnerable to 40-B projects.

Cohasset currently has 76 units (or 2.8 percent) of affordable housing. The state encourages rental housing, and because all 200 Avalon units would be rentals, all units — affordable and market rate — would be counted toward the town's affordable housing inventory.

Sewer poses problem for village development

Central Sewer District maxed out

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

The proposed Village zoning bylaws, months in the making, are bound to generate ample discussion at the fall Special Town Meeting. The bylaws rid the town books of antiquated regulations that have stymied development and promote what the Planning Board and its consultant see as the right kind of development for the village. But, expansions, entirely new buildings, more apartments and stores may have to wait, according to Sewer Commission Chairman Sean Cunning.

At last Thursday's meeting (Sept. 20) on the zoning bylaws, Cunning reported the Central Sewer District has reached its capacity and new connections to town sewer may not be possible until 2012. The last dozen available connections were recently given to two village parcels, the Samuel Bates House (35-39 S. Main St.) and the Cohasset Hardware building (40 S. Main St.), Cunning said. There is now a waiting list for sewer connections in the Central District.

"We're shut down right now," said Cunning. Additional sewer tie-ins will have to wait until all 485 Little Harbor homes are connected to the expanded sewer plant. The project is expected to be complete in 2009/2010. The system would then be re-evaluated and a determination made if the plant could handle additional capacity. The associated sewer plant upgrade and expansion will increase the capacity from its current 300,000 gallons per day to 450,000 gallons per day.

Planning Board member Mike Westcott said this has been a fear of planning board chairman Al Moore since the process with the village consulting project began in the spring. In a phone interview, Westcott said it would most affect significant new development and the process to complete a major project could take up to five years anyway. Smaller developments in existing buildings may already have the capacity they need to build, or connections could free up.

Westcott stressed the bylaw will outlast the sewer connection issues and, if passed at Town Meeting, will have a long-lasting impact on the village and the town. Voters will have the final say on the bylaws at Special Town Meeting on November 13. The bylaws will need a two-thirds majority vote to pass.

"It's critical to get these bylaws passed because we still want to encourage the right kind of development in the village. We think these bylaws accomplish that," said Westcott, "the village bylaw is designed for the long term, it's not about next year or five years from now."

Westcott called the village bylaws the most thoroughly vetted bylaws in history of the town. An open and transparent process, involving a professional consultant, Concord Square Development Company, who brought bi-weekly reports during Planning Board meetings and hosted several separate meetings and workshops.

The hard to come by sewer connections are accompanied by strict rules established by the Sewer Commission, said Cunning in a phone interview. Connections are measured in equivalent dwelling units, or EDUs. When a connection is granted, the property owner had six months to pay for the connection in full. The cost can run from about $8,300 for houses or businesses with increased capacity needs (such as adding apartments) to $15,000 for new construction. At the end of six months, if the connection is not paid for in full, the property owner may file for an few months extension or the connection can be put back into the town's inventory, Cunning said.

The Sewer Commission is actively looking to purchase back un-used sewer connections throughout the central sewer district.

Alternative Energy wind turbine bylaw withdraw

The Alternative Energy Committee proposed a wind turbine bylaw for inclusion on the fall special Town Meeting warrant. However, the Board of Selectmen and the Planning Board have determined the bylaw is not ready for the fall.

At a recent Selectmen's meeting (Sept. 10) Selectman Ralph Dormitzer said he had some concerns about the bylaw as it was written. He cited the noise limitations and height restrictions as two key issues.

"I'm not sure the town is ready for this, a turbine can go up in any residential district," said Dormitzer. A concern for the Alternative Energy Committee and the Selectmen is who would be the permitting authority under the bylaw. Both the Zoning Board of Appeals and the Planning Board have expressed interest in being the authority. Most other towns have named the Planning Board as the permitting authority, said Alternative Energy Committee member and the point man for the wind bylaw, Mike Bliss.

Bliss said he was willing to work with the Selectmen on the bylaw.

"The more input I get the better. The better the bylaw is the better chance it has to pass [at Town Meeting]," said Bliss. The Board of Selectmen referred the bylaw back to the Planning Board for the spring Town Meeting.

At last Wednesday's meeting (Sept. 19), the Planning Board voted 3-0 (members Mike Westcott and Bob Sturdy were not present) to withdraw the wind bylaw from consideration at the fall Town Meeting.

WRAPPING UP

Things are wrapping up today for the PSO's Fall Giftwrap Fundraiser, but it's not too late to add in your order. The order forms and online orders were due today, but if you act quickly, you can still get your order in. The PSO is extremely grateful to all who have participated by selling and buying the wonderful gift wrap and wrapping items, the magazine subscriptions, holiday gifts, presents, nick knacks, organizational tools and delicious Helen Grace Chocolates. The PSO is still processing orders and won't know if it made its goal of $32,000 in sales and $16,000 in profit until all orders are in and processed.

Remember, the PSO has great plans for using this money at the schools, so please complete your online order today or send in your form right away. Products ordered online are shipped to you free with an order of $75 and orders placed with students at the Osgood and Deer Hill schools now, will be ready for pickup at the schools in a month, plenty of time before the holidays. The PSO says "thank you again to all for helping to make this fundraiser a success!" If you have any questions or would like to place a last minute order, please call Carolyn Coffey at 781-383-8182 or Mary Jo Blackington at 781-383-0626.

A Message From Dr. Koury!

While modern dental technologies have enhanced the quality of dental outcomes, the effective dentist must know how to solve his or her patient's problems.

That is why when people call our office and say, "I just want a cleaning," we tell them our goal is to see the whole person just as their physician would and we'd like them to come into the office with that understanding.

Esthetic requirements, such as those that were met for the person in the before and after photos, can only be met when there is harmony of form and function and all relationships are stable. This is because the appearance of the smile is dependent on the same harmony of form that is necessary for harmony of function.

I hope my patients like my office for the same reason I like my local bank. When I go to my local bank I am not just a number; the people there know me and are interested in me.

ENGAGEMENTS

Whitehouse - Parker

Kathryn Lynn Whitehouse and Steven Michael Parker

Raymond and Gail Whitehouse of Cohasset announce the engagement of their daughter, Kathryn Lynn Whitehouse, to Steven Michael Parker, son of Steven Parker of Auburn, Ohio, and the late Joyce Parker.

The bride-to-be is a graduate of Cohasset High School and Bryant University. She recently received her master's degree in business administration from Bentley College and is employed as a senior human resources representative at General Dynamics in Taunton.

Her fiancé graduated from Kenston High School and Bowling Green State University in Ohio. He received his master's degree in business administration from the University of Phoenix and is employed as a supplier manager at General Dynamics in Taunton.

A July 2008 wedding is planned in Plymouth.

Bill Brett is special guest

Don't miss Bill Brett on Oct. 3

Bill Brett, a long-time resident of Hingham, will narrate a video presentation with highlights from his new book starting at 6:30 p.m., Wednesday, Oct. 3, at the Hingham Public Library, 66 Leavitt St.. Coffee and dessert will be served and the author's talk will begin at 7 p.m.

For more than 25 years, Brett's credit line appeared many hundreds of times in the pages of The Boston Globe. In 2001, he published an impressive coffee-table book, "Boston: All One Family," a photo gallery of the city's politicians, power brokers, and newsmakers. Now he has followed up with "Boston: An Extended Family," a compilation of 240 photographs that include not only the city's social and political elite, but also less well-known citizens whose words, character, or actions have contributed to making the city a special place.

Brett's first job as a boy was hawking The Globe on street corners around Dorchester. He was hired by the newspaper as a part-time photographer at the age of 18; in 1977 he became chief photographer and in 1999, director of photography. During decades of work at the newspaper, Brett had access to virtually all the city's movers and shakers, and many of them – from Tom Menino to Tom Brady – make an appearance in "Boston: An Extended Family."

Buttonwood Books of Cohasset will have copies of his latest book on hand for purchase and autographing.

'Walking' takes author home

By Ryan Bray
RBRAY@CNC.COM

Philip Fortnam has recently released his first book, "Walking Greenbush."

PHOTOS COURTESY PHILIP FORTNAM

The NH (New Haven Railroad) signpost, Philip Fortnam took in 1995. It was a signpost at the very end of the former Braintree railroad yard right before the tracks go under Rte. 128. On the other side of the 128 overpass is where the tracks split; one set of tracks goes to Boston and the other set of tracks is where Greenbush begins. It signifies the beginning of the Greenbush Branch.

For years, people have been hearing about the Greenbush commuter rail line in the newspapers, on the streets and on television.

Now they can find out about it on the bookshelves as well.

In a true example of art imitating life, Philip Fortnam recently released his first book, "Walking Greenbush," a fictional account of one man's rediscovery of his roots in a journey alongside the path of the much-discussed and highly anticipated Greenbush railroad line. The book, which Fortnam self-published, is available online at walkinggreenbush.com and amazon.com.

Fortnam, a Weymouth native currently settled with his wife and children in Phoenix, culled his story in part from his own experiences with the Greenbush restoration, but he said the book is hardly a by-the-numbers account of the line's history on the South Shore.

"It's not an autobiography of my life by any means, but there are elements of my life in it," he said. "As a kid, I would always ride my bike down there by the train, so I have that connection. But it's really not about Greenbush. I just used it as a springboard to move the story forward."

"As a kid, I would always ride my bike down there by the train, so I have that connection."
Philip Fortnam

"Walking Greenbush" follows one man's disconnected history with his hometown of Weymouth and how the Greenbush restoration draws him back to the town he left years ago. While at home, he's confronted with memories both good and bad of his childhood years spent on the South Shore as he attempts to reconcile with his own past.

"He hated the area," Fortnam said of his protagonist. "He fled the South Shore years ago, but at some point the emergence if the train convinces him to come home after a long absence."

Fortnam, a photographer and chief petty officer in the Navy, said the book started out not as a novel, but rather as a collection of short stories written in 1999.

"They all had a South Shore angle, so after some convincing from friends I decided to string them all together," he said.

During trips back home to visit his family, Fortnam said he became more and more interested in the Greenbush line, following along with its developments in past years in local newspapers and other media. What emerged was a tale with very timely connections to Scituate, Hingham, Cohasset and his hometown of Weymouth, as the Greenbush line running through the four towns is slated for an Oct. 31st start date.

The orange engine in the distance, taken 1995. The engine belonged to the Quincy Bay Terminal Company. It was photographed near where the Fore River line branches off Greenbush in Braintree. Both of these photos were taken during one of Fortnam's numerous Greenbush walks

"I was curious," he said. "I started reading about what was happening with the train, and I thought it would serve as just the perfect vehicle for the characters."

With his first book finished, Fortnam said he's already thinking ahead toward writing a second novel about an underwater ghost town in Arizona. He's also thinking of arranging book signings on the South Shore, shopping around for an agent and pursuing a second master's degree in creative writing — anything, he said, that will keep him moving toward his long-standing dream of sustaining a career as an author.

"I've always wanted to be an author, even as a kid," he said. "I remember even from a young age being interested in books and writing, so this is really a life's dream come true."

Fortnam said the release of "Walking Greenbush" might also bring him back closer to his ultimate source of inspiration. He said after his daughter graduates high school, he hopes to relocate back to the South Shore, preferably Scituate. And while there, maybe he'll ride the rails for himself.

"I'd love to live in Scituate and ride the train," he said. "I've walked along the line and visited it as a kid, so I'm looking forward to getting on board."

From the Archives of the Cohasset Historical Society

From the Archives is a weekly feature provided by Cohasset Historical Society.

The Beechwood baseball team, made up of residents of the Beechwood section of Cohasset, excelled in games along the South Shore, besting teams such as the Cohasset team, which was made up of summer residents. While many of the names are familiar, we cannot date the photo. If any one can help the Historical Society with a date or has any artifact that they can add to their collection about the Beechwood baseball team or the ballpark, contact them at 781-383-1434.

The Beechwood Ballpark reopens Saturday, Sept. 29, after several months of restoration, thanks to funding from the Community Preservation Fund, local organizations, and neighbors. With festivities starting at 8:30 a.m., including a home run derby, basketball shooting contest, and an old timers game, it is sure to be an event not to be missed.

Call 781-383-1434 for more information about the Cohasset Historical Society.

Wellspring to sponsor walking club

Wellspring Multi-Service Center is hosting a walking club, led by fitness enthusiast and walking coach Lori Tobin of SporTobin, Hull. Members of the community are invited to meet in the bookstore at Wellspring, 814 Nantasket Ave., Hull, on Wednesday mornings at 9, beginning Oct. 3. The cooler weather is a perfect time to start a regular exercise plan. Tobin promises that participants will be gently encouraged to add a walking routine to their daily schedule and plans to include tips on walking, fitness and a post-exercise stretching session. This program is offered free of charge and everyone is invited to be part of Hull's own Wellspring Walking Club.

For more information about the WWC and other Wellspring programs, call 781-925-3211 or visit wellspringhull.org.

Wellspring is a private, non-profit, multi-service organization in Hull. Wellspring's mission is to provide support and skills to people facing challenges to their financial, physical or emotional well being in order to help them achieve independence and self-sufficiency. It is the aim of all Wellspring programs to reach beyond providing emergency services to help people to become more independent and productive members of the community.

30 People

30 People Who Have Difficulty Hearing, Especially In Noisy Situations, To Evaluate New and Exciting Open Ear Digital Technology, Risk Free!

Mass Audiology will have State licensed hearing instrument specialists available to perform comprehensive hearing evaluations at no charge for the first 30 qualified callers to determine if you are a candidate for this new ultra-modern, open-ear hearing solution. Applicants selected will be asked to give their opinion on this remarkable new hearing aid in 2 weeks. This state-of-the-art instrument solves a really big problem by amplifying high frequencies without plugging up the ear canal as in traditional hearing aids and is virtually invisible when worn. This device will be fit and digitally programmed on the spot in one of our offices.

Participants who wish to keep their instruments can do so at a tremendous savings, due to their participation.
However, if you feel the hearing aids do not improve your hearing, simply return them.
The 30 participants also receive free batteries for the evaluation period.
A very small, fully refundable security deposit will be required.

Candidates will be selected by September 30, 2007.
Those interested need to call today.

Tuskegee Airmen to visit First Parish

Tuskegee Airman, and Cohasset resident, Jack Bryant, will moderate the evening's discussion.

Members of the renowned Tuskegee Airmen will host a talk and video presentation, "Red Tails: The Saga of the Tuskegee Airmen" at 7 p.m., Friday, Oct. 5, in the Parish House of First Parish Unitarian Universalist Church at 23 North Main St. in Cohasset.

Tuskegee Airman, and Cohasset resident, Jack Bryant, will moderate the evening's discussion. The entire community is invited and encouraged to learn how these brave, young American men broke the color barrier of the Army Air Corps some 65 years ago. These people are genuine American heroes, and surviving airmen and widows were honored last March with the Congressional Gold Medal. This should prove popular with young and old, since Jack will be accompanied by two Tuskegee colleagues, a bomber crew member, and a video narrated by Oliver North. This event becomes particularly relevant, given Ken Burns' series "The War," currently running on PBS.

The cover charge of $10 per person and $20 per family includes a lasagna meal. Proceeds will support the Tuskegee Airmen's Scholarship Fund, which awards many thousands of dollars annually to young people across the country. All presenters and officers of this organization serve without salary or fee.

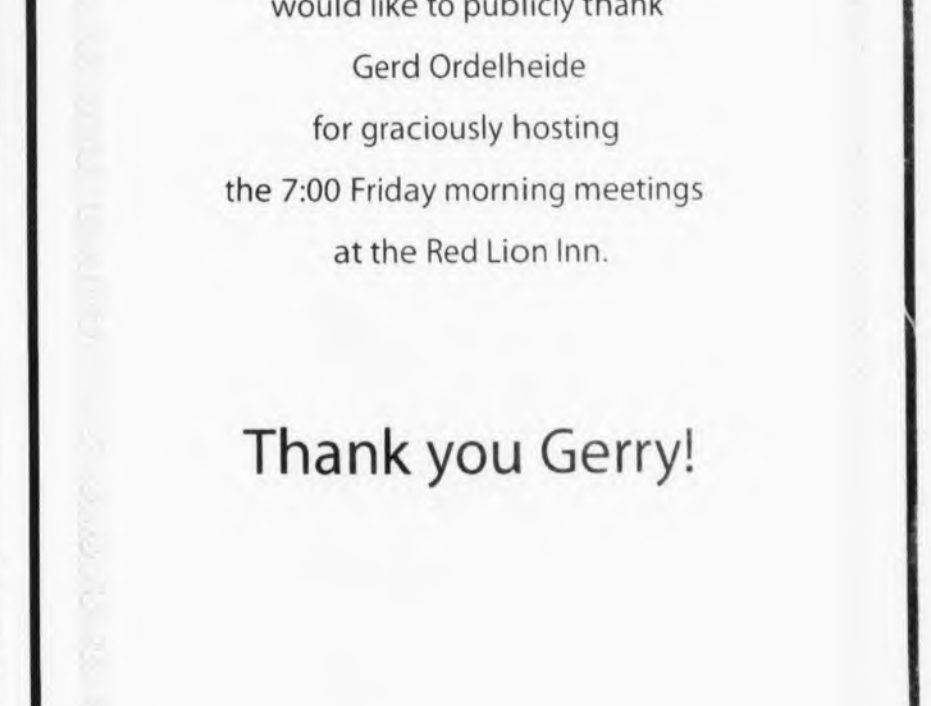
Book in advance as this event is expected to sell out. For tickets and more information, call Sandy Bailey, Parish Administrator, at 781-383-1100, or Woody Chittick at 781-383-3215.

Cohasset Cabaret ticket sales start Sunday!

The Cohasset Cabaret will make its debut Friday, Nov. 2, and Saturday, Nov. 3, at St. Anthony's Parish Hall, 129 South Main St. Each evening will begin with a social hour from 7 to 8 p.m., featuring a raffle table with items from local artists and merchants, followed by the cabaret.

Talented cast members from the South Shore area will perform songs from artists such as Sonny and Cher, Frank Sinatra, and the Dream Girls, as well as numbers from productions including "Fiddler on the Roof," and "Chicago." Don't miss the opportunity to see the talented local cast, which will feature Cohasset's own Lily Sestito, John Campbell and daughter Catie Campbell Laitinen, and Barbara Baumgarten and daughter Ellie.

Members of the audience may bring their own snacks to enjoy or purchase a snack box for $10. A cash bar will serve wine, beer, and soft drinks. Proceeds benefit the Friends of Cohasset Elder Affairs.



Tickets cost $25 each and will be available from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m., each Sunday beginning Sept. 30, at St. Anthony's Parish Hall.

For more information, call 781-383-0752.

Puppetation art series starts Oct. 6

Puppetation is a new mixed media art series for youngsters in grades 1 through 3, held from 9:30 to 11 a.m., Saturdays, Oct. 6 through Nov. 3. Students will learn to design and construct a series of puppets: stick, felt finger and glove characters, as well as paint a backdrop. The skills taught will include drawing, clay sculpting, hand sewing and painting. Class size is limited. To reserve a space for your child call the Blue Barn Studio at 781-383-9883.

Wake-up call

It may not be fair but it is usually the case: teenagers are identified by the high school they attend.

If a group of students from B.C. High or Archbishop Williams H.S., for example, are caught in an illegal activity – the headline usually reads BC High (or Archies) students…followed by the verb.

On the flip side, if teenagers score well on their SATs, are National Merit Scholars, or ace an AP exam – they are also "labeled" in a positive fashion as being from their particular high school.

From what we have been able to gather in our newsroom, a group of Cohasset High students, which one parent has dubbed as a "posse", went after a fellow student last Friday around 5 p.m. outside of school grounds.

The incident reportedly took root earlier that day at school when a sophomore tried to put a stop to being bullied by other students who were throwing things at him.

The sophomore, who stood up for himself, ended up being attacked later by one of the alleged bullies as a group of the alleged attacker's friends stood around and watched. One member of the group apparently recorded the incident on his cell phone.

The entire incident is now a police matter. The young man who launched the attack is facing charges of assault and battery and assault and battery with a dangerous weapon (his foot). The boy being charged allegedly proceeded to kick the other boy once he had allegedly thrown him to the ground.

Other boys could also be charged.

Many parents are expressing shock and outrage over the incident. In Cohasset — where teens can often be seen playing a game of pickup football on the common, or skateboarding or walking the village with their friends — one does not expect acts of violence. The apparent premeditation of this incident makes it all the worse.

Often our first reaction is to blame the school. Yet "back in the day" schools were institutions of academic learning and values were primarily the responsibility of the family.

Today schools everywhere have an uphill battle. They have become a catchall and are expected to handle all of society's problems.

Billions of dollars are spent on making alcohol consumption and, yes, cigarettes – attractive. So why are we surprised when our teenagers drink and smoke?

The movie, television and video game industry are literally drowning us in the most graphically violent content imaginable. This type of content was unheard of when most of us were growing up. So why are we surprised when our kids act out in an aggressive manner?

We do not know anything about the boys who participated in Friday's attack on a fellow student.

But reportedly they are CHS students, who have marred their school and their community by their behavior.

The African proverb may be over used but it is apropos here: "It takes a whole village to raise a child."

We all need to reflect on this incident and think about what we can do to ensure that our children do not become victims or perpetrators of violence.

It is going to be an uphill battle for all of us.

Taking a good look at our children

COMMENTARY

CHRIS BLACKBURN

As beautiful and idyllic as Cohasset is, there are issues under the surface that are not being addressed.

Last Friday evening an event occurred in town that has me very concerned, and as a parent of four children in Cohasset I feel compelled to write my first letter to the Mariner. As I understand it, a local child was seriously beaten by other children from town, and the injuries suffered were not minor. As the details of this event unfold to all of us in newspaper articles, breakfast conversations, and the unavoidable rumor mill in a town as small as ours, I sincerely hope that the four points below get addressed:

• The child (or children) involved needs to be dealt with to the proper extent that the law allows. It has to be shown to all of the children (and parents) in our community that this behavior is not acceptable and that there are consequences for your actions. We also need to help the rest of the kids in town feel that they are safe on the "streets" of Cohasset. Responding appropriately to this incident will accomplish both of these goals. Sweeping this under the rug will only show that this kind of horrible behavior is acceptable at some level, and our kids will pick up on that immediately.

• Our community needs to develop a program to help both the children and their parents understand the issues that we face even in our small corner of the world. As beautiful and idyllic as Cohasset is, there are issues under the surface that are not being addressed. This isn't the first time someone was singled out and targeted for being different. Unless we take a serious look at the underlying cause of why this incident happened, it certainly won't be the last.

• The parents of the children involved need to take responsibility for the actions of their kids, and show contrition to the community. It is the role of the parents, not the schools, the internet, TV, or the various other cultural influences surrounding today's kids, to teach the difference between right and wrong. Tolerance is not a genetic trait — it is a learned behavior. To deny that the children involved in the incident did anything seriously wrong, or attempt to bury the issue in a legal maneuverings will not serve the kids who committed these acts in any meaningful way. Stand next to them, put your arm around them, and assure them that you will be there for them through the entire process, but do not tell them that it is anyone's fault but yours and their own.

• All parents need to take a good look at our children, and our own households, and make sure that we are doing everything possible to teach our kids that this kind of behavior is not going to be tolerated. In a community as small and homogenous as Cohasset we should be celebrating any differences we can find in each other. As the most influential people in the lives of our kids it is our responsibility to help them grow into well-balanced productive members of the community. Only by showing them how to appreciate everything that makes us different will that be possible.

My wife and I have lived in this town for more than13 years, and my children were all born here. This is the world that they know. No matter where they go in life, Cohasset will always be part of their soul. I just hope the memories that they take with them from here when they leave will be positive. These issues need to be addressed for them, not for me.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Agrees with editorial on litter

TO THE EDITOR:

Just a quick note to applaud you for your recent editorial on civic pride in last Friday's Mariner. As I live close to the village, I too enjoy a cup of coffee at French Memories, and love to sit in the adjacent pocket park. Your article highlighted an issue that has been going on for quite some time…litter in the park from careless patrons, and a general disregard for our common areas. I have spent many days cleaning out the park by myself, and also with my daughter Gabrielle. Additionally, I have gone so far as to ask teenagers in the park to please clean up their mess, and to pass the word around to their peers. Cohasset has such unbelievable natural beauty, and it's a shame that regular littering has become such an issue. I hope your article encourages everyone in town to speak up when they see litter offenders.

One final thing, I have also noticed that there is a cement planter in front of the park, which has been empty for quite some time, and is filled with weeds, cigarette butts, and trash. I have made several inquiries around town about the proper protocol for planting flowers there, but have not received a definitive answer. I would be more than happy to plant something there myself, but I don't want to step on anyone's toes. Any help or guidance would be great, as I am sure there are others in town who have identified additional areas that could use some help.

Thanks again for your terrific editorial.

Going green at Beechwood Ballpark

TO THE EDITOR:

I would like to take a few moments to underscore the well-deserved praise in last week's Mariner for the Beechwood Ballpark Committee for its dedication and community spirit. In particular, my heartfelt thanks to Merle Brown and Glenn Pratt, who have carried the effort from concept to triumphant completion, taking a neglected and dilapidated playground and transforming it into a jewel of community and neighborhood pride. But the decision to use organic environmentally benign turf management to cultivate the living playing surfaces was particularly bold, unconventional, insightful and far-reaching.

Commercial fertilizers and pesticides comprise a significant insidious portion of the organic pollutants entering our streams and harbors with uncontrolled storm water runoff. When I first approached Merle and Glenn to consider environmental 'green' techniques in building the ball field their answer was an immediate and unequivocal yes. Glenn and other members of the Water Commission further buttressed this decision with a commitment to wholly fund the extra initial cost of turf and organic techniques to make this process a reality. (Note: organic management requires greater investment up front paying dividends in lower maintenance costs over time.) Glenn helped orchestrate meetings between town personnel and contractors responsible for the field maintenance with Osborne Organics of Marblehead, a nationally recognized leader in organic turf management. As a result, the key town personnel became familiar with and trained in the methods, treatments and schedules needed to successfully establish an organic turf playing field.

The Water Resources Protection Committee has been working with the Water Commission over the past four years to help illustrate ways townspeople can use organic treatments to minimize the use of chemical fertilizers, pesticides and herbicides. We have seen gradual success, but the Beechwood Ballpark is a demonstration project at a new order of magnitude. The WRPC applauds the leadership and foresight of the Beechwood Park Committee. And I personally thank both Glenn and Merle for their commitment to Cohasset and the future.

'We have become bullies of our landscape'

TOWARD A SUSTAINABLE COHASSET

JOANN MIRISE

But given the reality that we have created for ourselves, at least for now, our main goal should be to stop any further damage and live within a footprint that this world can support.

One morning not too long ago I awoke to the sound of blasting. Nearby, a beautiful, rugged section of granite ledge was being demolished. The rumble shook the ground underneath the foundation of our home and I could feel the vibration in my chest as I lay in bed. My heart felt heavy. I have come to associate Cohasset and this part of the Atlantic coast with bold and unique ledge. Now a piece of it was gone forever. I pulled the covers over my head.

The Huichol Indians, a tribe in central Mexico near the Sierra Madre Mountains, have the saying "The earth is our flesh; the rocks, our bones." On this sunny, summer morning I was hearing Mother Earth's bones breaking and I felt the pain. What was the purpose of this destruction? A room with a view? A pool? Or simply an itch to make a change?

There are times when major interventions to our land are arguably warranted as in the case of building bridges or mountain passages that connect communities and resources. But all too often our justifications for large-scale, permanent damage to our environment are for personal gain, comfort or for no other reason than because we can. Dominating nature has become our nature. We have become bullies of our landscape.

I was offered a different perspective early in my life. I grew up not far from the woods where Frank Lloyd Wright's Fallingwater was built. I was just a kid when I first visited this extraordinary work of architecture, harmoniously tucked within the thickets of vegetation, rolling rocks and a waterfall. My sensibility of how we, as humans, inhabit the earth was shaped by this man's conviction that home and nature are one.

Frank Lloyd Wright based his work on the principles of organic architecture, a term he coined. Its main tenet involves a respect for the nature of the site and the materials used in building. The structure should blend with its surroundings. In other words, a house should be of the hill, not on the hill. And, harkening back to the blasting in Cohasset, certainly not instead of the hill. At Fallingwater, boulders protrude through the foundation to become flooring, rocks from the site were used to build various elements of the home and access to the outdoors is available from every room. Although this particular building has its critics and proven flaws, its intent of promoting harmony between human habitation and the natural world was the overarching theme that set an example for the design world.

Honoring the human/nature connection can be seen in many

'Hi-rail' vehicle provides different view of tracks

MAKING TRACKS

TOM GRUBER & MARK BRENNAN

Hi-Rail Ride – On Thursday, Sept. 20th, your correspondents had a chance to actually ride on the rail system from North Scituate to the Cohasset Station and back. This ride was a part of Cohasset's Mitigation Agreement with the MBTA which states,

"Prior to the start of service on the Greenbush line, the MBTA agrees to review on-site by hi-rail vehicle the actual fencing locations for deficiencies with appropriate Town officials prior to the start of service and any deficiency so identified shall be corrected prior to such start."

We did find several areas that were not fenced and should have been fenced. One such area was adjacent to the Highland Estates development just north of Beechwood Street, where houses are currently under construction along the railroad. Two other areas that should have received fencing are between Sestito and Castle lanes, and the fencing along of Rocky Lane, which was not continued far enough to the south. (The MBTA's original commitment was to fence all inhabited areas.) New developments since the initial survey have changed added new inhabited areas. Also, some areas that were wet and deemed inaccessible when the MBTA initially examined the right of way, are now dry as a bone and easily crossed by children. And, we think that the safety fence locations should be based on worst case situations for access, not best case.

The high-rail vehicle is actually a Chevy Suburban fitted with railroad wheels that guide the truck and keep it on the tracks. The ride was actually very interesting because viewing the Greenbush from the tracks gives the rider a whole new look at the right of way. When we arrived at North Scituate for the ride, the high-rail vehicle was already on the tracks, pointed toward Cohasset. After traveling through Cohasset, to the Cohasset Station, we disembarked while the high-rail vehicle was turned around. This maneuver was interesting. The driver pulled over the railroad crossing at the station, lifted the rail guide wheels, and drove the vehicle on its regular tires to turn it around. When it was re-pointed toward Scituate, the guide wheels were lowered and we were off.

While on the ride we learned a few other interesting things that we'd like to pass along. If you have spent any time walking near the tracks you may have noticed some signs that don't seem to make much sense. The reason is that they are in "railroadese." The first sign is white sign with two numbers, one over the other. This is a mileage sign. It is the equivalent of the mileage signs that you see along the side of the highway. In this case the sign represents the distance to Boston in miles and decimal fractions of a mile. The photo of a sign opposite the Town Parking Lot shows 21.730 miles to Boston.

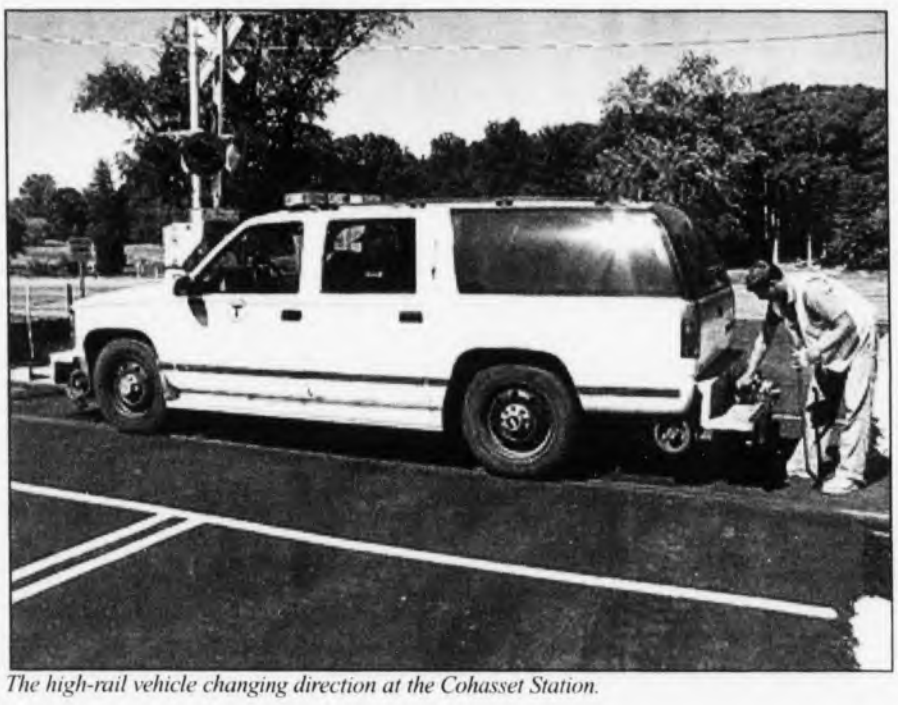
Another very unique sign is a yellow slash sign set about 45 degrees from vertical. This sign is posted at either side of a crossing. This sign is a warning for a snowplow operator to lift his plow because a crossing is just ahead. When there is a very heavy snow (over 10 to 12 inches of snow), the MBTA plows to clear the tracks for the train. Due to the way a crossing is constructed, at the crossing area the plow operator must lift his plow so as not to damage the crossing.

Greenbush opening – We have heard a bit more from the MBTA about the Grand Opening dates. The "First Run" train loaded with VIPs will arrive at Cohasset Station, mid-morning, on Tuesday, Oct. 30th, where a very brief ribbon cutting will take place to officially open our station. A very limited number of VIPs from Cohasset will be invited to join this train for the big celebration at the Greenbush Station. Another train will follow the VIP train for anyone who wishes to board for a trip to Greenbush and the full Greenbush opening celebration. (No fare required & no parking fees!) At the end of the ceremonies, both trains will reverse direction and bring everyone back to our station.

Scheduled service will begin the next day, Oct. 31st. Need we remind you that this is also Halloween "Trick or Treat" night? Please remind all your children, that the trains will be operating after dark and extreme caution should be taken.

We also understand that there will be a first, first ride called "First Ride GREENBUSH" on Saturday, Oct. 27th,, a fund raiser sponsored by the Scituate Library Foundation in partnership with the Cohasset Historical Society (CHS). The train for First Ride GREENBUSH will leave the Greenbush Station in Scituate at 11 a.m. for Boston, South Station. In Boston there will be a two-hour layover and the train will return to Greenbush at approximately 3:30 p.m.. Tickets are $50 for CHS members and $75 for non members. Tickets and detailed information are available from the Cohasset Historical Society at 781-383-1434.

Forest Avenue marches on — As you can tell, the work on Forest Avenue continues at a rapid pace. But, we'd like to caution everyone who drives Forest Avenue while it is under construction that it is a hazardous road. All of the manhole and drain structures normally flush with the road surface are raised (or will shortly be raised) in preparation for final paving. (They must be raised to the height of the finished pavement, so the road will be smooth.) If extreme care in not taken to avoid these severe bumps in and along side the roadway many tires and wheels will be damaged. Unfortunately, our only other option is to close the road. Clearly, closing Forest Avenue is not very desirable. So, please drive slowly and be very careful where you drive.



At present, paving is scheduled for Thursday/Friday of this current week, but that is subject to the vagaries of the weather and construction business. If we aren't able to finish on Friday, paving will extend to next week.

Lessons learned on playing field

THE FAR SIDE OF PERFECT

DIANE K. DANIELSON

Each spring and fall, I eagerly await the start of soccer season. Even though I've finally hung up my cleats, it's just as fun to be a soccer mom (and sometimes coach). Now, I had the good fortune to ride the Title IX wave and have sporting opportunities that were unavailable to many of my peers. This meant that as I hit the workforce, I was able to bring many of the lessons I learned along the way into the office with me. So, for those of you who didn't have that opportunity (or who want to have a few good reasons as to why your kid should try a sport), here are a few business lessons I learned with my cleats on.

The importance of being a team player.

On the field, everyone has an assigned position, which you play to the best of your ability in order to help your team win. In a crisis, you may play a different position or cover for a teammate; but that helps you appreciate their role and play your own even better. And yes, there are always standouts on every team. But even a leading scorer needs someone to feed her the ball (standouts who forget this usually remember after the rest of the team stops passing to them). A true superstar on the field or in the office knows that he or she is only as good as the team that surrounds them and their own ability to be a team player.

A personal penalty hurts the whole team.

An indoor soccer player who misbehaves (let's say screaming curse words at an opponent young enough to be her daughter), can be sent to the penalty box for a "time-out" or tossed out of the game completely AND no one fills either vacancy. I admit it. That incident was not one of my finer moments (even if she was deliberately fouling me and taunting us with comments about our "mature age"). But, while I was cooling off in the penalty box, my exhausted teammates had to play part of a championship game down a player. So, much like in the business headlines, one person's behaving badly can hurt the whole team.

Shake hands with the competition.

In soccer, the other team's goals are (literally!) at cross purposes with yours. Yet even after the roughest games, it's customary for opposing teams to shake hands. (In World Cup play they even trade sweaty jerseys … but that may just be a guy thing.) Shaking hands is a universal way to say that the match is now over and it's Miller time for everybody. Similarly, when it comes to run-ins or tough negotiations in the workplace, like an athlete, you need to advocate your points, accept the final outcome, shake hands and leave the competition behind in the boardroom.

Everyone may not like you, but they all can respect you.

I can't make everyone like me no matter how hard I try. But, I can earn everyone's respect by coming prepared, trying my hardest, working with the team, playing by the rules and, most of all, being a good sport. (Note to self: No more cursing like a sailor at the opposition.) Not everyone you work with is going to be your best buddy, but they can all respect your intelligence, contributions, dedication and work ethic.

Just because you lose one game, doesn't mean you quit playing.

Sometimes you lose. And I'm the first to admit, I hate losing. Losing is about as much fun as having your car break down in a rotary during rush hour. You feel frustrated and helpless, and unable to shut out the aholes who seem to think you planned this on purpose just to personally mess up their day. But, you don't quit driving, do you? No. Because we all know that breakdowns, accidents, and flat tires come with the territory. Likewise, for every successful athlete or businessperson, there were hundreds of losses, slumps, setbacks, "crawl in a hole," "just kill me now and put me out of my misery," sort of days along the way. Yet they stayed in the game. Why? Because every once in a while the skills, the practice and the experience all come together and a group of "old ladies" can whoop the pants off a bunch of college students half their age. And there ain't no better feeling than that in the whole wide world!

This column is dedicated to all my soccer mates over the years, and especially Shawn Gager (1970-2007), who took the lessons she learned on the field and in the ice rink with her wherever she went.

LIBRARY CORNER

Check out the new titles

The following events will take place at Paul Pratt Memorial Library at 35 Ripley Road. For more information call 781-383-1348 or visit cohassetlibrary.org.

New Titles – Come in and check out the following new titles: "Playing for Pizza," by John Grisham; "The Choice," by Nicholas Sparks; "Hide and Seek," by Fern Michaels; "The Worst Thing I've Done," by Ursula Hegi; "Bridge of Sighs," by Richard Russo; and "Look Me In The Eye: My Life with Asperger's," by John Robison.

Great Decisions Group – The first Great Decisions Discussion group will begin at 2:30 p.m., Sunday, Sept. 30, in the Meeting Room. For those who have registered for the program, the group will discuss migration, found in chapter four of the assigned text.

Movie Matinee – Can't get out at night to see a movie? Come see a showing of Neil Simon's "Murder By Death," at 11 a.m., Friday, Oct. 5, in the Meeting Room. Free admission and light refreshments, courtesy of the Friends of the Library.

Internet Help – Do you need help finding information on the Internet? Would you like to start receiving emails but don't know how to register? Help is available through the Reference Department. Call Gayle Walsh, Reference Librarian, to set up a one-on-one lesson on how to search the internet or set up an e-mail account.

FOR CHILDREN

Tumble into Reading with TumbleBooks – TumbleBooks are online animated talking books that teach children the joy of reading in a format they'll love. TumbleBooks takes familiar picture books and classic children's literature and adds animation, sound, music and narration. There is an option of reading or being read to. TumbleBooks also offer puzzles, games, language choices and a complete audio library. To access TumbleBooks from home or at the library, go to cohassetlibrary.org and click on the TumbleBooks icon on the homepage.

MamaSteph – Performances will be Mondays, Oct. 1, 15, 22 and 29, from 10:30 to 11 a.m., in the Meeting Room. Come sing and dance. All ages and communities welcome. Funded by the Friends of Cohasset Library.

Drop In Story Time – Join others in the Story Room from 10:30 to 11 a.m., on Tuesdays, Oct. 2, 9, 16, 23 and 30 for Big Book adventures, music and movement. All ages and communities welcome.

Letters About Literature – Letters About Literature is a national reading and writing initiative sponsored by the Massachusetts Center for the Book, with lead support from the Calderwood Writing Initiative at the Boston Athenaeum, with assistance from Houghton Mifflin Co., and the Massachusetts Library Association. To enter the contest you must first select a fiction or nonfiction book, a short story, poem, essay or speech you have read and about which you have strong feelings. Explore those feelings and why you reacted the way you did during or after reading the piece. Second, write a personal letter to the author as if you were having a conversation with them. Next, submit your letter. There are three levels of competition: Level I, grades 4 through 6 – entrants must be at least nine years old; Level II, grades 7 and 8; Level III, grades 9 through 12. For participation guidelines go to www.massbook.org or pick up a flyer in the children's or the young adult room.

Karen Quigley guest on Our Town

Karen Quigley, chairman of the Harbor Health Committee, sits down with co-hosts Mark DeGiacomo and Pat Martin to detail the committee's efforts to determine what has been troubling the harbor and what residents of Cohasset can do to protect this beautiful, natural resource.

Tune in at 9p.m. on Mondays, Tuesdays and Thursdays on Comcast channel 10.

Missed the Cohasset High School football games? Tune in Saturday or Sunday nights beginning 7p.m. to catch the boys in blue on Channel 10.

League observer corps training

Do you want to learn more about the way Cohasset is run? Join the Hingham League of Women Voters (which is open to Cohasset residents) and be a part of the newly activated Observer Corps.

To learn more about the Corps contact Jane Malme at j.jhmalme@verizon.net, or attend a training session Wednesday, Oct. 3 at 7 p.m. at Hingham Town Hall, 220 Central St. Malme and another veteran member, Pat Facey, will conduct the training.

The Observer Corps is an excellent way for new members to learn about local issues and share information with League members through newsletter articles and League meetings.

Observers' reports are factual and non-judgmental, present various sides of an issue and are intended to help members to be well informed before making any decisions concerning possible League or individual action.

Wine and Cheese Social — Hingham League of Women Voters will host a Wine and Cheese Social at 7:30 p.m., on Wednesday, Oct. 10, at the home of Christine Dietterich, 104 Summer St., Hingham.

Come and meet League members and learn about ongoing projects, which include the Observer Corps, the Green Study, and the new Know Your Town guide.

League members involved in the newly activated Observer Corps will be trained in observing town boards and committees. Participation in the Observer Corps is a way to learn about local issues and share this information with other League members.

Members of the three-year-old Green Study will answer questions about energy efficiency, sustainable design, conservation and renewable energy, and why they are important to new municipal construction, i.e., new schools.

Welcome Home bonus payments available to veterans

Senate Minority Whip Robert L. Hedlund and Cohasset Veterans Services Agent Robert Jackson would like to remind local veterans who were called to active duty after Sept. 11, 2001, that they may be eligible for a cash bonus through the state-funded Welcome Home program.

Established by the Legislature in 2005, the Welcome Home program provides a one-time $1,000 bonus to Massachusetts's soldiers for active service in Iraq or Afghanistan and a $500 bonus to those who served at least six months of active duty at home or abroad since Sept. 11, 2001. Active service does not include active duty for training in the Army National Guard, Air National Guard, Naval Academy or reservist training.

The bonus is available to service members who were residents of the Commonwealth for at least six months prior to entry into the armed forces, and were discharged under honorable conditions. Fewer than half of the 28,000 qualifying Massachusetts's veterans have filed the necessary paperwork to receive their bonus payment.

"We want our servicemen and women to know this benefit is available to them, and we encourage them to apply," said Hedlund. "The bonus payment represents just a small token of the Commonwealth's appreciation for those who have proudly served our country to protect the many freedoms and liberties we enjoy as Americans."

According to Jackson, a limited number of application forms are available in the Veterans Services office. Application forms are also available online at mass.gov/treasure/veteransbonus/welcomehomebonus.

All applications must be accompanied by a certification of residence issued by the Town Clerk or Election Commissioner; a copy of the service members' discharge papers; and a signed and dated W9 form.

For more information, call the State Treasurer's office at 617-367-9333, ext. 350 or 505.

Two Citizens' Petitions for Town Meeting

The warrant for the fall Special Town Meeting closed last Friday, Sept. 21 and two Citizens' Petitions were submitted by the deadlines, said Town Manager Bill Griffin. Town Meeting will likely discuss a total of 10 articles, or items of business on Nov. 13.

The first petitioned article requests zoning bylaw amendments to the Waterfront Business District. The two-page document has similar elements to the proposed Village Business District zoning bylaw, including a defined floor area ratio and exemption from the inclusionary bylaw.

The second article requests a sidewalk be built from lower King St. to the Rose Hill development off Route 3A.

Readers Advisory Network

The Cohasset Mariner is building a Readers Advisory Network of e-mail addresses so we can more frequently involve our readers in the content of the newspaper. Readers, who join the network, may be asked for reactions to stories, ideas for stories or follow-ups, for a digital "person on the street" interview, or for a community commentary.

If you are interested in becoming a member of the network, email Mary Ford at mford@cnc.com. She will answer any questions that you may have. The Mariner promises to remove you immediately from the Readers Advisory Network if you request that we do.

THE HOUSE AND SENATE. Beacon Hill Roll Call records local representatives and local senators' votes on five roll calls from the week of September 17-21.

Four of the roll calls are on successful moves by Democrats to override some $37 million of Gov. Deval Patrick's vetoes of items in the $26.8 billion fiscal 2008 budget recently signed into law. The House and Senate successfully overrode all 28 vetoes that were brought to the floor. Only five of the Legislature's 173 Democrats sided with the Democratic governor on any of the vetoes. The Democrat who voted the most times with Patrick was Rep. Harriette Stanley (D-West Newbury) who supported him five times. Rep. Frank Hynes (D-Marshfield) sided with the governor twice while Reps. Paul Casey (D-Winchester), Colleen Garry (D-Dracut) and Matthew Patrick (D-Falmouth) each supported the governor on one roll call. The vast majority of Patrick's support to sustain the vetoes came from the chambers' 24 Republicans. On five of the roll calls, Patrick received no support as the Legislature overrode those vetoes unanimously.

$2 MILLION FOR ADULT DAY HEALTH PROGRAMS (H 4141)

House 151-2, Senate 34-0, overrode Gov. Patrick's veto of $2 million in funding to pay providers of adult day health programs to seniors under MassHealth - the state's Medicaid program. These community-based day programs include nursing care, therapy, nutrition, dietary counseling, social activities and day trips. Supporters of the $2 million said that these programs provide thousands of seniors with a safe and friendly environment during the day that improves the quality of their lives while allowing them to live independently at home instead of a nursing home. In his veto message, Patrick said that the funding for this program expansion was not recommended and noted that it is "inconsistent with the rate-setting process provided by law." (A "Yes" vote is for the $2 million, A "No" vote is against the $2 million).

$2.35 MILLION FOR FIRE SERVICES (H 4141)

House 147-6, Senate 35-0, overrode Gov. Patrick's veto of $2.35 million for fire services including $500,000 for the Boston Fire Department Hazardous Material Response Teams and $1.75 million for the Boston Fire Department training academy. Supporters of the $2.35 million said that the cuts would hurt the city's ability to respond to dangerous hazardous material situations and to train recruits to become firefighters. They noted that the $2.35 million would come from an assessment on insurance companies and not from taxpayers' pockets. In his veto message, Patrick said that he is "striking language which earmarks funding for programs that are inconsistent with the purposes of this item and reducing the appropriation for this item accordingly." (A "Yes" vote is for the $2.35 million, A "No" vote is against the $2.35 million).

292,478 FOR ENVIRONMENTAL LAW ENFORCEMENT (H 4141)

House 138-17, Senate 35-0, overrode Gov. Patrick's veto of $292,478 for funding for environmental law enforcement. Supporters of the $292,478 said that the funds would help this office that administers a police force to enforce the rules and laws designed to protect the environment including those relating to pollution, hunting, lobstering and hazardous waste. In his veto message, Patrick said that he reduced this item to an amount consistent with his original budget proposal. (A "Yes" vote is for the 292,478, A "No" vote is against the 292,478).

$10.47 MILLION FOR WORKFORCE DEVELOPMENT GRANTS (H 4141)

House 150-4, Senate 34-0, overrode Gov. Patrick's veto of $10.47 million in funding for workforce development grants. The funds come from the Workforce Training Fund that was established in 1998 and is financed by Massachusetts employers. Supporters of the $10.47 million said that the money is necessary to fund these grants that provide resources to Massachusetts businesses to train employees and improve their skills. In his veto message, Patrick said that there is an insufficient balance in the Workforce Training Fund to pay for these programs. (A "Yes" vote is for the $10.47 million, A "Nay" vote is against the $10.47 million).

FORM PUBLIC EMPLOYEE UNIONS WITHOUT ELECTIONS (H 2465)

House 133-18, approved a bill changing the way that public employee unions can be formed in Massachusetts. Under current law, if 30 percent of workers sign cards indicating their support for forming a union, a secret ballot election is held and a union is formed if workers approve the formation at the election. The bill would create another option that automatically creates a union without a secret ballot election if a majority of workers sign cards. Supporters of the bill said that current law favors management and gives employers a lengthy period of up to a year prior to an election to intimidate and even fire workers who campaign in favor of a union. They noted that management controls workers' pay and livelihood and has unlimited opportunities to speak out against the union while restricting pro-union activities and speech. Opponents of the bill said that it is an outrageous affront that allows union organizers to intimidate workers into signing a card and takes away workers' ultimate power by abolishing their right to vote on a secret ballot. They noted that the bill would allow the "secret formation" of unions while some workers are not even informed that that there is an effort being made to do so. The Senate later approved the bill on a voice vote, without a roll call, and sent it to the governor. (A "Yes" vote is for the bill that automatically creates a union, without an election, if a majority of workers sign cards, A "No" vote is against the bill).

SCALE BACK ORDER THAT GIVES STATE WORKERS 12 PAID DAYS OFF TO VOLUNTEER (S 2301)

Senate 9-24, rejected an amendment to scale back Gov. Patrick's newly-expanded State Employees Serving as Volunteers (SERV) program. Patrick in January issued an executive order to expand this program that began in 1992 under former Gov. William Weld as a limited one that allowed state workers one paid day off per month to volunteer as mentors at schools. Patrick's expansion gives one paid day off each month to state workers to volunteer at an expanded list of public entities including not only public schools but accredited non-profit organizations. The Republican-sponsored amendment would scale back the program to mirror the Weld one that allowed one paid day off per month solely to volunteer as mentors at schools. The Patrick program provides a list of dozens of approved organizations and allows workers to request permission to work at an organization not on the list. Many activities are prohibited including participation in recreational or athletic activities, fundraising, politics, pro-choice or pro-life organizations and programs designed to promote religious beliefs. Amendment supporters that it is fiscally irresponsible to expand this program and potentially pay 50,000 state workers to volunteer an estimated 4.3 million hours of time annually while collecting hundreds of millions of hard-earned taxpayers' dollars. They noted that a volunteer is someone who performs a service "willingly and without pay." They argued that the program invites abuse and predicted that a lot of workers would volunteer on Mondays and Fridays. Some noted that state workers already have 13 paid holidays per year including the questionable Evacuation Day and Bunker Hill Day. Amendment opponents said that the expansion captures the spirit and intent of volunteerism and would help hundreds of struggling nonprofit organizations across the state. They noted that the program has worked well for 15 years and that the expansion would allow state workers to help many more citizens across the state. They argued that the program includes a strict system and safeguards to prevent any abuse. Some said that many private corporations offer employees paid days off for volunteering at nonprofits. (A "Yes" vote is for the amendment that would scale back the program to mirror the Weld one that allowed one paid day off per month only to volunteer as mentors at schools, A "No" vote is against scaling back and supports Patrick's expanded program). Details on the program and the list of allowed and excluded organizations can be found online at: www.mass.gov/Ehrd/docs/policies/leave/serv_guidelines.doc

Health Notes

Hoarding is no laughing matter

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

The urge to hoard and collect may well be strongly instinctive in many species including humans. The familiar sights of squirrels storing seeds and acorns and birds gathering nesting materials tell us that humans are certainly not alone when it comes to collecting and saving stuff. Probably a natural phenomenon related to the gathering part of "hunter gatherer" in descriptions of primitive man, the hoarding we are discussing is the excessive collection of items that seem to have limited or no value, such as newspapers or trash, along with the inability to discard them. Hoarding may create such cramped living conditions that rooms may be filled to capacity and homes may be left with only narrow pathways winding through stacks of clutter. We've all heard recently of people also collect animals, keeping many dogs, cats or other animals in their homes as filth and waste pile up and the animals become sick. Hoarding problems are real, present in our communities, and researchers conclusions continue to vary about how to deal with this recently recognized problem.

While some people poke fun at hoarding, since we all have the propensity, sometimes it becomes no laughing matter. Those who engage in hoarding put themselves and neighbors in danger of fire, unsanitary conditions and the possibility of getting buried under an avalanche of junk. Frequently, hoarders live close to the poverty line, but were formerly well off. As options for continued existence without support become fewer, they become more isolated. Many hoarders complain that neighbors are "out to get them." Such ostracism from neighbors exacerbates the problem. Treating hoarding proves difficult because people who hoard often don't see it as a problem. According to a report on hoarding by the Mayo Clinic, intensive treatment can help people who hoard understand their compulsions and perhaps live a safer and more enjoyable life. It's a disorder, not an attitude. Neighbors should be tolerant.

Hoarding may create such cramped living conditions that rooms may be filled to capacity and homes may be left with only narrow pathways winding through stacks of clutter.

People who hoard feel compelled to acquire or save items that others may consider worthless. They often spend time moving items in their home from one pile to another, without actually discarding anything. They may be so preoccupied by all their clutter and belongings that they don't socialize with family or friends.

Signs and symptoms

Hoarding affects emotions, thoughts and behavior. Signs and symptoms of hoarding may include:

- Inability to discard items.
- Acquiring unneeded or seemingly useless items.
- Keeping stacks of newspapers, magazines or junk mail.
- Saving trash or used food containers.
- Cluttered living spaces.
- Impairment of daily activities.
- A fear that if things are thrown away, they will almost certainly be needed one day.
- Restricting others from touching or borrowing possessions.
- Procrastination.
- Trouble making decisions.
- Difficulty organizing items.
- Forming attachments to possessions rather than people.

The homes of people who engage in compulsive hoarding usually offer telltale clues that something's wrong. Countertops, sinks, stoves, desks, stairways and virtually all other surfaces are stacked with stuff. And when there's no more room inside, the clutter may spread to the garage, vehicles and yard. Offers by concerned parties are frequently met with hostility because of the belief that they're "trying to steal my property." For some, the piles of belongings are a source of comfort.

Social isolation

In many cases, the hoarding leads to social isolation. Some people may turn to the comfort of hoarding because they're lonely.

Hoarding animals

People who hoard animals may collect many pets, such as cats, dogs, ferrets, rabbits, rats or other animals. They usually hoard animals that can be confined inside and concealed more easily. Because of their sheer numbers, these animals usually aren't cared for properly. Many become so ill that they die or have to be euthanized, if discovered. Veterinarians may be the first to notice signs of animal hoarding when owners seek help for a steady stream of sick or injured pets.

Hoarding is probably a historic problem. And since most people have a propensity to save things, many are at risk. Frequently our partners are the mediating force keeping us under control. It's certainly harder to save those two screws or that lipstick with a partner saying "throw it out, you'll never use it." Many invoke the two-year rule: If it hasn't been worn or used or eaten in two years, throw it out. So, what are you waiting for?

indigenous architectural forms. In a perfect world, depending on our environment, we would still live in tepees, adobes, yurts or igloos and leave a very little footprint, if any. There would be minimal displacement of nature and no permanent manipulation of environment. But given the reality that we have created for ourselves, at least for now, our main goal should be to stop any further damage and live within a footprint that this world can support.

The essence of organic architecture has informed our current green building practices. And fortunately, this movement is becoming more common. Sustainable architecture is dedicated to creating structures that are inspired by nature, and that are healthy, conserving and diverse. The main aspects of green building are 1) the use of sustainable energy; 2) heating, ventilation and cooling system efficiency; 3) building placement; 4) the use of sustainable building materials; 5) waste management; 6) re-using existing structure and materials; and 7) establishing vital connections to community and resources that meet our daily needs in a responsible manner.

The U.S. Green Building Council is a nonprofit that exists to transform the building marketplace to sustainability. Their LEED — Leadership in Energy and Environmental Design — Green Building Rating System is the nationally accepted benchmark for the design, construction and operation of high performance green buildings. Their professional accreditation process provides individuals with the expertise to guide us as we move toward sustainable homes and commercial buildings.

Rating systems, checklists and sustainable how-tos are only a part of the solution, however. Without our intrinsic connection to the earth, we will continually be vulnerable to loose interpretation of what is right and wrong and what is exploiting and what is not. Our work must come from the inside out. In the words of the Huichol Indians, all souls are linked. To be of one heart with all things, only then can we inhabit the earth with gentleness and respect.

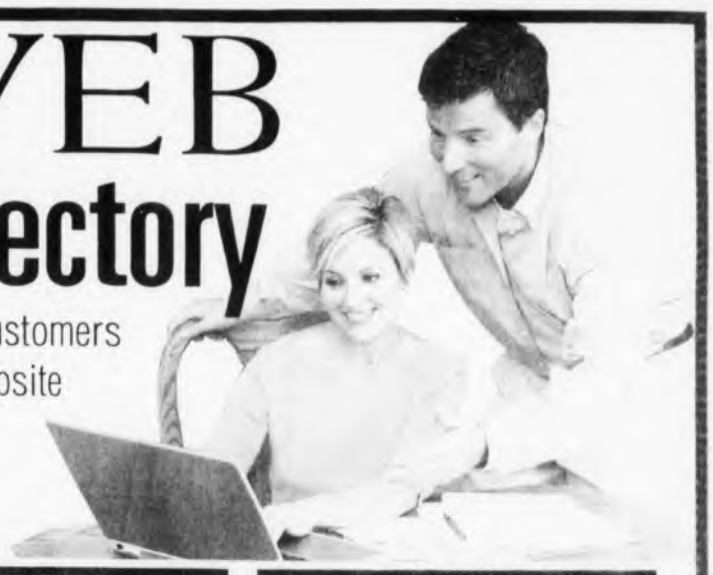
Health screening day support appreciated

To the Editor:

On behalf of the Cohasset Board of Health, I would like to thank all those who made our recent health screening day such a success. Every year we depend on the generosity of community businesses and agencies to provide the services we offer free of charge to all who attend. The Cohasset Rotary Club and Pilgrim Bank's donations supported the cholesterol and glucose screenings that are so popular each year. Our food table was once again full of delicious snacks and coffee from Atlantic Bagel and Deli, Dunkin' Donuts and Stop & Shop. Attendees and participants enjoyed taking a break during the day and sitting and visiting with each other while snacking on the complementary goodies presented so attractively by our faithful volunteers who help us each year. We couldn't conduct the annual health fair without them!

Many thanks to the following providers for their services:

Second Congregational Church; Health Watch Inc. for the cholesterol and glucose monitoring; Norwell VNA for osteoporosis screenings; Dr. Zigmut Pozatek who provided the oral cancer screening; the Melanoma Education Foundation provided the skin analyzer; Paula Pozniak, nutritionist; Cohasset Medical Hearing Center, hearing screenings; Council on Elder Affairs; Susan Cameron – "Juice Plus"; Peggy Chapman, RN, and Cohasset Board of Health chairwoman, provided the mental health screening; Corinne Cahill RN and Mary Whitley RN helped throughout the day and helped everything run smoothly; MABC – Massachusetts Association for the Blind Community Services; Dr. Richard Strecker; Linnell Reed, Reiki master/teacher; and Scituate Harbor Chiropractic, Rachel Coates, DC



Thanks to all of you and we hope to see you again next year!

Resident floats hooking up N. Cohasset to town water past, he seemed spurred to action by the recent water ban.

"Getting North Cohasset on the capital plan is my objective, even if 10 years out," said McElroy, a resident for 24 years. "I'm not naive to the fact how daunting the task of hooking up North Cohasset is."

McElroy said it was "salt in the wound" when the Water Commission brokered a deal with Linden Ponds to provide them with water a few years ago. The Water Department has a 20-year contract to provide water to the Linden Ponds development in South Hingham. At full build-out the Commission will provide approximately 306,000 gallons per day to the complex.

"North Cohasset is part of our community," said McElroy.

Glenn Pratt, chairman of the Water Commission chairman, responded Cohasset Water would like as much as he would to have North Cohasset on its system.

"We see 300 customers as one million in revenue and almost half [of the homes in North Cohasset] can be tied into Cohasset water just by turning valves," said Pratt. However, Pratt said Aquarion would not even come to the table to discuss a deal. "Aquarion says their corporate policy is not to divest of any customers."

During original talks over the Linden Ponds deal with Aquarion it was a firm condition in the contract to turn North Cohasset over to Cohasset Water, said Pratt. However, the talks with Aquarion fell apart and the Water Commission ended up dealing directly with Linden Ponds.

Incorporating North Cohasset onto the Cohasset water system would require a significant investment in the area's distribution system. Many of the water pipes are antiquated and would need to be replaced. Estimates done about five years ago to update the system were between four and five million dollars, said Commissioner John McNabb. The estimate did not include the purchase price from Aquarion.

Since 1997, the Water Department has invested nearly $40 million in capital improvements, including upgrading 48 percent of the water distribution system.

"As a matter of policy, we want North Cohasset to be part of our water system," said McNabb, but indicated the commission needed to be sure other North Cohasset residents felt the same way as McElroy. When approached previously, the majority of residents said they did not want to join the Cohasset Water system, said McNabb.

"We have no authority over that system in any way, but we're willing to help," said Vice Chairman Nathaniel Palmer, "we probably want North Cohasset more than some of your residents."

Because the Water Commission has hit a dead end in talking with Aquarion, they suggested McElroy schedule a meeting with Aquarion to discuss the situation. Palmer said as an Aquarion customer, McElroy was in a different position than the Water Commission. They also suggested he approach the Board of Selectmen for support, including Selectman Paul Carlson who lives in North Cohasset. Palmer offered to informally work with McElroy in the effort.

A check-up for Harbor Health

Selectmen review committee's agenda and future

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Is there really a need for a committee focused on the environmental issues facing the harbor?

That was the question the Board of Selectmen and the Harbor Health Committee grappled with on Monday night. In July, the Board of Selectmen voted to review the status of advisory committees established by the Selectmen in the past. Its fate is yet to be determined.

The Harbor Health Committee, established in summer 2005, has been working on identifying and correcting the environmental issues plaguing the harbor. The committee submitted a one-page agenda for the upcoming year with six items in various stages.

Items included hiring a physical oceanographer to get a better understanding of the hydrology and biology of the harbor, continuing the process of establishing a Non-Discharge Area in the inner and outer harbor, improving communication between interested boards, exploring the possibility of "re-stocking" the harbor with now gone species and researching stormwater/freshwater infiltration issues.

> "It's important to have a voice for the harbor because so many people want to put things in it."
> — Karen Quigley, Harbor Health Committee

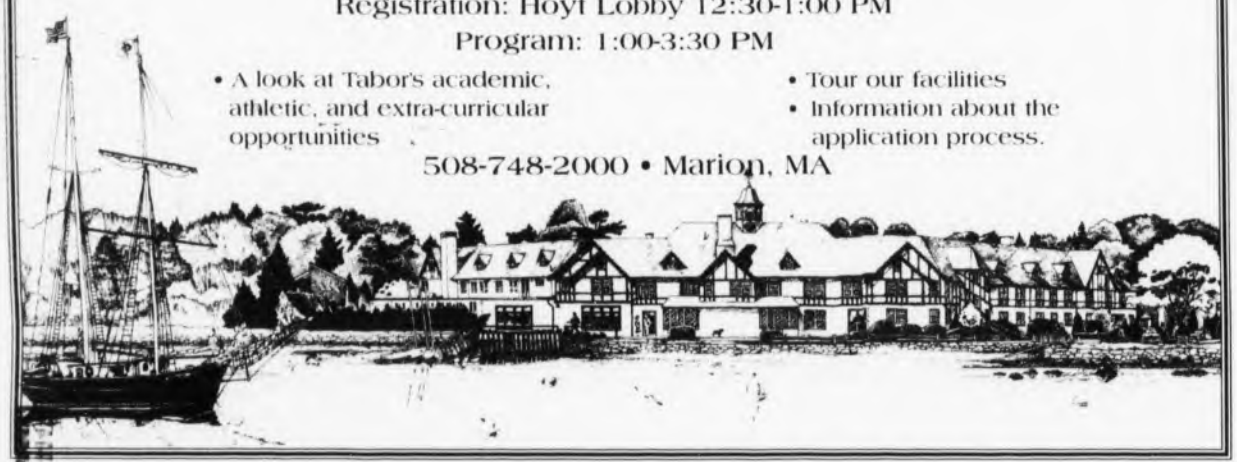
Chairman of the Harbor Health Karen Quigley said the fact Cohasset has a committee devoted to harbor environmental issues has been invaluable in getting support from state and other environmental agencies. Two harbor areas; the salt marsh between Government Island and Parker Avenue and the Parker Avenue cut have been given Coastal Zone Management priority status. The status entitles the project to receive financial support.

"We'll be looking for ways to fund any project going forward," said Quigley, as not to rely solely on the taxpayers. The committee has been working on initiatives relating to Jacob's Meadow, wetlands restoration, stormwater and water testing.

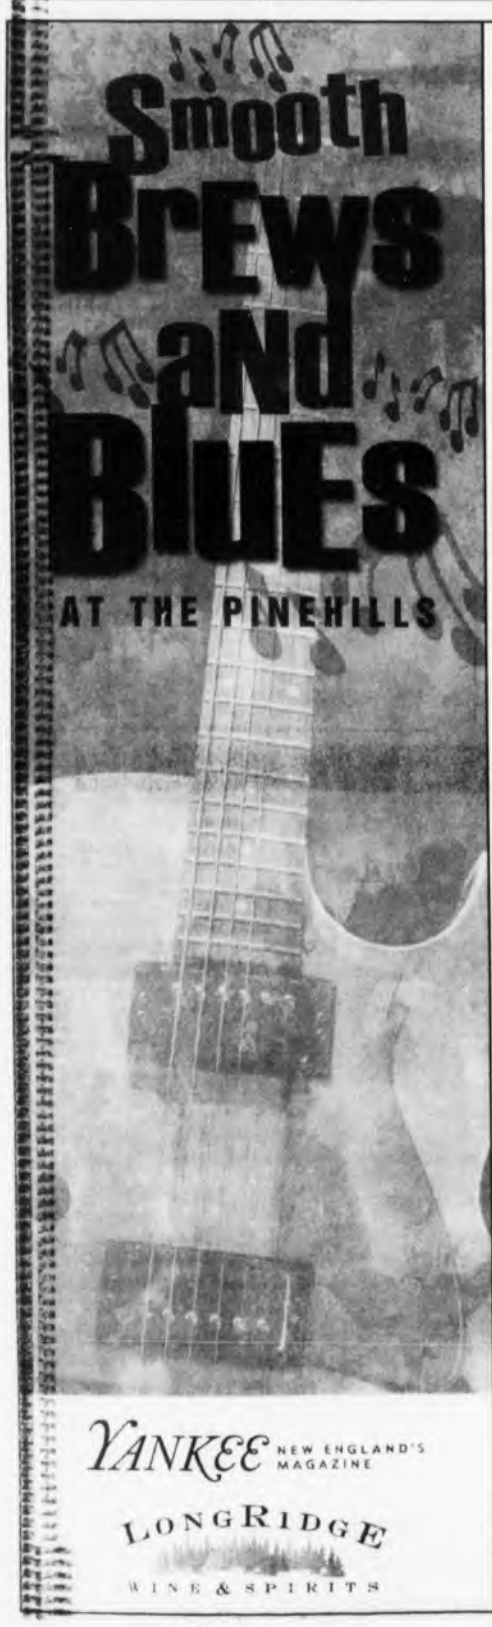
One of the major interests of the committee is to investigate how the water flows in and out of the harbor, which necessitates the physical oceanographer.

"No one knows the flow of water in the harbor," said member Chris Evans, indicating they have only anecdotal evidence that the harbor does not flush completely with the tide.

Selectmen Chairman Gary Vanderweil, a former Sewer Commission member, said hydrologic studies were done in conjunction with the sewer plant expansion and might be of interest to the Harbor Health Committee.



"I think a lot of work has been done," said Vanderweil. He said he would forward the reports on to the committee.



Selectman Ralph Dormitzer commended the committee for its devotion and persistence for the harbor's cause. However, he felt several of their items could be completed with or without a Harbor Health Committee. He said he favored one of Quigley's proposals of incorporating the Harbor Health Committee into the Harbor Committee by increasing it by two members. The two members would represent the harbor's environmental issues, while not increasing the number of town committees.

"It's important to have a voice for the harbor because so many people want to put things in it," said Quigley. There would likely be no detriment to the town's ability to seek out and receive grant support if this change took place, said Quigley. Currently, there is no crossover between the Harbor Committee, which deals with mooring, fees, commercial fishing and other issues relating to the harbor.

The Selectmen took the committee's report under advisement and will discuss at a later meeting.

Aquarion provides Phase III — Water Ban update

We entered Phase I – Voluntary Restrictions on July 17, 2007. At that time the average daily pumpage was over 5 million gallons/day (MGD) and we experienced a maximum day demand that exceeded 5.5 MGD.

Since we did not have the reduction in demand that we had hoped for — at least 250,000 or more gallons per day during Phase I — we announced Phase II - Mandatory Restrictions on August 1, 2007, which restricted watering to an odd / even system by hand held hoses from 6pm-9pm only. Lawn irrigation systems were not allowed, nor were unattended sprinklers.

We entered Phase II because of the following:

- Minimal reduction in daily average demand since announcement of Phase I, of about 0.2 MGD on average
- We were within the buffer of the MA DEP Water Management Act allowable withdrawal volume based on our statistical prediction model through year end 2007
- July rainfall was down by 46 percent compared to 50-year monthly average
- The 3-month period (May-July) rainfall was down 31 percent
- 3 month pumpage (May-July) was up 16 percent
- The Accord Pond and well levels were below normal levels
- The extended long-term forecast consisted of hot and dry weather patterns

On August 30, 2007, we announced Phase III — Mandatory Water Ban with no outdoor water usage allowed. We continued to be within the buffer of the MA DEP Water Management Act allowable volume based on the statistical prediction model.

Factors in the decision for the mandatory water ban were:

- While the average daily pumpage was down by 0.7 MGD, the August rainfall was down by 85% compared to 50-year monthly average.
- The 4-month period (May - Aug.) rainfall was down by 45% or 7.5" for Hingham.
- The Accord Pond was about 45% full compared to the average for this time of year of about 60% full and the well levels are still below normal.
- The extended long-term forecast consisted of hot and dry weather patterns.

During the Phase III, the average daily pumpage is down through mid-September to 3.0 MGD. To date the rainfall for September has been equal to the 50-yr. average for the first half of the month due to the substantial rainfall event on Sept 10th of more than 2 inches.

To date, there have been 347 first violations, 25 second violations, and 2 third violations of all the various water ban phases.

Lifting the current Phase III ban is dependent on two factors:

- Weather (cooler temperatures and a couple more rainfalls of 1.0+ inches) and
- Continued reduced demand so as not to exceed our MA DEP Water Management Act registered annual average volume of 3.51 MGD.

We are hopeful that we can lift the Phase III ban by early to mid-October. This should be possible with the schools back in session, the summer residences and visitors season ending and the typical cooler, wetter weather patterns that occur this time of the year.

By continuing to work together in the conservation of water, our supply will remain more than adequate for our needs. If you have any questions please contact Aquarion Customer Service Department at 1-800-Water 34 (1-800-928-3734).

Larry Bingaman is Senior Vice President — Operations, MA & NH Aquarion Water Company.

New manager for Red Lion Inn

Long-time employee takes position

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.OM

At long last, a manager has been found to take on the liquor license responsibilities at the Red Lion Inn and it turns out, she was right there all the time. The Board of Selectmen, the town's liquor license granting authority, approved Annette Agostino, a Red Lion Inn employee for five years, to be the new manager on Monday night.

Since May, the establishment has been without a reliable contact on the liquor license application. The Selectmen have communicated to the inn their concerns with the lack of consistent management at the inn, including fire safety issues brought up by fire officials at previous meetings.

"Gerd [Ordelheide, owner of the Red Lion Inn] asked me to take on this responsibility and I take it very seriously," said Agostino. Agostino started out in the restaurant business as a waitress and then moved to bartending. She has worked at Mezzo Mare in Hull and Bella's in Rockland before coming to the Red Lion Inn. During the lapse in management, Agostino said she has been acting as a manager in the restaurant/bar area. She has been tip certified for 10 years and everyone behind the bar will be tip certified as well.

Agostino described her management style as cut and dry and very strict. For the time being she plans to focus on managing the bar and restaurant. However, she will also oversee liquor distribution in conjunction with weddings and other functions.

"It is in all our best interests you do your job well," said Vice Chairman Ted Carr, who encouraged Agostino to contact the Town Manager's office or any of the selectmen if she had any questions. Carr stressed the liquor license goes hand in hand with an entertainment license, which allows the Inn to have recorded or live music for functions and the bar with a set of conditions. Carr advised Agostino to be mindful of noise because the Inn does abut a residential neighborhood.

Town Manager Bill Griffin reported the police background check came back with no problems. Fire officials have had some concerns about fire safety, compounded by the lack of consistent management at the Inn. Griffin said Fire Chief Robert Silvia would be contacted her to meet personally and discuss his concerns.

"I think we have the found the right person for the job. [Agostino] is one of our longest running employees and certainly the most steady," said Michael Hayes, President and Treasurer of Cohasset Sarro, Inc. the company owning Red Lion Inn. "We have total confidence in her going forward."

The Board of Selectmen approved the change of the manager unanimously.

After a nearly two month hiatus, the Cook Estate/Abbott Development hearing is expected to resume on Wednesday, Oct. 3. Both the Planning Board and the developer are optimistic this will be the final public hearing on the Cook Estate. Once the public hearing portion of the permit application closes, no new concerns from the public may come before the board.

Abbott Real Estate and Development, owners of the former Cook Estate, is proposing a 27-home community off Sohier Street. The developers from Abbott are applying for a special permit under the town's residential cluster development bylaw. The bylaw allows home to be built closer together with open space on the edges. Despite the "cluster" of homes, there will be no more units than would be allowed under normal subdivision.

Large Home Review is withdrawn

The contentious proposed large home at 18 Little Harbor Road has withdrawn its application without prejudice. In two public hearings, many abutters and neighbors spoke out against the 4,400 square foot home proposed by developer Douglas Karo. Neighbors did not think the home was consistent with the other homes in the neighborhood and there were drainage/runoff concerns as well. Planning Board vice chairman Bill Good said the land was sold to an abutter on Little Harbor Road.

New warehouse for Joseph's Hardware

Over a year after initial approvals from the Planning Board, Joseph's Hardware is ready to move forward with the construction of a second warehouse/retail facility next door. Barry Joseph, owner, said the plans were delayed when the opportunity came up to open a new Joseph's Hardware in Marshfield and took precedence. Now, the Marshfield shop is up and running and he is ready to turn his focus back to the Cohasset expansion. He came before the Planning Board to review the plans and make sure they are still on board with the project.

The Planning Board reviewed some minor outstanding issues and then extended its approval through the balance of 2007. Joseph plans to have a foundation in the ground by the late fall/early winter. He has applied for a building permit and now with the Planning Board's approval, Building Inspector Bob Egan is prepared to issue it.

Showdown Saturday

Skippers 3-0 heading into game against archrival

By Joel Racicot
JRACICOT@CNC.COM

So much for trying to stay focused before the Cardinal Spellman game. It would seem that these Skippers are glaringly focused after crushing the Cardinals 34-0 on the road Sunday. Cohasset is now 3-0 and will play host to one of the biggest games of the year Saturday at home against rival Scituate. Game time is 1 p.m.

Scituate is 0-3, but with whacky last second losses to Norwell and Medfield and a blowout loss against Division 1 Dartmouth. Scituate is clearly not a very terrible 0-3 team. Both Medfield and Dartmouth went to the Super Bowl last year.

"Scituate is such a big rivalry it's almost like another Thanksgiving Day game," said Cohasset coach Pete Afanasiw. "You throw the records out the window, this game is all about backyard bragging rights."

Indeed. Scituate one-upped the Skippers last year 28-14 at home, but these are two different teams from a year ago. Scituate runs the same run and gun, basketball on turf, five wide, shoot em' out offense very well, while Cohasset is a well rounded offensive football team.

"You throw the records out the window, this game is all about backyard bragging rights."
Pete Afanasiw

Take the last three games for example. Game One, Cohasset dominated on the ground against Pembroke. Game Two they took it too the air and blew Archbishop Williams out. Game Three it was quarterback David Snowdale scrambling like an egg at Bickford's, scoring four rushing touchdowns. The fleet-footed signal caller had 104 yards on nine carries against Spellman.

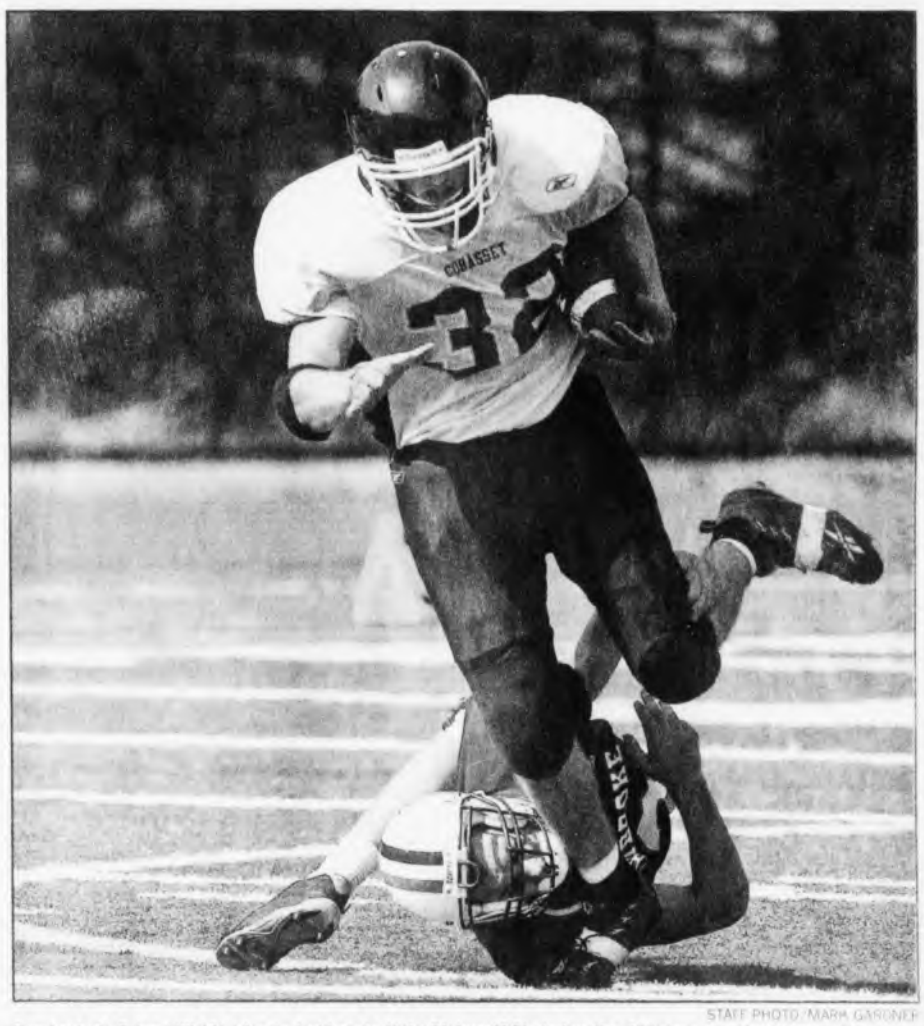
Cohasset ran the option against the Cardinals and Snowdale took a liking to the formation.

"It was the first time we did it and he really took control," Afanasiw said. "He made the correct reads and really took the corner as a running threat."

He also threw for 70 yards. PJ McCaw added a three-yard touchdown run in the game.

The defense played remarkable, Pat Noonan picked off his third pass of the season, and Kyle Pinkus had two sacks and three hurries to go with 15 tackles.

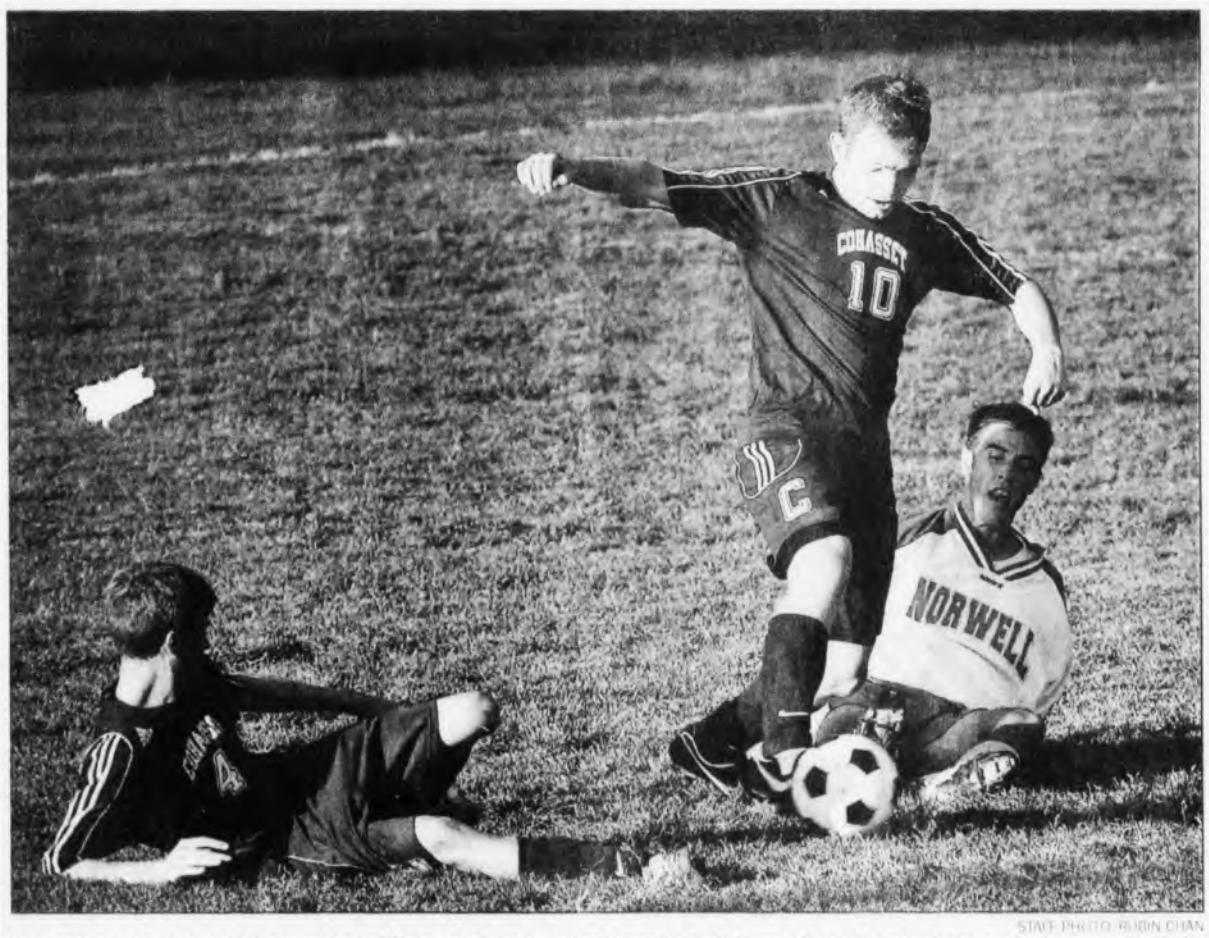
"They are an aggressive physical group," Afanasiw said of his defense. "They are really starting to understand the concept of what a team defense is."



Cardinal Spellman ran a spread offense, a good warm up for the Sailors. Scituate will be hungry when they take Alumni Field Saturday. The Skippers defense needs to keep up the pressure on Sailors quarterback Joe Barisano.

Scituate coach Steve Castle knows it won't be easy going into Cohasset 0-3. Right now, the confidence levels of both teams are in completely different places.

"They are probably feeling good and they should be, we are feeling bad and we should, but we are fighting for our (football) lives," Castle said. "We are going to be hungry we know what we have to do. The reality is that we are not a bad football team, but reality says that we are underdogs."



Scituate may or may not be the underdogs, but this rivalry starts when these kids play youth ball together, and ends this weekend for the seniors.

Forget the records, it's going to be Thanksgiving in September Saturday.

Busy days for boys soccer

Schedule starting to pick up for Skippers

By Joel Racicot
JRACICOT@CNC.COM

There was some frustration on the Cohasset side after the boys soccer team dropped a 2-0 game to East Bridgewater Tuesday. The Skippers played tough against the Vikings, but they couldn't get a handle on why the ball wasn't going in the net.

During film session Wednesday they watched the loss again.

"They got an idea why they lost," said coach Jim Willis. "They handled it well, they saw what they had to change."

The best thing you can do with early losses—learn and move on. Cohasset will have to do that in a hurry with three games next week against Hull, Mashpee and Abington. They plat at Hull Monday. Game time is 6:00 p.m.

"Once we get in the thick of it (schedule) I will know more about the guys," Willis said. "Right now I really like their attitude."

Cohasset played Carver Thursday after the Mariner went to press.

The four senior captains, Mike Grimm, Sam Roth, Ryan Crough and Evan Deutch, continue to set the tone. Roth has been playing especially well leading the team with three goals and a pair of assists.

"We are starting to do more playing with Sam and not watching Sam play," Willis said about his team. "Earlier in the season when they would get tired they would kick it up to Sam and let him go to work, now they are learning to play with him."

Willis concedes that Roth is the most talented player on the team, but what resonates the most is that he knows how to play the game the right way, and for now it's rubbing off on his

Lady Skippers travel well

Girls beat East Bridgewater 2-0 on the road

By Joel Racicot
JRACICOT@CNC.COM

The Cohasset High School girls soccer team defeated East Bridgewater 2-0 on the road Tuesday improving its overall record to 3-3. They are now 3-1 in the South Shore League with the only loss coming in a 1-0 match against Norwell last Wednesday.

The Lady Skippers played at Carver Thursday after the Mariner went to press. They play next at home against an improved Hull team Monday, October 1. Game time is 6:30 p.m.

Coach Deb Beal packed the midfield against the Lady Vikings, playing three back with no sweeper, a strategy that worked well for Cohasset.

"It relies heavily on the players taking care of one small part of the field and communicating well," she said.

After battling to a 0-0 tie in the first half, the team decided to stick with the style of play for the second half. It worked, thanks in part to Kaci Kucinski, a freshman burner who scored both Lady Skippers goals in the second half. She now leads the team with four tallies.

"She is just fast," Beal said. "She lost the defender both times and didn't have a player in front of her, it was nice to see."

Cohasset stayed defensive minded and controlled the ball on offense to secure the big road victory.

"It was huge," Beal said. "If we don't drop the ball anywhere else we can still compete for the league title."

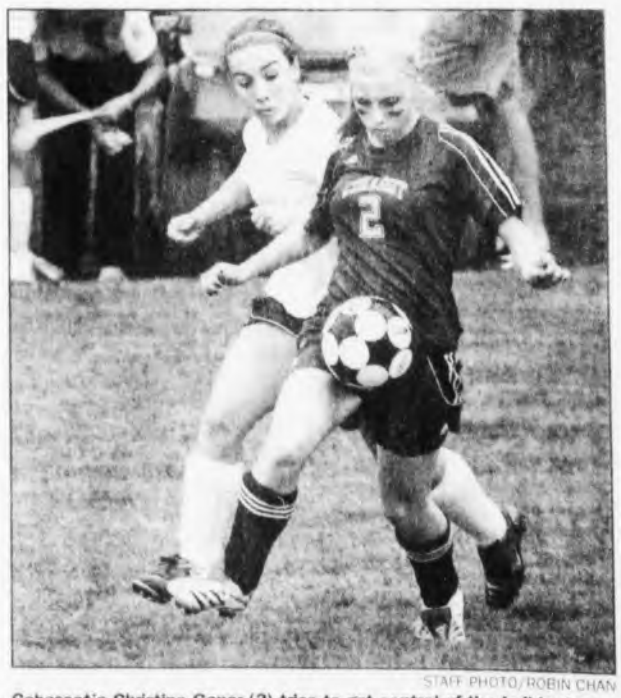
Meg Anderson missed the game due to an injury and was replaced by Meredith Kelly on defense. Kelly missed a good portion of the season already because she was sick and played exceptional in the fill in role against the Lady Vikings. Kelly was slotted to start the season in the back and was replaced by Anderson when she couldn't go. If this trend ends and both players can get healthy, then the Lady Skippers should add some depth and experience to the backfield.

"I asked her (Kelly) if she was feeling better," Beal said, "she said 'I feel a lot better.'"

Christine Coner played well against East Bridgewater but couldn't manage to find the back of the net. She hit the post twice and nailed the cross bar. The sophomore forward looked good on offense and Beal hopes she will stay aggressive.

Torey Hart, Sarah Coggins and Kristin Monaco continue strong play. Hart moved to midfield from forward to give a veteran presence in the middle.

Johanna Brofy notched the shutout in net, making one "phenomenal save" according to Beal but was relatively untested for most of the game, thanks to the solid defensive effort by Cohasset.



Cohasset Soccer Notes

Looking back on the Norwell game it wasn't hard to tell where Coach Beal was coming from with her post game comments.

"I need to stress to them this is just a game like every other game," she said following the 1-0 loss to the Lady Clippers. "When we go into East Bridgewater to play Tuesday it's the same game just because it is Norwell doesn't make a difference."

She was right. The girls proved teammates.

"We are starting to play together," Willis said.

Keeper Will Wise is getting better each game in net. All the sophomore needs to do now is take the leadership role that is accompanied with the title of being keeper.

"The seniors respect him so much that they wouldn't mind if he took a more commanding role," Willis said.

Cohasset's Sam Roth (13) goes up and tries to flick the ball back while challenging Norwell's Colin Henry (3) for the ball. Roth continues to shine for the Skippers, leading the team in scoring.

they could go on the road and beat a tough team in league (East Bridgewater) but that mental edge Norwell holds on Cohasset seems to creep in, even though the talent level of late is even. Cohasset tied Norwell twice last year but they haven't beaten them in 11 years. They have been outscored 68-10 over that period.

That puts things in perspective about how good Cohasset has played over the last two seasons. Now they just need to learn how to win.

Cohasset gets another shot at Norwell at home Thursday, October 11. It's likely they will have to beat them to get any shot at the South Shore League crown; something Norwell has won four straight seasons.

CYBSA Major League tryouts

The try-outs for the 2008 CYBSA major league baseball season will be held on Saturday, Oct. 13 at Barnes Field from 1:00 p.m. to 3:30 p.m. All boys and girls who are age 10 prior to May 1, 2008 and no older than age 12 on April 30, 2008 and who are not currently on a CYBSA major league baseball team are invited to try-out. All 12 year olds (born between May 1, 1995 and April 30, 1996) who attend the tryouts are automatically selected for a Major League team, provided that these players attend the try-out. Players should register at Barnes Field beginning at 12 noon. This will be the only opportunity to try-out. The rain date will be Saturday, Oct. 20. Please visit our website CYBSA.net for more information. Questions regarding the tryouts may be directed to Liam O'Connell @ (781)383-9538 or Nancy Froio @ (781)383-1897.

BAMSI to hold annual AIDS 4K Walk/Fun Run

The Thomas J. Fahey Jr. Memorial AIDS 4K Walk/Fun Run hosted by BAMSI will take place Saturday, Sept. 29, at Massasoit Community College. Massachusetts Commissioner of Public Health, John Auerbach will be the guest speaker. All money raised is for direct emergency services not regularly covered by available funds. Last year hundreds of individuals in the greater Brockton area were helped through this fund. BAMSI's HIV Case Management Program provides services to Brockton and the following towns: Bridgewater, East Bridgewater, West Bridgewater, Avon, Stoughton, Whitman, Holbrook, Abington, Rockland, Randolph and Easton. Individuals can collect pledges before the event and make all checks payable to the Thomas J. Fahey Jr. Memorial AIDS Walk/Fun Run. People can register the day of the event at the Student Center at Massasoit Community College.

The day will begin at 10 a.m. with a continental breakfast and registration at the Student Center followed by opening remarks at 10:30 a.m. and the walk from 11 a.m. to noon. The event is named in honor of the late Thomas J. Fahey Jr., BAMSI's Director of Case Management, who was a nationally recognized advocate for individuals with HIV and AIDS.The walk/race course is a 4K (2.5 mile) looped route through Massasoit Community College in Brockton. Individuals who want to volunteer to assist the day of the event or who need information can call 508-580-0219.

Flash Softball Clinic

The 2007 Flash fall softball clinic will be a weekly event from Saturday, Oct. 13, through Saturday, Dec. 1, at Massasoit Community College in Brockton. The camp will offer hitting and pitching instruction under the direction of Massasoit coaches Ernie Ortega and Marty French.

The camp is broken down into hitting, from 8-9 a.m. and is open to girls ages 9 and up. Pitching for girls aged 9-13 will take place from 9-10 and for girls 13-18 from 10-11. The cost is $140 for hitting or pitching, and $250 for both.

For information, contact the Massasoit Athletics department at 508-588-9100, ext. 1431, or coach Ernie Ortega at 508-654-5042.

Making Strides Against Breast Cancer walk

Volunteers are needed for the Oct. 14 American Cancer Society's Making Strides Against Breast Cancer five-mile walk which will start at the DCR Hatch Memorial Shell on the Charles River Esplanade in Boston. Registration and rolling start are set for 8 to 10 a.m. Volunteers are needed to help set up, greet walkers, act as route monitors, or help with organizing the event and logistics. Boston's Making Strides is the oldest and largest one-day walk in the nation to fight breast cancer, raising more than $33 million to fight breast cancer since its inception in 1993. Funds raised support the American Cancer Society's programs breast cancer research, education, advocacy, and patient support programs. For information call 800-ACS-2345, or e-mail strides_boston@cancer.org.

College scholarships from Patriots

Attention college-bound students: you can score up to $20,000 in college scholarship funds from the New England Patriots during the 2007 NFL season. For the third year in a row, the Patriots Charitable Foundation and Fidelity Investments will give away thousands of dollars in scholarship money to local students through the Inspire the Future "Write On" Scholarship Contest. To enter, students must write a 500-750 word recap about the Patriots' most recent game. After every four-game stretch on the Patriots schedule, a first place winner will be awarded a $5,000 college scholarship, two second place winners will receive $2,500, and six third place winners will receive $1,000 in scholarship money. At the conclusion of the season, all previous first place winners and others who qualify will be eligible to win the $15,000 grand prize, the $10,000 runner-up prize or the $5,000 honorable mention prize. All winners will also be honored at a reception held at Gillette Stadium. Essays can be submitted online at www.totallypatriots.com or mailed to "Write On" Contest, Gillette Stadium, 1 Patriot Place, Foxborough, MA 02035. For more information, tune in to Totally Patriots, hosted by Kerry Connolly, each Sunday at 11 a.m. on WCVB-TV, immediately following the Emmy-Award winning Patriots All Access.

SCHOOLS

Brown, Kelly to lead student body

LIFE AT CHS

CHRISTINE KENT

What's up everyone?

In recent articles I seemed to have highlighted negative aspects of school, which is not a hard task for a student (don't ask us why but it's tradition), as most parents already know. But in this article, I have decided to put aside any pessimism and appreciate the achievements of this year.

Last Thursday the high school gathered in the auditorium to listen to humorous Student Council election speeches. Candidates ran for either Vice President or President of the entire student body. If only the 2008 Presidential campaigns were as entertaining and relaxed then maybe politicians wouldn't get such a bad reputation. However, in these elections smart wit and promising ideas outweighed other candidates who relied on engaging but funny antics to gain supporters. Personally, any student bold enough to stand in front of an auditorium full of scrutinizing teenagers gets my vote!

Junior, Lenny Brown proved to have won the crowd and was elected President of the student body. The equally rewarding title of Vice President was awarded to senior, Tyler Kelly or more informally known as TK. Note: Seniors, next year's USA Presidential elections will be the first chance for many able to exercise the right to vote! What could be more exciting then aiding in the political direction of our country.

In addition to the student council elections it is also impressive to note that this year's football team is as of right now, UNDEFEATED! Congratulations guys, lets keep this three game winning streak up! Sadly, with the threats of triple E sports teams are unable to play or practice after six o'clock meaning that the traditional Friday night light games will no longer happen. Drawing fun crowds, night games at CHS have always been a highlight for sports players especially for the widely appreciated football and lacrosse teams.

Now, for the week's top stories!

• Monday, Sept. 24: The six graders depart for an exciting week at Camp Bournedale. Lucky for them the weather will be sunny all week! We could all benefit from a little R&R in the sun, too bad we can't all be sixth graders!

• Tuesday, Sept. 25: Seniors interested in joining the Yearbook Committee met in the art room with Derry Schwantner. Senior parents just a reminder that the ads are due Monday, Oct. 1st. The drop off is in the office.

• Wednesday, Sept. 26: Quality time for peer leaders and their freshmen groups as they met for lunch. Also, the field hockey team faced off in a tense game against rivals, Carver. These aggressive players could easily be confused with the wrestling team, so watch your backs girls!

• Thursday, Sept. 27: Mr. Willis' AP Euro class took a field an interesting museum field trip to see first hand the artifacts of history! In addition, the Yearbook Committee met to discuss the fate of the yearbook. With a team stocked with creative minds it should be interesting to see the outcome of their hard work.

• Friday, Sept. 28: The tuckered out tweens of sixth grade return home from Camp Bournedale, after a spending four fun filled days doing trust and water activities as well as adventure rope courses. Hmm, sound like fun…I think so!

Well, that's it for me this week. Hopefully, you all enjoy the weekend. Good luck to the varsity footballers!

AP Scholar awards at Cohasset High

Most of the nation's colleges and universities award credit, advanced placement or both based on successful performance on the AP Exams.

Twenty-three students at Cohasset High School have earned the designation of AP Scholar by the College Board in recognition of their achievement on the college-level Advanced Placement Program Exams.

The College Board's Advanced Placement Program offers students the opportunity to take college-level courses while still in high school, and to receive college credit, advanced placement or both for successful performance on the AP Exams. About 18 percent of the more than 1.4 million high school students in 16,000 secondary schools worldwide who took AP Exams performed at a sufficiently high level to merit the recognition of AP Scholar.

Students took AP Exams in May 2007 after completing college-level courses at their high schools. The College Board recognizes several levels of achievement based on students' performance on AP exams.

At Cohasset High School:

One student qualified for the National AP Scholar Award by earning an average grade of 4 or higher on a 5-point scale on all AP Exams taken, and grades of 4 or higher on eight or more of these exams. This student is Kevin Barber.

Seven students qualified for the AP Scholar with Distinction Award by earning an average grade of at least 3.5 on all AP Exams taken, and grades of 3 or higher on five or more of these exams. These students are: Kevin Barber, Caren Garber, Ryan Ingram, Colleen Richardson, Lauren Strazzulla, Timothy Toomey and Katherine Wilcox.

Five students qualified for the AP Scholar with Honor Award by earning an average grade of at least 3.25 on all AP Exams taken, and grades of 3 or higher on four or more of these exams. These students are: Laura Campedelli, Emily Coggins, Kyle Dattola-Harris, Stephanie Fewsmith and Virginia Spofford.

Eleven students qualified for the AP Scholar Award by completing three or more AP Exams, with grades of 3 or higher. The AP Scholars are: Austin Breslow, Sarah Brown, Donald Dickinson, Meredyth Evans, Molly Gallagher, Jack Gilbert, Aisling Guinee, Alexandra Laas, Benjamin Massotta, Lara Novak and Charlotte Reel.

Most of the nation's colleges and universities award credit, advanced placement or both based on successful performance on the AP Exams. More than 1,400 institutions award a full year's credit – sophomore standing – to students presenting a sufficient number of qualifying grades. In 2007, 37 AP Exams were offered in a variety of subject areas, each consisting of multiple-choice and free-response – essay or problem-solving or oral response – questions, except for the Studio Art Exam, which evaluates students' original artwork.

The College Board is a not-for-profit membership organization whose mission is to connect students to college success and opportunity. Founded in 1900, the association includes more than 5,200 schools, colleges, universities and other educational organizations. Each year, the College Board serves 7 million students and their parents, 23,000 high schools and 3,500 colleges through programs and services in college admissions, guidance, assessment, financial aid, enrollment and teaching and learning. Among its best-known programs are the SAT, PSAT/NMSQT, and the Advanced Placement Program.

APPLE Project talk scheduled for Oct. 2

Parents of the Cohasset School District are invited to attend a presentation on the APPLE Project at 7:30 p.m., on Tuesday, Oct. 2, at Osgood School Library, behind Deer Hill School.

Time is running out and a couple of more parents from the Cohasset School District are wanted to become involved with the APPLE Institute – Advancing Parent-Professional Leadership in Education. Mathew Kusminsky from the UMass Research Team will be present and answer questions about the project.

The APPLE project is a research project funded by the U.S. Department of Education to learn more about ways to improve communication and collaboration between parents of children receiving special education services and the school administration personnel with whom they interact. The APPLE Project will provide collaborative school system teams with training that will allow parents of children receiving special education services to learn skills that will help them become full and effective partners with their schools.

Currently, they are recruiting parents of children with Individual Education Plans and 504 Plans, ages 5 through 16, from Cohasset, Hampdon-Wilbraham, Northboro /Southboro School District, Sandwich and Tewksbury to fill the remaining slots available for a three-day Parent Leadership Development Institute that will take place Oct. 18 through 20 in Marlborough.

If interested in participating, call the research team at UMass: Mathew Kusminsky at 617-287-4373 or Susan Foley at 617-287-4317; or the Federation for Children with Special Needs at 617-236-7210. More information about this project is also available by email at southshorepac@comcast.net.

Holly Hill Farm Fall Programs

With the arrival recently of a high school environmental science class from South Shore Charter Public School for the first of their bi-weekly visits to Cohasset's Holly Hill Farm, the fall program schedule for schools, youth groups, families, adults and open enrollment programs for youths is off to a quick start.

Education Director Jon Belber said, "There's still plenty of time to register, with openings in most programs still available. Schools, parents and adults are welcome to call me at 781-383-1455 with their questions. We anticipate close to 1,000 participants if it's anything like last fall, so I wouldn't wait too long."

The programs are sponsored by the Friends of Holly Hill Farm, Inc., the nonprofit division of the certified organic farm at 236 Jerusalem Road. Increasing awareness of the importance of sustainable agriculture, where our food comes from, how the organic farmer assures his or her food is healthy and nutritious, and protecting the natural environment from misuse are important underlying themes in this year's program offerings as been the case since the Friend's founding in 2002.

To register for the programs, for specific dates, times and fees, for written information or to ask questions, contact Friends' Education Director, Jon Belber at 781-383-6965 or send inquires to Holly Hill Farm, 236 Jerusalem Road, Cohasset, MA 02025.

Programs

This past year saw schools from 10 local communities engaged in programs at the farm with an underlying purpose of helping teachers' meet school learning goals. Programs featuring hands-on activities as well as guided tours about the farm are available for all elementary grades.

Nutrition and Organic Farming – For the third year, the Friends is sponsoring a teachers' workshop aimed at helping teachers get more out of a class visit to the farm this year through their development of a complementary curriculum unit that addresses one or more of the key Massachusetts Framework Standards. A total of 10 PDP's are offered to those who successfully complete the 10-hour program which takes place Wednesday, Oct. 10 and Saturday, Oct. 13.

Children's Programs

Short-term programs – Baby Spinach for 3 to 5 years, Pea Shoots for 5 to 7 years, and Carrot Tops for 8 to 10 years are again being held this fall. Baby Spinach is a morning program while the latter two take place after school.

Workshop and Tour Schedule

All workshops and tours start at 2 p.m. and run for abut an hour and a half. Initial meetings take place near the Farm Stand at Holly Hill Farm.

Tree Identification Walk – Enjoy Holly Hill Farm's extensive woods Saturday, Sept. 29, in a walk that will cater to those who want to sharpen their tree identification skills and learn why there are more than 30 different species of trees on the farm. Phil Benjamin, a professional forester, who not too long ago conducted a formal inventory of the woods as part of the farm's application to a Federal program, will lead the way.

Growing Fields of Holly Hill Farm – This guided, behind the scenes tour, scheduled for Sunday, Oct. 14, is a good way to get to know the farm's growing fields and Farm Managers, Hannah Hobbs and Ben Wolbach. Participants will learn where the farm's vegetables and flowers are actually grown and some of the special growing techniques used on an organic farm.

Fall Woods Cleanup – This program, held Sunday, Oct. 21, is the farm's first effort to get some outside help in cleaning up the trails before winter sets in. Participants are advised to bring clippers and loppers

Christmas Decoration Workshop – Friends board member Mimi White will share her experience in making her own wreaths. Workshop materials, which for the most part are gathered from the farm's woods and fields, are included in the fee. If it's cold, the workshop will take place in the greenhouse.

Experienced forester to lead tree identification tour

Experienced forester Phil Benjamin of South Easton will lead a tree identification walk at 2 p.m., Saturday, Sept. 29, through the woods of Cohasset's Holly Hill Farm.

The guided hour-and-a half walk, which starts in front of the Main Barn at 236 Jerusalem Road, will follow the trails and paths that traverse the farm's 140 acres of woods and fields. The farm features diverse habitats, including a salt mash, uplands, ledges and rock outcroppings, brooks, ponds, a wetland and swampy areas, which supports numerous varieties of trees in various stages of development. Besides its natural groves of American Holly, from which the farm receives its name, the woods are host to numerous varieties of oaks, maples, white pine, ash, shagbark hickory, black walnut, red cedar, beech, hornbeam, birches, tupelo and many more.

By taking a closer look at the leaves, twigs and bark, the tour leader will provide useful hints on to how to identify the various specimens and will also disclose how various trees are related to underlying soils and ground elevations.

Phil, who has been working as consulting forester throughout southeastern Massachusetts since 1978, is a graduate of the University of New Hampshire with a bachelor's degree in Forest Resources and is recognized as a Certified Forester by the Society of American Foresters.

"We are lucky to have Phil as leader of this program," notes Frank White, chairman of the board of the Friends of Holly Hill Farm, the non-profit organization sponsoring the tour. "Phil is uniquely qualified as he knows the woods well. In 1995 he conducted a survey of woods as part of a forest management plan the farm submitted to the Federal Government. Besides, his enthusiasm for the beauty of these woods is catching, as program participants will quickly discover!"

To register for the program, which is open to families, call the Friends of Holly Hill Farm Education Director Jon Belber at 781-383-1455. The walk is free to Friends of Holly Hill Farm members and $5 for nonmembers.

Annual Bark 'n Howl Ball Fundraiser

Join WATD's news diva Christine James and the hard-working 3A Farm Fund volunteers from 7 p.m. to midnight, Saturday, Oct. 27, at the third annual Bark 'n Howl Ball that will rock the rafters at the Hatherly Country Club in Scituate. The annual ball is the highlight of the fall season and the popular local band, Section 8, promises to keep you hopping. James, a faithful longtime supporter of the shelter, will be welcomed back for her third stint as the master of ceremonies.

Tickets are $50 each and are available at the Scituate Animal Shelter on the Driftway. The Bark 'n Howl Ball is a fun evening with great food, music and dancing, live and silent auction prizes and all proceeds help the Scituate Animal Shelter relocate from the Driftway to the 3A Farm.

The land at the 3A Farm where the new shelter will be built has been purchased, but fundraising efforts continue to pay down the mortgage received from Rockland Trust. As of May, 2007, the capital campaign met the initial goal of $800,000 in gifts and pledges. The group now needs to sell a one-acre lot and raise another $180,000 to complete the project. Thanks to a generous donation of architectural services from Artisan Architecture, the shelter design is nearly complete.

"We're almost there" is the group's motto; and the Friends of the Scituate Animal Shelter are very close to realizing this wonderful gift to pets in need and residents of the South Shore.

For more information and to follow the progress of the relocation, visit www.town.scituate.ma.us/animalshelter, www.3afarm fund.com, or call the shelter at 781-545-8703, between 3 and 5 p.m., Wednesday through Friday, and from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m., Saturdays.

Coffee with the authors

Buttonwood Books and Toys will host a coffee with the authors from 9:45 to 11:30 a.m., Tuesday, Oct. 16, at the Atlantica Restaurant on Cohasset Harbor. This event will feature three authors, John Elder Robison, Leah Hager Cohen, and Michael C. White.

John Elder Robison will discuss "Look Me in the Life: My Life with Asperger's," his memoir that describes his own incredible journey from a tumultuous childhood through a dark adolescence to adulthood, with Asperger's. Robison is a keen storyteller, and is the elder brother of Augusten Burroughs, the author of "Running with Scissors."

Leah Hager Cohen has written successfully in fiction and nonfiction. Her latest work is fiction, but the feelings and relationships she describes are painfully real. "House Lights," set mostly in Boston and Cambridge, is a poignant account of a tight-knit family whose perfect world is abruptly changed. Cohen beautifully captures the invisible threads that bind people together.

Michael C. White emphasizes the complexity of character in his new book, "Soul Catcher." A Civil War-era novel, it is a story about a man whose talent is tracking and finding prey, particularly slaves. However, like many people there is more to the bounty hunter than his public persona. White's story is imaginative and provocative.

Reservations and tickets are required. Tickets cost $15 and may be picked up at Buttonwood or by sending a self-addressed stamped envelope with your check to Buttonwood Books & Toys, Shaw's Plaza, Route 3A, Cohasset, MA. 02025. Call Buttonwood at 781-383-2665 to reserve or order a signed copy if unable to attend.

South Coastal Demolay to host yard sale

South Coastal Demolay is hosting a fundraising yard sale at Satuit Masonic Temple, Country Way, Scituate, starting at 9 a.m., on Saturday, Oct. 13.

DeMolay opens doors for young men ages 12 through 21 by developing the civic awareness, personal responsibility and leadership skills needed in society today. DeMolay combines this mission with a fun approach that builds bonds of friendship among members in more than 1,000 chapters worldwide. South Coastal Demolay serves Hingham, Cohasset, Norwell, Hanover, Scituate, Marshfield, Kingston, Duxbury and Plymouth.

Anyone who has items to donate or would like more information about Demolay can call Brad Spear at 508-759-5157 or Ed Parsons at 781-837-1006.

Inly Arts Festival scheduled for Sept. 30

Uniquely American in the Arts is the theme of this year's Inly Arts Festival, an interactive community event to celebrate the arts and the value of arts education. Music, dance, theater, technology, art and architecture will be featured in workshops, hands-on projects and live performances from 1 to 4 p.m., on Sunday, Sept. 30, at Inly School, 46 Watch Hill Dr., off Route 123, Scituate. Visit inlyartsfestival.com for more information.

Highlights include modern dance workshops by Boston Ballet; live zydeco music by The Rejuvenators; live jazz by the Cohasset High School Jazz Combo; interactive theater by South Shore Vocational Technical High School's drama club; an exhibit of original serigraphs by artist Corita Kent, along with paint-your-own miniature Boston Gas tanks; a collaborative geodesic dome-building project to honor architect/engineer Buckminster Fuller; larger-than-life puppets from the Boston Puppeteers Cooperative; interactive theater and green-screen technology; and hands-on art activities exploring styles of Jackson Pollock, Jasper Johns, Alexander Calder and other American greats.

The admission price of $10 per person, $40 maximum per family, covers all activities. Food will be available for purchase. The annual Inly Arts Festival is not a fundraiser; rather it is a community event designed to celebrate the arts and the value of arts education. This year, Inly Arts Festival is sponsored in part by Eastern Bank Charitable Foundation and the Marshfield Cultural Council, which is supported by the Massachusetts Cultural Council.

"A Scrap of Cloth" digital monotype by Dorothy Simpson Krause of Marshfield.

'Women Who Travel' panel discussion Oct. 14

An extraordinary exhibition of the work of six artists, "Women Who Travel," will be held through Sunday, Oct. 28, at the South Shore Art Center. The exhibition includes the latest work by Nancy Cusack, Susan Gallagher, Joan Hausrath, Viola Käumlen, Dorothy Simpson Krause, and Esther Maschio. In addition a "Women Who Travel" panel discussion will be held at 2 p.m., Sunday, Oct. 14.

Exhibit organizer, Esther Maschio, states the show "will consider a variety of 21st century practices in printmaking and related media from traditional forms to the highly experimental. Cross disciplines will include book arts, digital technology, writing, and photography."

"Drawing and writing practices intersect in my work," states Nancy Cusack, professor of art at Mass Art, "as visual essays, they offer multiple layers and conclusions, inviting questions about content as well as process and materials."

Nancy Cusack has designed and led international cultural experiences in Latin America and Europe for more than two decades. Susan Gallagher, a photographer from Scituate, has traveled extensively including Great Britain, Turkey and Cuba. Joan Hausrath adapts the landscapes from her travels for the imagery in her art, primarily prints. Using journaling, Joan layers images one over another building a complex collection of marks and textures.

Viola Käumlen spends summers in Marshfield, travels widely, and lives in the Engadine Valley in Switzerland. She uses various cameras in her artist books, photo series and editions. Viola is constantly looking for new ways to share her work and ideas through intense collaborations with fellow artists. Dorothy Simpson Krause is a painter by training and a collage maker by nature. Since being introduced to computers in the late 1960's, she has pioneered the combining of traditional and digital media.

Esther Maschio is a longtime South Shore Art Center faculty member who teaches a variety of printmaking techniques. Her work is inspired by trips to Italy to study printmaking.

South Shore Art Center gallery hours are from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m., Monday through Saturday and from noon to 4 p.m., Sunday.

For more information, visit www.ssac.org, email shannan@ssac.org, or call 781-383-2787.

Arts Walk is Oct. 21

Save the Date! The 2nd annual Hingham Arts Walk, Sunday Oct. 21 from noon to 5p.m., celebrates the rich history of artists living and working within walking distance of historic downtown Hingham. The walk, organized by the Hingham Downtown Association together with the Hingham Cultural Council and several local artists, civic groups and business owners, features the open studios of several downtown artists. In addition to meeting artists in their studios, visitors can stroll through Hingham's historic architecture, meet artists at special exhibits in shops and other spaces, see arts demonstrations, sample harvest treats, mingle with neighbors and enjoy live music outdoors. For more information about participating in this free event, contact info@discoverhingham.com

Art Appraisal Day

South Street Gallery in Hingham will offer its Art Appraisal Day from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m., on Saturday, Sept. 29.

Hingham resident Arthur Garrity, a professional fine art appraiser, will offer verbal appraisals at the gallery at 149 South St.. Etchings, prints or original oil or watercolor paintings may be submitted for review. There is a fee of $10 per appraisal, or $25 for three appraisals, with all of the proceeds being donated to Hingham Historical Society. Garrity said, "In the past, artwork has always been a hedge against inflation. Many wealthy families that once lost their fortunes during the Depression, for example, but held on to their art collections, were able to rebound by selling their artwork years later."

South Street Gallery, which is the outgrowth of a 40-year family business, offers fine art and framing. Gallery hours are from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m., Monday through Saturday. For more information, call 781-749-0430 or visit southstreetgallery.com.

Art from the Heart

Arc of the South Shore announces it will once again host Art from the Heart Art Show and Wine Tasting. Presented by South Shore Co-operative Bank, the event will spotlight the artistic talents of children and adults with intellectual and developmental disabilities. It will take place from 5 to 8 p.m., on Oct. 13, at Thayer Academy, 745 Washington St., Braintree.

In honor of this upcoming event, Arc of the South Shore and local libraries, including the Hingham Public Library, have teamed up to promote the event and educate the public on services provided by Arc artists' during September. For more information, call Claudia Cuscianna at 781-413-2230 or email ccuscianna@arcsouthshore.org.

Kimberlee Alemian paints primarily in the medium of oil. This painting is titled "Rome."

Cohasset artists share their travels

This exhibition is born of extensive travels to Italy and France and includes images reaching from Venice, Florence, Rome, Tuscany, Paris, Provence, Giverney, and the French Riviera.

"On the Road — Italy & France," an exhibition of paintings and photographs by Kimberlee and Richard Alemian of Cohasset, will open at the Dolphin Gallery in the Hingham Public Library on Leavitt Street with a reception from 5:30–7:30 p.m. on Thursday, Oct. 4.

This exhibition is born of extensive travels to Italy and France and includes images reaching from Venice, Florence, Rome, Tuscany, Paris, Provence, Giverney, and the French Riviera.

In creating her oil paintings, Kim uses journaling, sketches, color notations and scraps to bring back the experience in her studio. If time and opportunity present itself, she uses her oils or watercolor to render quick sketches of her subject. Richard brings together natural and architectural elements and the rich colors of place to capture his images.

"I am drawn to the color and finishes that time has left on the ancient architecture and old cobbled roads", says Kim. Both artists are intrigued by other cultures. They appreciate the quality of the wines and cuisine, the quality of the art and the rich histories of Italy and France. They will walk miles to seek out the perfect shot. Richard describes his travels as "Seeing everything through the lens of my camera."

Hingham Public Library hours: Mon–Thurs 10–9, Sat 9–5, closed Friday, Sun 1–5

Tennis Rally for a Cure at Black Rock Country Club

Forty women, including several from Cohasset, came out for the first Rally for a Cure Tennis Tournament Sept. 13 at Black Rock Country Club.

This was the first year that Rally for a Cure, which benefits the Susan G. Komen Foundation, branched out from golf into tennis tournaments. The women dressed in various shades of pink came out to support the foundation and serve up some great tennis.

The event raised $5,000 for the Susan G. Komen Foundation for a Cure, a great start for what will become an annual event at Black Rock Country Club.

Obituary

Donald E. Harrold

Insurance salesman for New York Life

Donald E. Harrold, 67, of Cohasset and St. Petersburg, Fla., died Sept. 22, 2007, in St. Petersburg after a brief illness.

Born and raised in Bryan, Ohio, Mr. Harrold moved to Cohasset while in his early 20s. He worked for many years as an insurance salesman for New York Life in the Boston office.

Mr. Harrold was a member of the Konohassett Masonic Lodge in Cohasset and enjoyed cooking and gardening.

He leaves his daughters, Heidi Bulu and Katrina Hess, both of St. Petersburg, Fla.; and his brothers, David Harrold of Cohocton, N.Y., and Dean Harrold of Cohasset.

A private memorial service and interment will be held in Bryan, Ohio. Arrangements by McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Home, Cohasset.

Memorial donations may be made to Konohassett Masonic Lodge, 7 Brook St., Cohasset, MA 02025.

CIA is focus of Inter-Religious lecture

Glastonbury Abbey, 16 Hull St., Hingham, will present "Listening to Other Voices: Prophets of Compassion: Who Cares?" as part of their Inter-Religious Lecture Series, at 7:15 p.m., Thursday, Oct. 11, in the Glastonbury Conference Center.

Lloyd D. Salvetti will present a lecture on the CIA. "And ye shall know the truth, and the truth will set you free," is the CIA motto engraved into the marble on its Langley, Virginia headquarters, which is meant to show that the agency was created and exists to provide truth to our nation's leaders. What happened to that sense of purpose and does it still exist? What about the CIA and U.S. military engaging in activities which many view as contrary to core American values and universal ethical and moral principles? Where does compassion for others and a moral and ethical obligation fit into the mix?

A CIA officer for 32 years, Lloyd, who is now retired, will speak of his personal experiences, doubts, conflicts and the obligation of CIA officers to truth and truth telling. Mr. Salvetti served on the staff of the Sept. 11 Commission and presently is a consultant to the U.S. government and U.S. and foreign defense firms.

Reservations are recommended and can be made by calling 781-749-2155. Although the lecture is free, donations will be gratefully accepted.

Celebrate Oktoberfest Saturday and Sunday

The only good thing about summer coming to an end is that the House of Prayer's Oktoberfest is right around the corner. The House of Prayer Lutheran Church will celebrate its 22nd annual Oktoberfest on the church lawn at 916 Main St., from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m., Saturday, Sept. 29 and from noon to 4 p.m., Sunday, Sept. 30.

King Ludwig's Bavarian Band, colorfully dressed in their traditional Lederhosen, will once again provide their lively music for listening and dancing. Admission and parking is free.

Authentic German food and beverages will be available all day at reasonable prices. A variety of German sausages, potato salad, sauerkraut, hot dogs, and chicken fingers, donated by the Smokehouse in Norwell, will again grace the serving line tables, and Boston Brewery has brewed and donated the Sam Adams Oktoberfest beer. Soft drinks, wine and pretzels, as well as Linzentortes, Black Forest cakes, apple strudel and other treats will also be available. Members of the House of Prayer have prepared an assortment of homemade goodies, which can be purchased at the Bake Table along with the "Cooks in the House of Prayer" cookbook.

Activities include a raffle, silent auction and a children's corner with crafts, games, and face painting. In addition, local craft vendors will be selling their wares in the Fellowship Hall and the foyer of the church.

More than 80 percent of the proceeds will go to agencies that help those in need as part of House of Prayer's outreach program. Those agencies include Lutheran World Missions, Habitat for Humanity, the Hingham Food Pantry, Wellspring Multi-Service Center in Hull, Lutheran Social Services and the Martha Mary Learning Center in Hingham.

Founded in 1964, the House of Prayer Lutheran Church is part of the Evangelical Lutheran Church of America. The church offers Sunday Worship Service, with nursery services, at 9:30 a.m., and a Contemporary Worship Service at 4:30 p.m. each Saturday. Sunday school is held at 10:45 a.m., from September to June. The church is handicapped-accessible.

Violin, piano concert at St. Stephen's

As the first program of this year's concert series, St. Stephen's Church is pleased to present violinist Sargis Karapetyan and his wife, Nune Hakobyan in concert on Sunday, Sept. 30, at 3 p.m.

Karapetyan received his training in Armenia at the Komitas State University and is currently concert-master of the Nashua Symphony. He not only teaches at Clark University, but is also an instructor for Conservatory Teaching in Your Community. Nune Hakobyan also earned her master's degree in piano performance from Komitas, and is now organist at St. James Armenian Church in Watertown, Mass. She is also pianist with the Nashua Symphony. The concert will be introduced by David Baker, Director of Music at St. Stephen's, and a reception will follow the program.

Sargis Karapetyan and Nune Hakobyan.

The church at 16 Highland Ave. is handicap accessible, and plenty of parking is available at the village car park. Admission is free, but donations will be accepted. For information, please call 781.383.1083.

Business Notes

George Marlette opens Cohasset office

Attorney George Lane Marlette, a longtime Cohasset resident, Cohasset Town Moderator for more than a decade, former member of the School Facilities Committee and past chairman of the Board of Registrars, has opened a branch law office at 9 Brook St., Cohasset Village. Marlette, a graduate of Derby Academy in Hingham and Holderness School in Plymouth, N.H., received his bachelor of arts degree from Gettysburg College and his juris doctor degree, cum laude, from New England School of Law in Boston, where he was elected to Law Review and named a New England Scholar.

Marlette operates a general practice with concentration in domestic relations, estate planning, real estate and probate matters. He is an experienced domestic relations mediator, and has completed requisite advanced training in compliance with the Probate and Family courts in the Commonwealth of Massachusetts. Marlette is a member of Plymouth County Bar Association, Massachusetts Council on Family Mediation and National Academy of Elder Law Attorneys. He is immediate past president and member of the board of directors of Brockton Visiting Nurse Association, past president of the Rotary Club of Brockton and a leader for the Appalachian Mountain Club.

"I have resided in Cohasset since 1973, and decided it was time to establish a law office in my hometown to better serve my many Cohasset clients."

— George Lane Marlette

"Many of my fellow Cohasset neighbors have approached me for legal representation, but the Brockton location created logistical concerns for Cohasset clients," said Marlette. "I have resided in Cohasset since 1973, and decided it was time to establish a law office in my hometown to better serve my many Cohasset clients. My Brockton office will remain fully staffed and operational as well."

Serving of Counsel to the Law Offices of George Lane Marlette will be attorney and former law professor Bruce G. McNeill. McNeill received his bachelor's degree from Northeastern University and holds a juris doctor degree from Harvard Law School.

Office hours are by appointment, with limited evening and Saturday appointments available.

O'Keefe joins Ins. office

Sullivan, Garrity & Donnelly Insurance announces the addition of Kerry Sullivan O'Keefe to their Cohasset office. Prior to relocating to Cohasset, O'Keefe worked as a sales manager in the agency's main office in Worcester for six years. O'Keefe is a fully licensed property, casualty, life, accident and health agent, specializing in insuring high value homes and small businesses. She holds her Certified Insurance Counselor designation and a master's degree in business administration from Babson's Olin School of Management. O'Keefe is a 1996 graduate of Holy Cross College.

'Best of Boston' issue

Boston magazine named three Cohasset area businesses among 348 winners in their 34th annual "Best of Boston" issue.

Boston magazine's anonymous judges explored Greater Boston, its suburbs, the Cape and islands and the Berkshires to find the best there is to offer. This year's judges critiqued an array of categories, including best stores, restaurants, services and nightlife. With nearly 150 new categories, "Best of Boston" 2007 features the most award winners ever.

The following Cohasset businesses were named Best of Boston under the South category: Bia Bistro for bistro; Adamo Day Spa for day spa; and Cohasset Jewelers for jewelry.

Fire department has a busy August

During the month of August the Fire Department responded to 194 incidents.

The summary of Fire Department responses during the month: building fires, three; motor vehicle crashes, 10; outside fires, seven; motor vehicle fires, two; medical emergencies, 83; inspections, 33; investigations, 14; automatic fire alarm activations, 14; downed power lines, four; assistance, four; rescues, two; illegal burning, one; lockouts, four; and miscellaneous responses, 13, Chief Robert Silvia said.

Fifty four emergency incidents were reported by 911 telephone: 39 medical emergencies; two building fires; four investigations; three motor vehicle crashes; two fire alarm activations; two rescues; one outside fire; and one motor vehicle fire, Silvia said.

The Fire Department ambulance transported 55 patients to South Shore Hospital and two patients to Quincy Medical Center. Forty of the 57 were advanced life support transports.

The Fire Department ambulance transported 55 patients to South Shore Hospital and two patients to Quincy Medical Center. Forty of the 57 were advanced life support transports.

Mutual aid ambulances were dispatched to nine incidents. They transported seven patients to South Shore Hospital. Five of the seven mutual aid ambulance transports were advanced life support.

There was one motor vehicle crash that required the victim to be transported to the hospital, Silvia said.

Automatic fire alarm activation responses totaled 14 for the month. Accidental activation of the alarm system accounted for five responses and alarm malfunction was the cause of nine responses.

Three response were classified as building fires for the month, one was for malfunctioning electrical equipment, one was fire in a clothes dryer that was contained within the appliance, and one an outside fire that extended to a residence, Silvia said.

Theater reviews

New twists on old classics

By R. Scott Reedy
CORRESPONDENT

The first-rate national tour of "Wicked," currently in a sit-down run at Boston's Opera House, and the sprightly pre-Broadway engagement of "Alfred Hitchcock's The 39 Steps," now at the Boston University Theatre, are ushering in the new fall theater season in grand style.

On its second visit to Boston in as many years, "Wicked" is in fine form - a musical spectacular with abundant humor, affecting pathos and real heart. A sold-out smash hit since opening on Broadway four years ago, the Stephen Schwartz musical, with a book by Winnie Holzman, is based on the best-selling novel by Concord's Gregory Maguire that reimagines L. Frank Baum's "The Wizard of Oz" from the witches' perspective before a certain Kansas farm girl turned their lives upside down.

Directed by Joe Mantello with choreography by Wayne Cilento, costumes by Susan Hilferty, and sets by the masterful and always magnificent Eugene Lee — Tony winners all around — the show has dazzle aplenty and enough beautiful costumes and colorful lighting to almost match the Technicolor splendor that made the land of Oz pop so resoundingly in the 1939 feature film "The Wizard of Oz." Like that classic movie, "Wicked" richly details the clash between good and evil and asks its audience to look beneath the surface before making judgments about people and what really motivates them. Elphaba is the awkward, emerald-colored outsider, rejected by her own father, who forms an unlikely boarding school bond with the perky and seemingly always upbeat Glinda. The pair's friendship, while improbable to some, proves enduring as the pair goes from roommates to political and romantic rivals.

As Elphaba, Victoria Matlock exhibits a proper blend of confidence and insecurity and is strong-voiced on "I'm Not that Girl" and "No Good Deed." She also delivers a witch's cackle that is a pitch-perfect tribute to the late Margaret Hamilton, the original Wicked Witch of the West. The story may revolve around Matlock's character, but this touring production all but belongs to Christina DeCicco as the Good Witch of the North. Glinda is a bubbly blonde powerhouse with unwavering enthusiasm for everything she involves herself in and DeCicco brings the character to can't-take-your-eyes-off-of-her life summed up perfectly by act one's "Popular." On act two's "For Good," Matlock and DeCicco prove vocally well-matched and nail one of the power ballads that has helped make "Wicked" a phenomenon seen by 2.7 million people in just over two years on tour.

Scottish innkeeper Mrs. McGarrigle (Burton, l.) greets Pamela (Ferris) and Hannay (Edwards) with a wink and a nod in the Huntington Theatre Company's pre-Broadway American premiere production of Alfred Hitchcock's "The 39 Steps."

Across town, the Huntington Theatre Company is presenting the American premiere of Alfred Hitchcock's "The 39 Steps," winner of the 2007 Laurence Olivier Award for Best New Comedy for its London production, and en route to a January opening on Broadway. The splendidly comedic — often slapstick — spin on Hitchcock's classic 1935 film of the same name, itself inspired by John Buchan's 1915 novel, features a four-member company taking on well over 100 different roles. Based on an original concept by Simon Corble and Nobby Dimon, adapted for this new production by Patrick Barlow and directed with perfectly controlled abandon by Maria Aitken, "The 39 Steps" brings the suspenseful cinema of Hitchcock to life on stage with high energy and good-natured humor.

As the story opens at a West End performance by Mr. Memory, gunfire rings out and during the ensuing confusion, Richard Hannay - a kind of pre-Ian Fleming James Bond - meets a mysterious femme fatale claiming to be a spy and seeking shelter. When she winds up dead, Hannay is thrust into the middle of a sinister plot to steal military secrets. He runs from the police and secret agents and from London to the Scottish highlands and back again in two acts and 90 minutes of non-stop action that references almost all things Hitchcock including his films like "Strangers on a Train," "Rear Window," Vertigo," "North By Northwest," "Psycho" and "The Birds," and even his propensity for making clever cameos in his own movies.

Charles Edwards, the only cast member to transfer from London, is a dashing, devilish delight as Hannay and Jennifer Ferris is great, too, as the various women in the leading man's life including, of course, a cool blonde that was a Hitchcock staple. Arnie Burton and Cliff Saunders play the rest of the show's many roles - from spies and evil doers to farmers and Scottish innkeepers - and make their multitudinous character and costume changes with impressive speed. What's most amazing and inventive about this production is how the cast acts out everything from windswept chase scenes to high-speed train travel in a series of inspired and brilliantly executed sight gags. The entire production is clever, captivating and great fun to watch, just like the excellent cast that brings it all to vivid life.

"Wicked" will be at the Opera House, 539 Washington Street, Boston, through Nov. 11. For tickets and information, visit the box office, call 617-931-2787 or go online at broadwayacrossamerica.com. Alfred Hitchcock's "The 39 Steps" will be at the Boston University Theatre, 264 Huntington Avenue, Boston, through Oct. 14. For tickets and information, visit the box office, call 617-266-0800 or go online at huntingtontheatre.org.

Head over heels for 30 years

Ardizzoni celebrates milestone at SSCC

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

In 1977, Ruthann Ardizzoni, a then-high school sophomore, was asked by a friend to substitute teach a gymnastics class at the South Shore Community Center. She agreed to do the one-time favor for the friend, but then she started teaching on weekend nights and, well, the rest is history. Now, 30 years later she is the director of the flourishing gymnastics program, which has grown exponentially under her watchful eye.

"I just never left," she says with a laugh, "I never would have thought I'd still be here if you asked me 30 years ago."

But she is still going strong and says she has plenty more years in her yet. This fall, the gymnastics program will teach more than 250 kids, ages three to 18, during the course of any given week. They come from all over the South Shore to tumble, twist, balance and swing.

The program has come a long way in 30 years. When she started there were limited gymnastics equipment and a small space to work in. They made do with what they had, but Ardizzoni says the program got a huge boost when an addition to the Community Center was completed in 1987.

The addition made room for a floor exercise practice area, with a sponge-like floor to replicate the spring-board

TOD plans unfold

Project begins public hearings

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

A new "welcome mat," so to speak, is on the table for the development of a parcel of land at the gateway to Cohasset off of Route 3A. The currently barren five-acre site, adjacent to the MBTA station right over the Hingham line, if approved could transform into a flourishing mixed-use development with restaurants, shops and apartments.

The developer, Connell Cohasset Greenbush LLC, an affiliate of New Jersey-based Connell Real Estate & Development Co., brought forth plans for the town's first — and only — transit oriented overlay district, or TOD, on Wednesday night. Connell is seeking site plan approval and a special permit from the Planning Board; this was the first of several public hearings on the development.

The applicant is proposing a two-story complex with 33,000 square feet of first floor retail/commercial space in

Honing zoning

Affordable housing tops discussion

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

If Tuesday night's public hearing on the proposed village zoning bylaw is any indication of the Special Town Meeting discussion to come, voters can expect a long and in-depth discussion. A marathon meeting, adjourning nearly four and half hours after it started, involved a cross section of town voices bringing their perspective to the table.

Town officials and committee members, developers and property owners, and interested citizens packed the Town Hall's basement meeting room so few seats were left unoccupied.

The zoning bylaw coming out of the meeting will be a bit streamlined, with the Planning Board voting to strike a few items from the draft, and with several outstanding questions to mull over. The village zoning bylaw will be revisited at the Planning Board meeting Wednesday, Oct. 17, time to be determined.

The overlying intent of the village bylaw is to allow additional development to increase economical vitality, while maintaining the character of the district.

"We wanted to modify the bylaws as minimally as possible," said Planning Board member and lead on the project Mike Westcott. The result of the five-month process involving various experts, architects, civil engineers, market specialists and town planners col-

Cemetery poses new problem at N. Main crossing

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

With the date for commuter rail service less than a month away (Oct. 31), problems are still plaguing the North Main Street rail crossing. Bicyclists are still being injured when their wheels get caught in the angled track, visitors unfamiliar with the area have veered off the road onto the tracks due to confusing fog lines and most recently, funeral processions and visitors are no longer allowed to enter Woodside Cemetery by taking a left turn.

"This grade crossing is unique with the angle of the track and with the cemetery," says Police Chief James Hussey. The police department and Greenbush office have yet to hear from the MBTA about a permanent engineering remedy to these issues.

However, residents may have noticed seven large yellow sand barrels near the grade crossing on North Main Street installed a few weeks ago. According to Greenbush liaison Tom Gruber, this is only a temporary solution.

In late August, the Massachusetts Department of Public Utility (DPU), the state authority that approves all grade crossings, visited the North Main Street crossing near the Hingham town line. During the inspection, a funeral procession was heading into the cemetery by making a left turn off North Main Street. According to Gruber, the DPU representatives observed two major issues

PICTURE THIS/Pam DeLorenzo

Name: Pam DeLorenzo.

Occupation: 15 year volunteer with the Cohasset Appalachia Service Project. I am also a retired social worker and currently a full time nanny.

Best day of your life: There have been many but the most outstanding certainly include the day I met my husband and the births of my 2 daughters and granddaughter.

Best vacation: A 2-week road trip down the east coast that culminated in Florida.

Favorite season: I cannot say that one is better than the other since I enjoy all four of them...yes, I am a big fan of winter and the cold, crisp weather it brings!

Favorite holiday: Without hesitation...Christmas!!!

Favorite junk food: Fritos.

Best book: My favorite book in recent months would have to be "The Glass Castle" due to its connection to the mountains of West Virginia.

Best movie: "Out of Africa."

Best TV show: "The Waltons" (although I am a huge fan of Dancing With the Stars!)

Pet peeve: Individuals that do not filter the appropriateness of their thoughts before speaking.

Most memorable moment: This would have to incorporate the numerous moments that the ASP families that we serve have touched me in ways that cannot be described in the written word.

Goal: Since I truly believe that giving back to our fellow man is one of the most important reasons that we are here on this earth I hope that I can continue to give of myself with organizations such as ASP for many years to come. After all, "Love isn't love til you give it away".

Person you'd most like to meet: Jane Goodall.

Biggest worry: That my immediate and extended family members will be healthy and happy in the years to come.

By the time Mariner readers see this photo, featuring ASP volunteer Pam DeLorenzo, Wheelwright Park will be full of pumpkins for the annual Pumpkin Patch! The Pumpkin Patch will be open from 10 a.m. to 7 p.m. through Oct. 31.

Best part of Cohasset: Its natural beauty and the wonderful friends that have become such an important part of my life.

Register to vote for Special Town Meeting

Friday, Nov. 2 will be the last day to register to vote for the Special Town Meeting to be held on Tuesday, Nov. 13. Registration will be held at the Town Clerk's office from 8:30 a.m. to 8 p.m.

Any citizen of the United States who is a Massachusetts resident and who will be 18 years old on or before a town meeting or Election Day may register to vote. There is no waiting period to be eligible to register to vote. Registration is closed for a brief period before each town meeting and election to allow election officials time to prepare the voting lists. If you register during a "closed" period, you will be eligible to vote only in later town meetings or elections.

Police add 2 lieutenants

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Starting next week, the Cohasset Police Department will have two lieutenants.

Chief James Hussey said he has recommended that Det. Sgt. Gregory Lennon and Sgt. William Quigley be promoted to the two, newly created lieutenant slots. The appointments take effect Oct. 8.

The department currently has five sergeant positions, all of which are filled. The reorganization would leave three sergeant positions.

Four of the five sergeants took the statewide lieutenant's exam, which was offered by Civil Service in October of last year. The list was not certified until last spring. Lennon and Quigley scored the highest, Hussey said.

The cost of upgrading two sergeant positions to lieutenants would be about $5,200 a year. Hussey explained that the new lieutenants would each make about $2,500 more than they do as sergeants.

Hussey said the money was put into the police budget for fiscal 2008. The matter has been on Hussey's agenda since he was appointed chief; he starting discussing the reorganization with Town Manager Bill Griffin as far back as the spring of 2006.

Selectmen voted last March to support adding $5,000 to the police budget to pay for two lieutenant stipends, among other budget amendments. The list of budget amendments was also reviewed with the Advisory Committee, which voted to support the amended budget.

Acting on Hussey's recommendation, Griffin made the appointments. Under the Town Manager Act, Griffin is the appointing authority.

Hussey explained that having lieutenants has nothing to do with the size of a police department but is a management decision that would translate into a more efficient way of running the department.

"Most towns have two or more divisions within a police department," he said. For example, Chatham and Hull each have a captain and a lieutenant; Scituate has three lieutenants; Hingham has two deputy chief positions; and Rockland has two lieutenants.

"The reorganization is going to help me manage the day-to-day operations of the department," Hussey said.

The reorganization includes placing a lieutenant to lead the operational services of the department made up of the patrol force, traffic safety and part-time/seasonal officers. A second lieutenant will lead the support/investigative services including criminal investigations, the emergency dispatch center, grants and animal control.

Hussey said the reorganization would allow him to devote more time in the areas that impact the overall mission of the department including public relations, budget, grants, labor, and best practices.

He said the re-structuring would create more opportunity for advancement in the department, which should boost morale.

Hussey said he has great confidence in both Lennon and Quigley.

"I have been here well over three years and both young men have shown me the utmost consideration in terms of getting the job done and their commitment to police work and to the town," he said. "I have full confidence in their ability to perform the duties they are asked to do."

Griffin said he has full confidence in Chief Hussey's decision to reorganize the department.

"It will bring better accountability to the department and also allow the chief to focus on continuing his efforts to improve the delivery of law enforcement services to the community," Griffin said.

POLICE BEAT

Only one charged in alleged assault

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Police Chief Hussey said police have charged only one boy in the incident involving an assault and battery on another student that occurred Friday afternoon (Sept. 21). He explained that after interviews with witnesses and the victim, police determined that the aggressor was the catalyst for the incident and those accompanying him did not take an active role.

"If we had evidence that other kids played an active role then we would charge them also," he said.

A 15-year-old CHS sophomore, who was sitting with three friends in a parking lot off Pleasant Street, was punched by another student, then picked up and thrown on the ground. The victim tried to protect his face and broke both wrists when he hit the ground.

The incident may have taken root at school earlier that day when the alleged victim asked some other students to stop throwing things at him and was challenged to fight. A member of the school staff stopped what was a potential altercation and apparently did not think it would escalate further. The alleged attacker, who was accompanied by a group of other students, went looking for the victim later. The 16-year-old is facing charges of assault and battery and assault and battery with a dangerous weapon (his foot). The teen kicked the other boy after he was on the ground, according to reports.

Medical issue

Police believe the operator of a van for special needs children had her driving affected by medication that she has been taking.

Last week, police received multiple calls about a van with kids on board that was being driven erratically along Route 3A near Beechwood Street. Officers stopped the van on 3A and the driver was identified as a 22-year-old Hull woman.

"It appears the driver was on prescription medication and had been told that the medication would not affect her driving ability," Chief James Hussey said.

Several callers reported seeing the van swerving and officers stopped the van based on those calls, he said.

Police determined no alcohol was involved. The bus company was notified and sent someone out to drive the van. The woman was cited for marked-lanes violation and police notified the registry about setting up a hearing for a medical review to determine whether she should be operating a motor vehicle.

The incident occurred at about 4:50 p.m. on Monday (Sept. 24).

Shoplifting

A Cohasset officer on patrol in the Shaw's parking lot observed a man, who was wearing a T-shirt, khaki shorts, and construction boots, leave the supermarket at about 8:40 p.m. last Thursday (Sept. 27) with one of the supermarket baskets. The groceries inside the basket did not appear to be bagged.

The officer wrote down the plate number and went inside Shaw's to talk to the manager. They reviewed the surveillance tape and determined that the man had left without paying.

The plate came back to a Marshfield address; Marshfield police determined that the vehicle was at the address.

Cohasset police spoke to the woman at the residence, who turned out to be the man's mother. The car was registered to her. She said the son was not at home.

Based on the observations of the officer on patrol at Shaw's and the surveillance tape, police are seeking complaints against the man for shoplifting. It was determined that he lives in Hull.

3A accident

A 2005 BMW SUV, operated by a 68-year-old Hingham woman, that had stopped on 3A by the train station construction at the request of the detail officer on duty, was struck from behind by a 1999 Mercury Marquis last Tuesday (Sept. 25) at about 12:50 p.m.

The operator of the Mercury, an 83-year-old Hull man, was cited for following too close.

There were no injuries and the cars did not have to be towed.

Transmission trouble

A 9-1-1 caller reported seeing a suspicious, shirtless man along Route 3A last Thursday (Sept. 27) at about 12:30 a.m. standing by a red Honda along the side of the road. The car was apparently parked in a bad spot near Hingham Lumber.

When police arrived, the man had been able to drive the car up as far as Pacini's. The man explained that he had borrowed the car from a friend and was having transmission trouble. Police ran the plate that came back as belonging to another car.

The man had a valid license and explained that he had no idea about the plates.

Police had the car towed and gave the man a ride to the Cohasset Harbor Inn where he hoped to stay the night. Police sent a citation to the owner of the Honda for attaching plates.

Clarinet, CDs taken

A Grace Drive resident told police that a clarinet and about 15 CDs were taken from her car. She had left the CDs on the dashboard and the clarinet in the back seat. There was no sign of forced entry and the woman thinks she may have left the car unlocked. The incident was reported at about 3:40 p.m. last Thursday (Sept. 27).

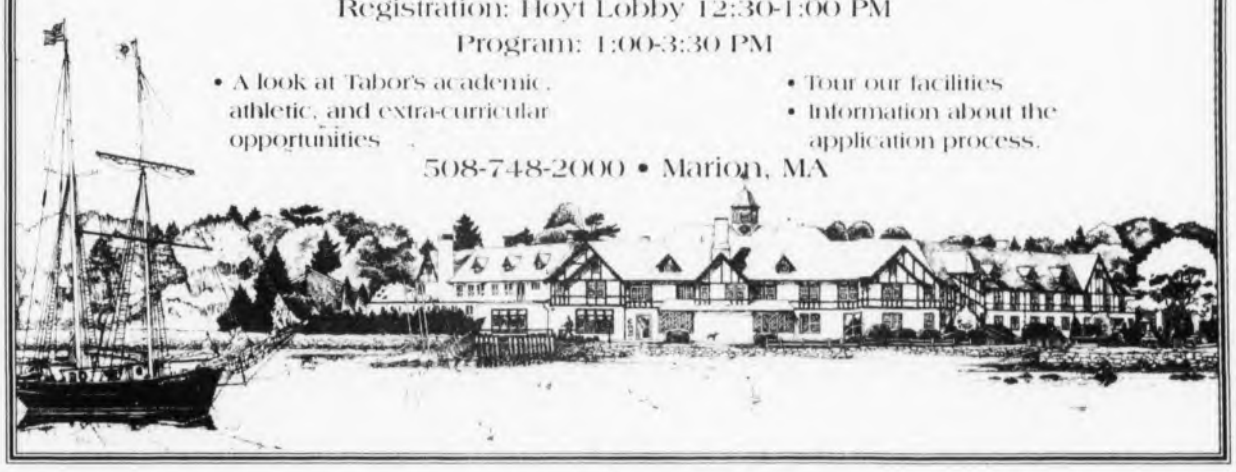
The incident is under investigation but Chief Hussey asks that residents lock their cars and keep valuables out of plain view.

Tools taken

A Clay Spring Road resident reported to police that two sets of golf clubs and a variety of tools were stolen from his garage sometime overnight Saturday into Sunday morning (Sept. 29-30). The resident discovered the items were missing on Sunday morning and called police at about 10:25 a.m.

The garage door was closed but had not been locked, police said. Detectives have processed the scene and have talked to neighbors. The theft remains under investigation.

Earrings missing



Police are investigating the apparent theft of a pair of earrings valued at $5,000-$6,000. A walk-in who lives on Nichols Road reported the theft last week. Detectives did not find any evidence of forced entry but are talking to neighbors to see if anyone saw anything suspicious.

Old bench

Last week a concerned resident reported locating a bench that the caller thought might be the bench that had been reported stolen in the Mariner a couple of weeks ago. As it turned out the abandoned bench was dilapidated and had apparently been thrown away in the woods. It was not the same bench that was reported stolen. However, Chief Hussey said police continue to encourage residents to call when they believe they have information that could be useful about police matters.

Stella not coming

In August, much excitement and anticipation surrounded an application for a new full liquor license for Stella, a restaurant proposed for the first floor of 40 South Main St., the vacant Cohasset Hardware building. Last week, counsel for Stella, Joseph Hanley, notified the Board of Selectmen its application was being withdrawn for the location. The faxed letter was brief and did not provide any reason for withdrawal.

The Selectmen were enthused at the prospect of Stella coming to town, touting the possibility of Cohasset becoming a restaurant destination for the area. The Cohasset location would have been the second Stella restaurant; the first is located at Washington Street in the South End.

Selectmen take a stand on high school assault

Vice Chairman Ted Carr made a motion for the Selectmen to take a firm stand on the recent incident involving a group of Cohasset high school boys, one of whom, police said, assaulted a classmate after-school two weeks ago. The victim ended up with two broken wrists. The alleged attacker, a 16-year-old boy, is facing assault charges.

Carr said the Selectmen should follow the issue of bullying very closely in the ensuing weeks and months.

"This is the type of behavior we can't tolerate in this town," said Carr. The Board the motion was affirmed, 4-0 (Chairman Gary Vanderweil was absent).

Conservation restriction

The Selectmen gave their support to an application for a conservation restriction on 8.715 acres of town-owned land off Sohier Street adjacent to the Cook Estate. Although the town will still own and be responsible for the upkeep of the property, the Cohasset Conservation Trust, a non-profit local land trust, will hold the conservation restriction on the land.

The conservation restriction will ensure the property will remain in its natural, scenic and open condition. Additionally, the purpose is to protect the public drinking water supply, allow passive recreational activity, provide wildlife habitat and prevent any use that will significantly interfere with the conservation values of the property. At Special Town Meeting in December 2005, voters authorized the Selectmen to grant a conservation restriction on the property.

Following the vote of the Selectmen, which indicated their support of the restriction, the conservation restriction application will be sent to the state Executive Office of Energy and Environmental Affairs. If approved at the state level, the board will then sign the document consenting to the conservation restriction.

Affordable housing tops village discussion lected data are nine pages of proposed bylaw amendments for the village business district.

Every zoning bylaw must have a public hearing to air concerns from citizens before going to the floor of Town Meeting. Voters at the Nov. 13th Special Town Meeting will have the final say. All zoning bylaws need a tow-thirds majority to pass.

The public hearing covered major issues concerning affordable housing, the new to Cohasset concept of a floor area ratio regulation, setbacks and parking.

Even with his concerns, Moore felt there was support for the general concept of mixed-use development for the village that would be encouraged by the village bylaw.

Affordable housing

The Housing Partnership Committee, a Board of Selectmen appointed advisory committee dedicated to finding ways to develop affordable housing in town, submitted a two-page memo outlining their concerns with the bylaw.

"We are not happy, we feel affordable housing got short shrifted" in the bylaw, said Housing Partnership co-chairman Tom Callahan. The only zoning bylaw addressing affordable housing development in Cohasset is the inclusionary bylaw. The bylaw states all multi-family residential development of five or more apartment/condo units must include one unit or 10 percent affordable housing units, whichever is greater. The proposed village zoning bylaw makes the district exempt from this bylaw.

The Planning Board gave several reasons for this exemption. First, Westcott understood the Housing Partnership was in the process of re-writing the bylaw for future Town Meeting consideration. Second, Chairman Al Moore said the smaller scale of the projects in the village would make subsidizing affordable housing uneconomical. Third, member Stuart Ivimey felt by limiting the size of the apartments (maximum apartment size by definition is proposed at 1500 square feet) the rents would likely be in the moderately affordable range.

Although Callahan felt strongly about utilizing the inclusionary bylaw in the village business district, he was willing to make concession if the committee's other concerns about the floor area ratio were addressed.

"Village is the ideal spot, maybe the only spot, where the town can develop affordable housing," said Callahan.

Creating an option for a residential only development, particularly to the west of the MBTA train tracks, was floated. Language was proposed to allow the special permitting authority the flexibility to allow a residential only building or first floor residential, if it met specific criteria (i.e. the residential portion was not on a main street). Jennings and Town Counsel Rick Hucksam had concerns over the language and unintended consequences. The matter was put off until the continued hearing date, Oct. 17.

Floor area ratio

A key issue — for developers and the Housing Partnership — in numerous aspects was whether the new regulations for floor area ratio and the associated "density bonus" would be workable in the village. Floor area ratio, or FAR, is a new term and mechanism to Cohasset zoning bylaws. Its purpose is to limit the amount of development on a given piece of land. It is the relation between buildable lot size and sum of gross floor area of all buildings on a lot.

Jennings and his team determined a maximum FAR of 1.5 would be reasonable; however, the bylaw allows for an FAR of up to 2.0 if a public benefit such as a sidewalk, parking, an energy efficient building or affordable housing is constructed. The FAR regulation is in addition to already established setbacks and dimensional standards. The flexibility of having a building up to a 2.0 FAR is termed a "density bonus." A 2.0 FAR would allow a 5,000 square foot lot to have a 10,000 square foot building(s).

The Housing Partnership is concerned the density bonus regulations may be unrealistic on the ground because a 2.0 FAR within the additional height and setback restrictions would be nearly impossible. If that's the case, Callahan argues, there is no incentive for developers to build affordable housing, or any of the other public benefits. He suggested the bylaw lower the threshold so the density bonus kicks in at 1.25 FAR.

However, Jennings said he believed a FAR of 2.0 was possible in the village business district. Confusion arose when several developers and property owners asked if the calculation for gross floor area used in the definition of FAR included uninhabitable space, like basements and attics.

Wayne Sawchuk, owner of the Samuel Bates House (35-39 South Main St.), said if basements and attics count toward gross area ratio, it would limit development by one, or even two floors.

After a lengthy discussion, a majority of the Planning Board voted to exclude basement, attic, underground parking and garages from the calculation of gross floor area for the purposes of floor area ratio.

With this change, Jennings was charged to look at the proposed FAR maximum number of 1.5 to see it was still a reasonable number. Jennings encouraged property owners to calculate what the FAR is or will be on their buildings and proposed designs/expansions and let him know the results.

Parking and setbacks

With seemingly renewed energy — and a significantly diminished audience — the Planning Board resumed its discussion after a short break around 9:30p.m. The public hearing plowed through the remainder of the zoning bylaw.

In the proposed bylaw, a amendment is allows the Planning Board, as the special permit granting authority, to reduce rear yard depth for lots with frontage on the municipal town lots. The goal is to create a second streetscape facing the parking lot.

"This provision is popular with the public. It really sets up the formation of the second streetscape facing the back," said Jennings, "on the floor of Town Meeting it's something voters will feel good about."

Despite Jennings' comments, a majority of the Planning Board (Westcott was opposed) voted to strike the paragraph concerning lots facing the parking lot and include the flexibility of rear yard depth in a separate amendment for the district as a whole.

Another amendment allowing parking spaces for employees to be located up to 750 feet away from a business entrance was removed in the interest of paring down the zoning bylaw.

The complexity of the bylaw will be an issue at Town Meeting, said Moore in a phone interview, "my fear is trying to do too much with one article," he would rather get the major changes passed this fall, then possibly go back with additional amendments at the spring Annual Town Meeting, "it's a very complicated piece of legislation…it will be a difficult presentation to make at Town Meeting."

Even with his concerns, Moore felt there was support for the general concept of mixed-use development for the village that would be encouraged by the village bylaw.

Harboring the zoning bylaws

Citizens' petition could allow apartments/condos on harbor

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

If the proposed village zoning bylaw amendments pass, it would open up new doors for development — apartments, pedestrian space, parking — now, some citizens would like to see some of those regulations a little bit closer to the water.

A Citizens' Petition requesting zoning bylaw changes and amendments to the Waterfront Business District was filed with the town before the Special Town Meeting article submission deadline, Sept. 21. The proposed changes will allow mixed-use development, similar to what is being proposed for the village. If passed, developers on the waterfront could add condos or apartments to already existing buildings and build new construction with mixed-use within the established regulations.

"It started as a result of all the zoning work being done in the village," says Charles Humphreys, a local attorney and the legal mind behind the writing of the bylaw. Humphreys was hired by Peter Roy of 49 Margin St. to prepare the language for a citizens' petition to revise zoning bylaws for the Waterfront Business District. Humphreys said Roy, who owns much of the real estate in the waterfront business district, would like to see some of the same principles proposed for the village zoning bylaw be applied to the harbor.

Both the Planning Board proposed village zoning bylaw and the Citizens' Petition Waterfront bylaw will have receive a two-thirds approval at Special Town Meeting, Nov. 13 to be entered into the books.

Since last fall's special town meeting, re-vamping the village's zoning bylaws has been hot topic for the Planning Board. This summer with the help of a professional consultant, Angus Jennings of Concord Square Development Company, bylaw amendments have been vetted in a series of public meetings and workshops (see related story).

The Waterfront Business District roughly includes the Cohasset Harbor Inn (including the small storefronts across the street), travels down Border Street including only businesses on the harborside (i.e. Olde Salt House, Atlantica) ending at the Border Street bridge.

Humphreys says the difficulty with the village zoning bylaws was striking a balance between controlling development and encouraging it. Since a professional consultant and the planning board have done their due diligence in developing a set of controls for the village Humphreys asks, "why can't a similar set of controls work for the harbor?"

Most significantly, the waterfront business bylaw would allow multi-family dwellings, or apartments/condominiums in conjunction with first floor stores by special permit. Bylaws for the Waterfront Business District parcels are required under the bylaw to have marine-related use on the first floor. Currently, apartments are not allowed in the waterfront district at all. If the bylaw passes, for example, condos could be built next to or attached to the Cohasset Harbor Inn, Humphreys says.

Humphreys had limited time to draft the waterfront bylaw because he intended to use the same, or similar, language as the village bylaw. The village bylaw was filed with the Town Clerk on a Tuesday (Sept. 18) and all proposed warrant articles had to be into Town Hall by Friday (Sept. 21). Humphreys says he drafted the waterfront bylaw by Wednesday (Sept. 19) to allow ample time for the required 100 signatures to be collected. A minimum of 100 certified signatures are required to get on the warrant. The Town Clerk certified 110 signatures of the citizen's petition.

The waterfront bylaw incorporates a new concept to Cohasset's zoning bylaws, floor area ratio. A new term and mechanism, proposed for the village bylaw as well, would limit the amount of development on a given piece of land.

Unlike the proposed village bylaw, the Citizens' Petition will keep the special permitting authority with the Zoning Board of Appeals. But, like the village bylaw, the waterfront district would be exempt from the inclusionary bylaw, which requires any new residential development of apartments or multi-family dwellings over five units must have 10 percent affordable housing unit(s).

The bylaw was written to stand alone at the floor of Town Meeting, says Humphreys. But since it applies many of the same concepts from the village bylaws approval of the proposed village bylaw may be necessary to pass the waterfront district bylaw, he says.

A public hearing on the Waterfront Business District bylaw will be held on Wed. Nov. 7.

Navy Cmdr. Stephen G. Bowen during a visit to Deer Hill in 2003. Bowen attended Deer Hill more than 30 years ago.

ASTRONAUT

Senator Edward M. Kennedy released the following statement today on NASA's announcement that Navy Cmdr. Stephen G. Bowen, who grew up in Cohasset, has been selected as mission specialist on Endeavor's space mission planned for September of 2008. This will be Commander Bowen's first space flight and the mission will work to deliver equipment to the International Space Station.

"Massachusetts is very proud that one of its own has been selected for NASA's mission," said Senator Kennedy. "Commander Bowen's expertise is proven, and NASA is fortunate to have him."

1957 FOOTBALL

The Cohasset Football team has begun its 2007 season. Fifty years ago, another Cohasset High School Football team played and completed its season with an undefeated record! Many of the players still live in town or are close by. The Cohasset Gridiron Club would like to spread the word that the Cohasset-Abington game being played at home on Nov. 2 at 7 p.m. will be dedicated to this very special undefeated team. If you know a player or family member, please pass on the invitation to attend this game so we can celebrate a 50-year-old memory with them! Oh, and be sure to wish them a happy anniversary!

FUNDRAISERS

Cohasset residents Emily Brown, Lisa Westcott, Kristen Astley, and Susan Carrabes have successfully completed their fourth annual summer fundraising effort for the Yawkey Boys & Girls Club of Roxbury. The women founded the "Cohasset Committee" in 2004, to connect residents of Cohasset and Hingham to Roxbury youth through the provision of summer camperships at the Yawkey Club.

This year's effort raised $11,555, which allowed Club Executive Director Andrea Swain to offer 52 free camp positions to Roxbury children. The campers spent the summer engaged in activities including art, athletics and technology, and enjoyed weekly field trips to Boston area parks and beaches. The Yawkey Boys & Girls Club is operated by the Boys & Girls Clubs of Boston, which serves nearly 14,000 area youth through its Clubs, partnerships and Camp Harbor View.

BENEFIT EVENT

Erin and Marc Marcelli of Cohasset attended the 17th Annual Massachusetts Children's Trust Fund's Voices of Children Gala & Auction held Sept. 29 at the Westin Copley Place in Boston. The event is the largest annual fund-raiser for CTF, the state's only organization dedicated solely to the prevention of child abuse and neglect in Massachusetts. The event raised $340,000 for programs that will benefit, educate and support parents, families and the professionals who work with them. At the event, CTF honored former Massachusetts Governor Paul Cellucci and former State Senate President Robert Travaglini for their leadership and service to Massachusetts children and families.

The Massachusetts Children's Trust Fund (CTF) leads statewide efforts to support parents, strengthen families and protect children. For more information, go to www.mctf.org or call (617) 727-8957.

POST PROM

The Post-Prom Committee of 2008 is holding a meeting on Oct. 10th at 7:15 pm in the Cohasset High School Library. Any interested parties should plan on coming or, if you have any questions you may call Babette at781-383-2651 or Ann at 781-383-2069.

REC PROGRAMS

Now that everyone is settling into somewhat of a schedule for this beautiful fall, many programs are starting in the next few weeks. The Cohasset Recreation Department has programs for a variety of ages being held at dismissal time at the Osgood or Deer Hill School as well as some during the school days for ages 3-6. Art, Mr. Dykas Gym Classes, Science and Nature, Drama and more are just some of the fun offerings that you may find. For more information or to register for any of these classes and more, call 781-383-4109, 781-923-1473, log onto www.onecreativeplace.net or go to the Cohasset Town Hall in the Cohasset Recreation Department. As we head into some cooler weather and eventually, (sorry) some cold stuff, it will be wonderful to have some indoor events and classes lined up!

Sustainable Cohasset sells reusable bags

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

"Paper or plastic?" asks the supermarket bagger at the end of the checkout.

"Neither, please," says the customer pulling out of her cart several reusable bags.

Members of Sustainable Cohasset, a grassroots organization, would love to see this interaction occur all over town, not just in the grocery store. As part of its ongoing effort to educate and inspire others to make incremental or large lifestyle changes to enable a sustainable community, Sustainable Cohasset has started selling reusable bags at the Farmer's Market.

"I would love it if every person in Cohasset would stop using plastic," says JoAnn Mirise, project chair, but the purpose of the project goes a little further. In addition to providing an alternative to paper and plastic bags, the bags promote re-localizing our lives by shopping close to home. There are two different versions of the earth toned — brown and green — bags, each with a list of 10 local shops that sponsored the project.

"We as a group feel so strongly relocalization is the biggest thing a person can do to be sustainable. By choosing to make this one decision, there is a rippling effect" on the environment and the economy, says Mirise. The person isn't driving as far to do errands thereby using less gas and putting less greenhouse gases into the atmosphere. Food and other items produced locally don't have to be shipped as far, putting less demand on shipping infrastructure and exhaust. Lastly, by shopping locally customers are supporting a local economy.

"Every meal you eat is like ordering from a take out place 1500 miles away" because of how far each food item has to be shipped to get to the table, says Mirise. In addition, if residents support local businesses more of their money is going back into the community. Mirise said recent research shows $45 from every $100 spent at local independent shops go back into the local community and economy, as opposed to $13 out of every $100 for large chain stores.

"The reusable bags are a no-brainer. Each of our little steps can make a difference."
— Christine Cunning

"The idea would be to not even leave Cohasset village to meet daily needs," says Mirise. But, in order to achieve relocalization there needs to be a strong local infrastructure and Cohasset isn't quite there yet, "we need to get started on this now."

The bags also respond to a call for a more appealing reusable bag to tote to the grocery store or around town.

"We wanted to design an antidote to carrying ugly bags and being a corporate logo," says Mirise, of the supermarket reusable bags. She calls the result "sassy, sophisticated and modern."

The bag design, like the philosophy behind it, has local roots. A photo taken by Sustainable Cohasset member Sally Ayers of a tree on Jerusalem Road, near Black Rock Beach was the inspiration behind the design. Mirise, a graphic designer by trade, turned the tree into a graphic and placed "Sustainable Cohasset" beside it. On the reverse is the list of local business that sponsored the project with quick tips on how to live greener.

The bags are made from recycled material and are recyclable themselves. They are constructed from the same plastic as yogurt containers, recycled #5 (polypropylene). Five hundred of the 1000 Sustainable Cohasset bag manufactured are already out and about in the community. Although the funds raised by the sale of bags will support ongoing efforts of Sustainable Cohasset, Mirise is more interested in raising consciousness than money.

There are two different versions of the earth toned — brown and green — bags, each with a list of 10 local shops that sponsored the project.

When approached by Sustainable Cohasset, Anne Gabenelle, owner of French Memories, she jumped on board right away. In her native country of France, there is a national campaign to not use paper or plastic bags. In the supermarkets, people have to bring their own bags to carry home the groceries.

"I see a lot of waste here, customers asking for a separate box for one croissant and then five minute later they throw it away," says Gabenelle. Even in a small business like her bakery, thousands of dollars are wasted in paper goods each year.

"It's more than time to get people to understand they can make a difference, no matter how small it may be. But it takes time to teach and to change habits," Gabenelle says and then adds, "but, we're a small town so we can do it."

Cohasset resident Carol Martin is not new to carting a reusable bag to the supermarket, she's brought the same cloth bag to the supermarket for 30 years. She has accumulated several other bags over the years and recently purchased a "smart brown bag" from Sustainable Cohasset to add to her collection.

"I trust over the years it will save me as many plastic and brown bags as my original," says Martin. Although she wishes other merchants were as open to customers bringing their own bags as the supermarket.

Another Cohasset resident Christine Cunning is a more recent convert to the reusable bags, but her family has reduced its waste by 75 percent in recent years just by recycling.

"The reusable bags are a no-brainer. Each of our 'little' steps can make a difference. I love returning from the market, and not scrunching up what seem like hundreds of plastic bags every visit," Cunning says, "shopping locally creates savings, which are immeasurable in the big picture."

Local merchants sponsoring the Sustainable Cohasset bags include: All the Best Natural Foods, French Memories Bakery, Village Wine & Spirits, South Shore Pool Supply, Epiphany Designs, Adamo Day Spa Retreat, The Bermuda Shop, Darilynn's, Paperscapes, Platinum Spike Trains, hernan salon, Coastal Countryside Properties, Cohasset Pizza House, Pilgrim Bank, Fleming's Lighting of Cohasset, Ports & Company, Cohasset Antiques, twist, Emporium Naturals Soap, Buttonwood Books & Toys.

To purchase the Sustainable Cohasset bags, they are on sale at the Farmer's Market, Thursdays 2:30-6:30p.m. The cost for one bag is $5, or three bags for $10. If you can't make it to the Farmer's Market but would like to purchase a bag, or would like to learn more about Sustainable Cohasset, please call Kathryn Earle at 781-383-0061. Sustainable Cohasset meets the fourth Tuesday of every month at 7p.m. in the High School library.

at the crossing. First, despite signs at the crossing indicating cars should not stop on the tracks, cars were sitting on the tracks as they waited to make a left turn into the cemetery, says Gruber.

To compound the first problem two separate cars nearly missed having a rear-end collision on the railroad tracks while the funeral procession was waiting to enter the cemetery. Either situation poses a serious safety risk for the cars, the train and its passengers.

The state public utility department would not certify the North Main Street crossing unless changes were made to the crossing preventing cars from turning left in or out of the cemetery, Gruber says. As a result, the MBTA installed the barrels to extend the median and block left turns. Gruber is not certain this action satisfied the DPU, but is guessing it has. He expects the MBTA to propose a more permanent engineering solution, but hasn't seen any engineering plans as of this week. However, he has received several calls about the unsightly quality of the yellow barrels.

The problem goes beyond a few unattractive barrels, the "no left turns" into and out of Woodside profoundly affects the way Cohasset's dearly departed will arrive at their final resting place. With the entrance changes, funeral processions will have to go out of Cohasset into Hingham, just to come back again.

Barrels are lined up to prevent left-hand turns into and out of Woodside Cemetery.

"This grade crossing is unique with the angle of the track and with the cemetery."

— Police Chief James Hussey

Funeral processions will be rerouted to Route 3A, turning right onto Route 228 south to East Street then to North Main Street. It is unlikely Route 3A can be avoided by traveling on either Jerusalem Road or Cedar Street because the intersection of Route 228 (Hull Street) and East Street will have cars piling up over the Hull Street grade crossing to make a left onto East Street resulting in the same dangerous situation as the North Main Street crossing.

Since the majority of Cohasset funerals originate from central Cohasset, they will still need to go over a grade crossing at some point during the procession (via Beechwood Street, Sohier Street, or Lower King Street) but will not necessitate turning or stopping on the tracks.

Creating a second entrance to the cemetery off Route 3A was floated, but there are wetlands between the cemetery and the road, said Gruber. Visitors to Woodside will also have to abide by the "no left turn" signage as well.

Bob McNamara, owner and director of McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Home, hadn't heard of the changes at the rail crossing and the coinciding funeral procession route changes for Woodside Cemetery when contacted recently. He said recent funerals did not need to go to Woodside.

"The cars do back up on the street in a large funeral processions, so I can see where they are coming from," said McNamara, "if that's what we need to do to keep people safe, then that's what we'll have to do."

McNamara said he is lucky to often get the support of a police escort for his funeral processions. However, a solution involving police details working at the North Main Street crossing to prevent cars from stopping on the tracks is not a viable resolution to the problem, said Hussey.

"There are times when a police detail may be an option, but there is no guarantee officers will be available every time," said Hussey, "there's no question [the alternate route] is more time-consuming, possibly even discomforting. But, at the same time, we'd be negligent to allow an unsafe situation to continue."

'Women Who Travel' panel discussion Oct. 14

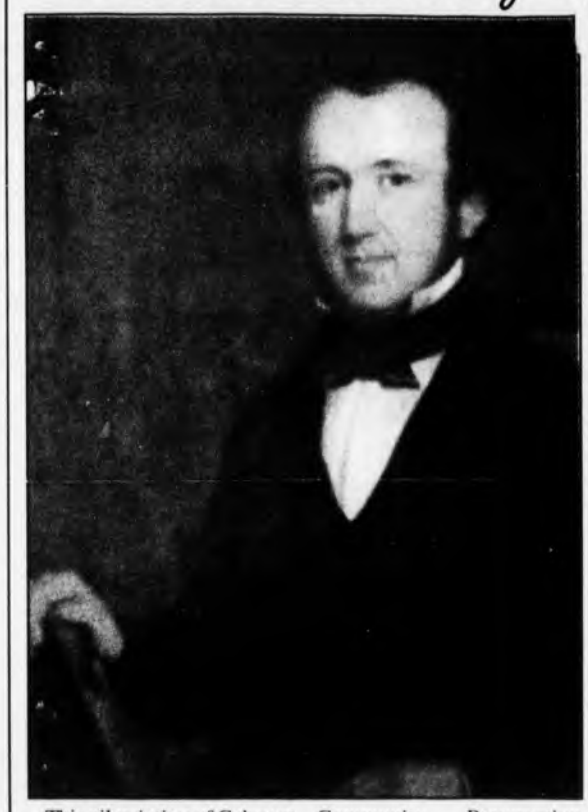
An extraordinary exhibition of the work of six artists, "Women Who Travel," will be held through Sunday, Oct. 28, at the South Shore Art Center. The exhibition includes the latest work by Nancy Cusack, Susan Gallagher, Joan Hausrath, Viola Käumlen, Dorothy Simpson Krause, and Esther Maschio. In addition a "Women Who Travel" panel discussion will be held at 2 p.m., Sunday, Oct. 14.

Exhibit organizer, Esther Maschio, states the show "will consider a variety of 21st century practices in printmaking and related media from traditional forms to the highly experimental. Cross disciplines will include book arts, digital technology, writing, and photography."

Nancy Cusack has designed and led international cultural experiences in Latin America and Europe for more than two decades.

"Drawing and writing practices intersect in my work," states Nancy Cusack, professor of art at Mass Art, "as visual essays, they offer multiple layers and conclusions, inviting questions about content as well as process and materials."

Nancy Cusack has designed and led international cultural experiences in Latin America and Europe for more than two decades. Susan Gallagher, a photographer from Scituate, has traveled extensively including Great Britain, Turkey and Cuba. Joan Hausrath adapts the landscapes from her travels for the imagery in her art, primarily prints. Using journaling, Joan layers images one over another building a complex collection of marks and textures.



Viola Käumlen spends summers in Marshfield, travels widely, and lives in the Engadine Valley in Switzerland. She uses various cameras in her artist books, photo series and editions. Viola is constantly looking for new ways to share her work and ideas through intense collaborations with fellow artists. Dorothy Simpson Krause is a painter by training and a collage maker by nature. Since being introduced to computers in the late 1960's, she has pioneered the combining of traditional and digital media.

Esther Maschio is a longtime South Shore Art Center faculty member who teaches a variety of printmaking techniques. Her work is inspired by trips to Italy to study printmaking.

South Shore Art Center gallery hours are from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m., Monday through Saturday and from noon to 4 p.m., Sunday.

From the Archives of the Cohasset Historical Society

This oil painting of Cohasset resident, Joshua Rich Lothrop was recently bequeathed to the Society. It was painted in 1863 by Boston artist Joseph Greenleaf Cole, a well-known portrait painter of the time.

As a child, Joshua Lothrop lived at 14 Summer St., Cohasset. He graduated from Dartmouth College and Harvard Medical School. We are so fortunate to have him home again. The painting is currently on display at the Society's headquarters at 106 South Main St. It is one of several pieces that will be conserved with funds from the Community Preservation Grant the Society gratefully received in July. We hope you will stop by and take a look at these items before conservation and then again when they are returned to us. The transformation will be worth seeing!

From the Archives is a weekly feature provided by Cohasset Historical Society.

The Cohasset Historical Society welcomes donations. If you have something that you would consider donating to our archives please give us a call at 781-383-1434.

Ruthann Ardizzoni celebrates milestone at SSCC

floor used in competitions. Balance beams, from low heights to regulation height, uneven bars, a vault and conditioning equipment fill the new space. The equipment has been updated and much of it is multi-purpose so it can be used with the smallest kids in tumbling classes and for conditioning with the more advanced gymnasts.

The Community Center has turned out highly competitive teams with kids going to sectional and state competitions.

"Back then we mostly relied on donations and fundraising, now I have a budget," says Ardizzoni with a hint of pride. The gymnastics program includes all aspects of gymnastics, for all ages (even 12 month olds!) and skill levels.

The sport of gymnastics has nearly always been a part of Ardizzoni's life, since she was a young girl training at Kathy Corrigan's School of Gymnastics. She was captain of the Cohasset High School gymnastics team for all four years, from 1976-1979. During high school she began teaching at Kathy Corrigan's and at the Community Center, then her role in gymnastics evolved from there. She has judged competitions, volunteered at the Bay State Games, and been a state representative to the Massachusetts Gymnastics League. She has coached Cohasset high school gymnastics and cheerleading teams.

"My programs have grown so much, I can't do so much other stuff," outside the Community Center she says, "but I attribute the success of the programs to the really great staff I have right now."

Unlike what most would think of a director — behind a desk, crunching numbers and taking registrations — Ardizzoni joins her 10-person staff, many are "homegrown" former students, on the floor teaching the kids the majority of the time.

"I love opening the door and seeing a little smile on a face when hopping in for a lesson," and she loves to see her older students who train so hard pull off a routine in a competition.

She has coached kids from tumbling classes to high school competitions — and now some of her former students are bringing in their children for classes. Although she says this fact makes her feel a bit old, being around kids all days she says keeps her young and full of energy.

Ruthann Ardizzoni is surrounded by members and assistant instructors in her five-to-eight-year-old beginner class at the South Shore Community Center.

"I love my job, I love the kids. I really love to see them grow and progress," she says. One of her favorite parts of the job is witnessing a child perform to the best of their ability, whether it be as small as a child learning to cartwheel or a team gymnast perform a stellar routine on the uneven bars.

She has fond memories of high school competition, both as an athlete and a coach. "I love the camaraderie of a team. There's an excitement in competition. In gymnastics, there's really no "I" in team, the ending is about the team not the individual."

As a coach she has taken her teams to league championships and during a three-year period she led the Cohasset High team in an undefeated streak for 36 meets.

Ardizzoni has seen many changes in Cohasset throughout her 30 years at the Community Center, but what strikes her the most is how busy the kids are today.

"I am amazed at how many activities the children on the [competitive] teams are involved in. They're very well-rounded," she says, "it's amazing the amount of activities they can fit into one week."

But, in the same token, she thinks that's why her programs work so well with people because it offers flexibility and a low-pressure atmosphere.

"I want my students to have fun and learn in a really safe environment," says Ardizzoni.

Gymnastics is a specialized sport and not every child enjoys it, but Ardizzoni says parents should never consider it a waste of money. For the youngest students, it's a way to develop hand-eye coordination and motor skills.

"The strength and conditioning in gymnastics is the foundation of whatever they end up pursuing," she says.

Stephanie Church, director of the Community Center, describes Ardizzoni as hard-working, organized, child-oriented and someone who knows what she's teaching.

"She works very hard to ensure each child has a good time," going that extra mile to make a child comfortable, says Church, "we're very lucky to have her here at the Community Center."

Community Center kicks off another year

The South Shore Community Center is already buzzing with fall activities. Its mission is to provide a place where people can gather, take classes and programs and socialize with each other. Founded in 1944 by a score of Cohasset residents, the Community Center took up residence at 3 North Main St. in 1949.

The Community Center houses a nursery school, Cohasset Elder Affairs, the gymnastics programming and a dozens of programs each week. The programs draw from Cohasset and the surrounding towns.

The center has undergone changes on the outside as well as the inside in the last sixty-plus years. The rear of the building has been expanded twice, says director Stephanie Church. They entered the technology age by adding computer programs for the young and old about 12 years ago. New this fall is the Boston School of Etiquette class for elementary school aged children and woodcrafting for kids five and up. Returning favorites like cooking classes with Maryann Saporito are back, as well as children's dance classes.

"We open our doors at 8a.m. and we often still have programs going at 10p.m.," says Church, sometimes with multiple programs going on at the same time throughout the building.

"The biggest misconception is the Community Center is not funded by the town," explains Church. They rely on donations, program tuitions and membership fees to cover expenses.

Tour of 19th century Cohasset

Historian David Wadsworth will conduct a tour of 19th Century Cohasset, "Looking Back," at 7:30 p.m., Wednesday, Oct. 17, at the Pratt Building. Visit through the town as it was through slides and a lecture and compare those pictures to the town known today.

Through slides and lecture, walk Main Street with Wadsworth and compare the Cohasset that was yesterday with the Cohasset that is today. What has changed and what has stayed the same? This backward glance will begin at 7:30 p.m. at The Society's headquarters, 106 South Main St.

All are invited to attend this free lecture. Light refreshments will be served.

The Historical Society annual meeting and dinner will take place Sunday, Oct. 28, at the Cohasset Harbor Resort, beginning with a cash bar at 5:30 p.m., followed by dinner at 6 p.m. The guest speaker will be Stephen Puleo, author of "The Boston Italians: A Story of Pride, Perseverance and Paesani." Stephen tells the story of the Italian migration to Boston and the perseverance that helped these poverty-stricken people to overcome the many obstacles in their path to success in America.

The lecture series will visit the other side of the world at 7:30 p.m., Wednesday, Nov. 14, at the Pratt Building, when Edyth Ford presents "Adventures Abroad: China and Tibet." As part of a global community, Cohasset welcomes the sights and cultures of other countries. Edyth will talk about her adventures on a recent trip to China and Tibet and will share the similarities and differences of life in lands so far from our shores.

There is no fee to attend the lecture series and light refreshments will be served. For more information, call 781-383-1434 or visit: cohassethistoricalsociety.org.

Gateway to Cohasset

If there is one thing about Cohasset's "looks" over the years that many would change if they could is the appearance of parts of Route 3A.

Let's face it: Route 3A would not rank among the "most beautiful streets in America" in Eleanor Roosevelt's eyes if she were alive today. As many readers may know, she gave Hingham's Main Street that title during a visit in 1942.

The Hingham Stretch of Route 3A between the rotary and Cohasset Town Line and nearly all of Route 3A in Scituate and much of the state highway in Marshfield remain residentially zoned, with most houses set back from the roadway. The effect has resulted in a pleasant drive from a visual standpoint.

But once in Cohasset, much of 3A is a hodgepodge of commercial development, much of which badly needs redevelopment.

Over the years, things have improved. For example, Shaw's Plaza is a big improvement over the former Cushing Plaza, which resembled a ghost town in its later years.

Also years back, a new façade was installed on the front of the shops in Tedeschi Plaza, giving the aging shopping center a better appearance.

Pilgrim Bank, the new shops that house King Jewelers, Hingham Lumber and Cohasset Collision are still more examples.

It is impossible to turn back the clock and take 3A back to residential. Also, the town badly needs to keep its commercial tax base vital and expand it where necessary.

Enter the "TOD." TOD is an acronym for Transit Oriented Development, which encourages sustainable living by locating high density, mixed use developments near public transportation.

The Planning Board has embarked on its review of the TOD planned next to the former Winter Garden skating rink/Graham Waste site, which has been transformed into the Cohasset Train Station.

Most will remember the parcel where the TOD is planned housed stores in an old "strip mall" that included Mary Lou's, a dry cleaners and antique shop. Behind was a florist and boat storage area. While the businesses were a valuable asset – the aging structures were not easy on the eyes.

We think the TOD presents a great opportunity to improve 3A — right at the northern gateway to Cohasset — while helping increase the town's commercial tax base and adding housing (including two affordable units) at the same time.

The architect's rendering almost looks like a mini-Derby Street Shoppes. Residents should remember that this is a much smaller area than Derby Street. However, Derby Street, which replaced the dilapidated Hingham Plaza, has done wonders for Hingham's tax base.

We will be reporting on the hearings as the project unfolds. Stay tuned!

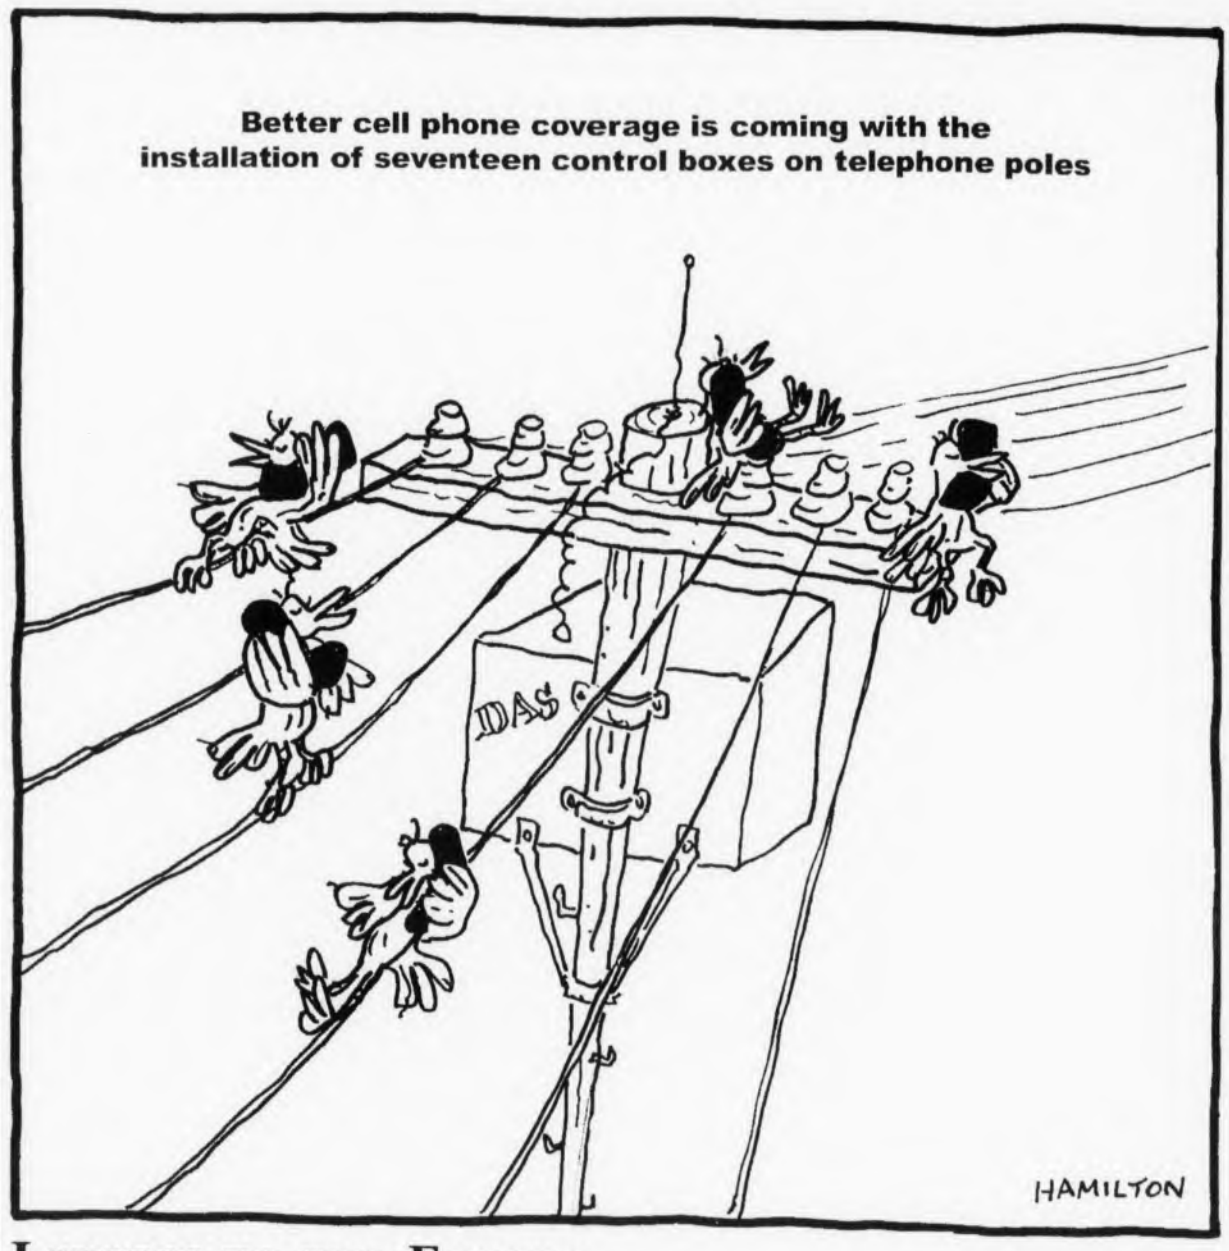
Cohasset Cultural Council seeks funding proposals



Cohasset Cultural Council has set an Oct. 15 deadline for organizations, schools and individuals to apply for grants that support cultural activities in the community.

According to council spokesperson Diane Kennedy these grants can support a variety of artistic projects and activities in Cohasset – including exhibits, festivals, short-term artist residencies or performances in schools, workshops and lectures.

Cohasset Cultural Council will also entertain funding proposals from schools and youth groups through the PASS Program, a ticket subsidy program for school-age children.

Cohasset Cultural Council is part of a grassroots network of 329 local councils that serve every city and town in the state. The program is the largest, most decentralized one of its kind in the United States. The state Legislature provides an annual appropriation to the Massachusetts Cultural Council, which then allocates funds to each local council. This year, Cohasset Cultural Council will distribute about $4,000 in grants.

Application forms and more information about the Local Cultural Council Program are available on the Web at mass-culture.org/lcc public.asp. For more information, call Diane Kennedy at 781-383-1304 or visit devline@juno.com.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Upset over loss of parental rights

TO THE EDITOR:

We want to let this play out.

We are parents who want to exercise our parental rights over our child, who is a student at the Cohasset Middle School. However, we are facing a two-to-three-day trial in Superior Court in October to decide what is best for our child. Unfortunately, the Director of Student Services has managed to take away our parental rights. Every parent has the right to remove their child from services no matter what, as long as there is no violence, harm to himself or anyone else and no disruption. That is what the BSEA (Bureau of Special Education Appeals) wrote in its decision. So we removed our son for two days until the Director of Student Services filed for a Superior Court order and got a restraining order for an injunction to prevent us from removing our son from his services.

One might wonder how the Director of Student Services managed such a thing. Well, first of all, no parent can be taken to Superior Court in a school district without the authorization of the Superintendent of Schools. So why are we going to Superior Court? Because the Superintendent of Schools authorized it. How did the Director of Student Services manage to take away our parental rights? There are a number of reasons why and how this happened, all of which we asked to be put before the School Committee. The response from the School Committee was this, "We are not going to put this on the agenda, and we are going to let this play out."

Why is the School Committee refusing to hear us? What is it that they are so afraid of? One School Committee member says that they have nothing to do with this case wishing us luck and sending us on our way last month. The other School Committee member all of a sudden decides, when things are getting more intense and they are asked to address questions of why the Cohasset School Department allowed the Director of Student Services to do things in such a way that took parents rights away, that now they are involved and cannot address these issues. Why?

Massachusetts General Law, Chapter 71B: Section 3A states that the School Committee appoints the Director of Student Services, and is therefore in charge of all local in-house issues pertaining to the Director. We have issues, but they do not want to hear them. Why does the School Committee in our town get to refuse to listen to parents especially when the School District is taking them to Superior Court? Why is the Cohasset School District wasting your money on such a fight when there are so many parents in the town that are fighting to get services or the appropriate services for their children and cannot.

Proactively valuing our differences

COMMENTARY

SUSAN ETKIN AND CHARTIS TEBETTS

However, the Cohasset Diversity Committee, also acting as the town's No Place for Hate committee, is concerned that so many in Cohasset seem to feel that this is only a police matter.

The assault on the Cohasset teenager two weeks ago received excellent coverage in last week's Cohasset Mariner. The editorial, the commentary and the news report certainly reassured us that the Cohasset Police Department has taken the incident seriously and an investigation is being made.

However, the Cohasset Diversity Committee, also acting as the town's No Place for Hate committee, is concerned that so many in Cohasset seem to feel that this is only a police matter. We suggest that there are many other steps available, in which we can all participate.

Every parent of a student in the schools can have a conversation at home, with the children, about how this incident began, escalated, and ended. What do we do to prevent verbal and physical attacks? What can we say or do to intervene? How do we feel about the victim, about the perpetrator? Do witnesses have responsibilities? And we especially believe that parents need to ask — what have you learned in your classrooms about bullying, name-calling, fighting? We know that every student at many points during their years in the Cohasset public schools has had anti-bullying education.

Members of the adult community in Cohasset can reach out to victims and their families, talk about the circumstances of the incident, offer support and promise to do what they can to eliminate acts of discrimination in their own families and in Cohasset.

In the schools, we know that the tools exist to work hard to foster the "safe, respectful, and positive learning environment for students, staff, and community" that Superintendent Walsh spoke of as one of the goals of the district's Strategic Plan. A major tool is the new Peer Leadership Program that the Diversity Committee successfully promoted and funded in its debut last year. Fifty High School students have received extensive training to recognize and intervene when acts of disrespect occur. These exercises are presented to the Middle School students. The Peer Leaders are expected to lead by example and to take appropriate steps whenever they see acts of bullying, discrimination, and disrespect.

Our goal is to help Cohasset grow into a community where people can look, act, and be different without fear of being targeted for their differences. It is not enough to be tolerant. We must be proactively valuing our differences and speaking up against those that would threaten our individual security.

Susan Etkind and Chartis Tebbetts, Cochairs, Cohasset Diversity Committee/No Place for Hate Committee.

Take a look at new London Plane tree

MAKING TRACKS

TOM GRUBER & MARK BRENNAN

New trees in town – This week four new trees were planted in the Village area. You may remember, last summer the very large Sycamore tree at the southern end of the Town Parking Lot alongside the tracks died as a result of the nearby construction and had to be removed. We were advised by professionals that the best time to replant it would be the fall. Well fall is officially here, so it's time to plant. Thursday of last week we were able to purchase a London Plane tree (a cross between an American Sycamore and a Chinese Sycamore) and bring it to Cohasset. For all intents and purposes, this tree is indistinguishable from the former Sycamore. The accompanying photo shows the London Plane tree resting after its trip from a nursery in Scituate prior to its planting. As you drive through the Town Parking Lot you can now see the new tree in its permanent place.

London Plane Tree ready after its trip from a nursery in Scituate and prior to its planting.

At the same time, the Revitalization contractor came back to finish their work, which included planting three trees. One of these is a lilac tree planted on Elm Street near the Historical Society, similar to the other two lilac trees planted near the corner of Elm and Main. These add a nice touch of white color in the springtime during lilac season. (Somehow, it doesn't seem right to plant lilac trees on Elm Street.) The other two trees are ginkgos planted on the Common across from the First Parish Church. They replace two pin oaks that didn't survive the winter last year and the drought this year.

The Revitalization contractor also cleared up a few items on our "punch list," such as adding a drain in front of Darylynn's to drain the low spot in the street. Now, patrons won't have to do the broad jump to get to the curb after a rain.

Paving Time on Forest Avenue – Thursday and Friday of last week saw the paving get under way big time on Forest Avenue. We apologize to the School Bus Coordinator who had to suffer through a closure of Forest Avenue and Jerusalem Road during peak school bus time in the morning. If we hadn't taken this time to start the paving, we could have lost a month on the project. Pavers are very independent as contractors go and have their work planned out way in advance. If they don't start when they have the time slotted in their schedule, they just move on to the next job. We could have waited a month or so for them to return. Given the condition of Forest Ave. with all of the manholes and storm drains raised we felt it was best to go ahead and pave.

Just because the paving is smooth, doesn't mean that the speed limit has been raised. Please drive responsibly.

Even though the road paving appears complete, there will still be a lot of construction along the entire length of Forest Avenue. There are a few structures in the roadway that need to be raised, so workers will be in the roadway working. As you can also see, the sidewalks and driveway aprons are far from complete so that work will be ongoing.

Lastly, we need to comment about driving habits. Just because the paving is smooth, doesn't mean that the speed limit has been raised. Please drive responsibly.

Greenbush – The MBTA has posted the "final" schedules for the Greenbush on its web site. With revenue service starting on Oct.31st these might come in handy.

Waxing poetic on my anniversary

DRIVING WHILE TYPING

JOHN LENGYEL

I don't often give in to extravagance but I do like to think of myself as a romantic husband. So every year at anniversary time I buy my wife the nicest card I can find. That's even harder than it sounds, because anniversary cards are universally lame. Half of them are written in foofy Elizabethan cursive and begin something like, "As we sail along together on this dreamy tropical sea we call our blah blah blah," or "My most darling, lovey dovey smoochy head." The other half are "humorous," which means they contain jokes so raunchy you wouldn't tell them to your mistress over the phone. They always have a setup like, "Hey Honey, I was on the 15th hole the other day and saw these two border collies..."

Who is buying these things? Would you buy yogurt if the only two flavors available were maple and tequila? It's like anniversary cards occupy this little Stalinist section of the Hallmark aisle. Just once I'd like to find one that sounds as if it came from me, as in or

After 14 years of marriage I can honestly say I've forgotten whose idea this was in the first place. Was it mine? Oh yeah, I remember now. No, seriously.

or perhaps,

On our wedding day I vowed, "To have and to hold you from this day forward, for better, for worse, for richer, for poorer, in sickness and in health, to love and to cherish you as long as we both shall live.' Do you see anything in there about a rose garden? No? I didn't think so."

My wife and I were introduced to each other by an ex-girlfriend of mine, which was pretty awkward, although we didn't know it at the time. This was in California, naturally, even though all three of us were from Massachusetts. For years I'd been trying to do the right thing and date California women, but eventually the language barrier always became an issue. What I liked immediately about Brigid was that she didn't dump me. Her attraction to me was based almost entirely on my safe driving record. We were very fond of one another but it became clear that our relationship was much too boring to survive outside a marriage. So in October of '93 we cast our lots together and I'm happy to say, if you'll forgive me a momentary lapse into mushiness, our relationship has blossomed from boring to incredibly pedestrian and is still going strong!

I think one reason Brigid never gets tired of me is that I'm always coming up with great ideas. For instance here is something that came right out of my head the other day. Instead of turning our clocks back some random Saturday night in the fall, only to turn them forward again in the spring, we should just keep turning them back an hour every Saturday night. Would that not be sweet? An extra hour of sleep every Sunday morning! Or afternoon, depending on the time of year. Now, I know a lot of you are thinking, "But John, farmers would spend half the season farming in the dark." But think about it: who cares? Nobody farms anymore. I've already sent this idea to Bill Delahunt, but to ensure that he moves on it this session there's certainly no harm in writing him yourself.

John Lengyel lives in Cohasset. He would have written a longer article this week but he overslept.

LIBRARY CORNER

Hear 'Sister in Crime' on Oct. 31

The following events will take place at Paul Pratt Memorial Library at 35 Ripley Road. For more information call 781-383-1348 or visit cohassetlibrary.org.

We're Not Making This Up – Ever wonder what the story behind the story is? Hear from true crime writers, drug agents, cyber sleuths and others about what really goes on behind the scenes. "Sisters in Crime" authors Kate Flora and Jayne Hitchcock lead this panel discussion at 3 p.m., Sunday, Oct. 28. Light refreshments will follow and the authors will sign copies of their work, which can be purchased at the event. Sponsored by the Friends of the Library. Admission is free.

Great Decisions Group – The first Great Decisions Discussion group will begin at 2:30 p.m., Sunday, Oct. 14, in the Meeting Room. For those who have registered for the program, the group will discuss South Africa, found in chapter five of the assigned text.

Independent Film Night – The library will show the independent film, "The Island," at 6 p.m., Thursday, Oct. 18. Somewhere in Northern Russia, in a small Russian Orthodox monastery, lives a very unusual man. Those who visit the island believe that the man has the power to heal, exorcise demons and foretell the future. However, he considers himself unworthy because of a sin he committed in his youth. Russian with English subtitles. There will be free admission and refreshments, courtesy of the Friends of the Library.

Library Book Group – Join the book group for coffee and a discussion of "Snow Flower and the Secret Fan," by Lisa See at 10 a.m., Wednesday, Oct. 31, in the Meeting Room. All are welcome.

FOR CHILDREN

Tumble into Reading with TumbleBooks – TumbleBooks are online animated talking books that teach children the joy of reading in a format they'll love. TumbleBooks takes familiar picture books and classic children's literature and adds animation, sound, music and narration. There is an option of reading or being read to. TumbleBooks also offer puzzles, games, language choices and a complete audio library. To access TumbleBooks from home or at the library, go to cohassetlibrary.org and click on the TumbleBooks icon on the homepage.

MamaSteph – Performances will be from 10:30 to 11 a.m., Monday, Oct. 15, 22 and 29, in the Meeting Room. Come sing and dance. All ages and communities welcome. Funded by the Friends of Cohasset Library

Drop In Story Time – Join others in the Story Room from 10:30 to 11 a.m., Tuesday, Oct. 9, 16, 23 and 30, for Big Book adventures, music and movement. All ages and communities welcome.

Letters About Literature – Letters About Literature is a national reading and writing initiative sponsored by the Massachusetts Center for the Book, with lead support from the Calderwood Writing Initiative at the Boston Athenaeum, with assistance from Houghton Mifflin Co., and the Massachusetts Library Association. To enter the contest you must first select a fiction or nonfiction book, a short story, poem, essay or speech you have read and about which you have strong feelings. Explore those feelings and why you reacted the way you did during or after reading the piece. Second, write a personal letter to the author as if you were having a conversation with them. Next, submit your letter. There are three levels of competition: Level I, grades 4 through 6 – entrants must be at least nine years old; Level II, grades 7 and 8; Level III, grades 9 through 12. For participation guidelines go to www.massbook.org or pick up a flyer in the children's or the young adult room.

Mixed-use TOD begins public hearings conjunction with 22,000 square feet of residential space on the second floor.

"We've designed the building to have a Main Street feel," said Geoffrey Wolf, senior vice president of Connell Real Estate. An architectural rendering showed varying roof heights, different storefront façades, cupolas and a clock tower centerpiece. Smaller retailers are envisioned to occupy the storefronts, not big box stores, said Wolf. Coffee shops, drycleaners, small restaurant chains, a fitness center and other independent retailers were offered as examples. Just how many retailers will eventually find a home in the complex has yet to be determined. Although several parties have expressed interest in retail space, no storefront has been tenanted, said Wolf.

"We have every expectation we will fill the site with appropriate retailers," said Wolf. A separate building situated closer to Chief Justice Cushing Highway (Route 3A) is slated for a 3,400 square foot bank with a drive-thru. Connell is seeking a ground lease for the property.

Member Bob Sturdy was concerned the development would overlap current businesses in the village, "I don't want to see this site vacuum out the village," he said.

Above the first floor retail in the main building will be 14 to 18 apartments, a combination of one- and two-bedroom units. The real estate market conditions will determine the split between the apartment types, Wolf explained. Two of the apartment units will be qualify as affordable under the state's Chapter 40B to comply with the town's inclusionary bylaw.

Town officials and committees have already begun submitting comments on the project. The Water Department is seeking to loop in a water main from N. Main Street, while the Fire Department is concerned about both fire hydrant flow and maneuvering the emergency vehicles on the site. Wolf said he has met with both parties and they are working toward a resolution on their issues. Connell met with the Conservation Commission on Thursday evening to review the project in relation to the surrounding wetlands.

The development has done its best to comply with the spirit of the TOD bylaw, as defined in the town's zoning bylaws and as encouraged by the state's "smart growth" initiative. The intent of TOD developments is to encourage sustainable living by locating a high density mixed-use center near public transportation. The idea is to take cars off the road and create pedestrian friendly living, said Wolf.

The proposed complex will be interconnected with the MBTA parking lot for both pedestrian and vehicle access. Residents of the development will be able to walk to the train station and even the village via to-be-constructed sidewalk.

Although the connection to the MBTA parking lot is crucial to the development, the planning board suggested the site may run into problems with commuters parking in the TOD lot while at work, especially since the MBTA will be charging for daily parking. However, Wolf wasn't too concerned with the issue, "we expect parking overflow to go into the MBTA lot, not the other way around."

Signs will be posted limiting parking and since retailers will be negatively impacted if commuters are taking up customer parking, they would be the first to mention if there was a problem, Wolf said.

The number of parking spaces proposed in the development and what the bylaws stipulates is necessary will likely be taken up at a future hearing. Wolf said the nature of mixed-use creates parking demands (residential and retail) at different times of the day. Currently, 201 parking spaces are incorporated into the plans. Some spaces, anywhere between two and eight may be lost in engineering adjustments to accommodate fire safety vehicles.

Peter Brown, chairman of the Economic Development Committee and one of the original proponents of the TOD bylaw, conveyed the committee's support of the project.

"Architecturally this is so superior to other developments being done in suburban areas today. It's going to re-define people's perception of Cohasset," said Brown.

Traffic and drainage issues, among other topics, will be taken up at the continued public hearing set for Oct. 24 at 7:30p.m.

Selectmen review budget amendments

The Selectmen approved three articles for inclusion on the Special Town Meeting warrant.

Town Manager Bill Griffin reviewed the amendments to the fiscal 2008 operating budget.

The town is proposing two amendments to the budget. Director of Finance Mike Buckley has requested a $15,000 increase in his general expenses budget to undertake a new analysis now required by the Government Accounting Standards Board, a group that establishes standards of financial accounting and reporting for state and local governmental entities. The town is obligated to provide an analysis of the town's post-retirement healthcare liability as of Jan. 1, 2008.

The second amendment is an increase of $29,752 for the South Shore Regional School District assessment. Griffin allocated his original estimate presented at Town Meeting based on a five-year trend because the regional school committee did not adopt its budget in time for Annual Town Meeting. This year, there was a larger than expected regional school budget and re-allocation of that budget due to student enrollment shifts among member towns, "it's something that's very hard to predict," said Griffin.

Despite the two unexpected increases, totaling $44, 752, the amount can be accommodated in the budget because the state assessment for retired teacher health care decreased by $56,489, Griffin said.

Selectman Paul Carlson commended Griffin and his team for their work in presenting a budget without shortfalls.

"It's a stunning change and a lot of people deserve credit for it," said Carlson.

The board supported the amendments and article 4-0 (Chairman Gary Vanderweil was absent).

THE HOUSE AND SENATE. Beacon Hill Roll Call records local representatives' votes on four roll calls and local senators' votes on two roll calls from the week of September 24-28.

DIVEST STATE FUNDS FROM COMPANIES CONDUCTING BUSINESS IN SUDAN (H 4172)

House 154-2, approved a bill ordering the $50 billion state pension fund to divest itself of any investments in companies that do business in Sudan. Supporters said that this is a moral issue and urged the state not to help the Sudanese government fund its genocide campaign in Darfur that has killed up to 400,000 people and displaced 2.5 million from their homes. Opponents said that the issue is a very complicated one and noted that conditions on the ground in Sudan have changed since the bill was originally drafted. They said that legislators do not have a good understanding of what is now taking place in Darfur. Michael Travaglini, executive director of the state's pension board, at a public hearing in March reluctantly opposed the bill. He noted that the board's main job is to maximize profits from investments. The Senate in June approved a different version of the bill. The House version now goes back to the Senate for consideration. (A "Yes" vote is for the bill ordering the pension fund to divest itself of any investments in companies that do business in Sudan. A "No" vote is against the bill).

DIVEST FROM ALL TERRORIST NATIONS (H 4172)

House 32-124, rejected an amendment ordering the state pension fund to divest itself of any corporation that does business with a government designated by the U.S. State Department as a sponsor of terrorism. The list includes Sudan, Cuba, Iran, North Korea and Syria. Amendment supporters said that they support the Sudan divestment but argued that is just as important to divest funds from other terrorist nations. They noted that all five nations are among the most dangerous in the world and should not be rewarded by the state of Massachusetts. Some amendment opponents said that they would support the expanded divestiture but urged that the House wait until bills dealing separately with this expansion issue are considered later in the year. Others said that Darfur divestment comes first because there is genocide taking place. (A "Yes" vote is for the amendment divesting the state's pension fund of any corporation that does business with Sudan, Cuba, Iran, North Korea and Syria. A "No" vote is against the amendment and supports only the Sudan divestiture).

DIVEST FROM ALL NATIONS WITH GENOCIDE (H 4172)

House 53-101, rejected an amendment ordering the state pension fund to divest itself of any corporation that does business with any nation with a history of genocide or of suspected genocide as determined by federal or state government. Amendment supporters said that the amendment would broaden the scope of the bill and send a message to all nations in which genocide is occurring and may occur in the future. Amendment opponents did not offer any arguments. (A "Yes" vote is for the amendment ordering the pension fund to divest itself of any corporation that does business with any nation with a history of genocide or of suspected genocide. A "No" vote is against the amendment).

RULING OF CHAIR ON DIVESTING FROM IRAN (H 4172)

House 135-21, upheld the ruling of Acting House Speaker Paul Donato (D-Medford) prohibiting consideration of an amendment requiring the state pension fund to divest its holdings in companies doing business with Iran. This restriction would be in addition to the Sudan divestiture. Supporters of the speaker's ruling said that the House has already defeated an amendment that includes divestiture from four additional terrorist nations including Iran. They argued that under House rules this new amendment is duplicative and should not be admitted for consideration. Opponents of the speaker's ruling said that this amendment is different because it is more narrowly focused and only adds Iran to the Sudan divestiture. They argued that Iran is a major sponsor of terrorism and violator of human rights. They noted that Iran is working toward developing a nuclear bomb and has threatened to destroy Israel. (A "Yes" vote is for the speaker's ruling prohibiting consideration of the Iran amendment. A "No" vote is against the speaker's ruling and favors consideration of the Iran amendment).

BAN USE OF DISHWASHER DETERGENTS WITH PHOSPHOROUS (S 536)

Senate 32-0, approved and sent to the House a bill banning by July 2010 the use of phosphorous in dishwasher detergents used in household dishwashers. Current law exempts these detergents from the 1994 phosphorous ban on all household cleaning products. Supporters said that household dishwashing detergents were exempted from the 1994 law because at that time many people were concerned that dishwashing detergents without phosphorous did not adequately clean dishes and utensils. They noted that things have changed and that there is now proof that specific dishwashing detergents without phosphorous do in fact clean sufficiently. Supporters also argued that the ban would help reduce the flow of this dangerous substance that causes damage to our rivers and streams. (A "Yes" vote is for the ban).

OCEAN MANAGEMENT (S 2346)

Senate 33-0, approved and sent to the House a bill requiring the state to develop and implement an ocean management plan. Supporters said that the bill would ensure that the state has a statewide and comprehensive plan to balance the commercial and recreational uses of oceans and the protection of their environmental value. They noted that proposals for liquefied natural gas (LNG) terminals, gas pipelines, telecommunications cables and wind energy facilities must be carefully considered along with the need to preserve the oceans and the environment. Some noted that the current system spreads out this responsibility among several government agencies in a piecemeal, confusing and inconsistent manner. (A "Yes" vote is for the bill).

Beechwood Ballpark, a learning field

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

If you had the time, it was a treat to observe the opening of the new Beechwood Little League ball field. It demonstrated an exercise in cooperation by everyone in town who participated. Many of the features of the field are not immediately apparent. It's not only capable of supporting baseball, but other sports, and it acts as a playground for younger kids. The field itself was created using the latest recommended green procedures, for environmentally friendly turf and plantings. The entire area gives one a sense of cooperation in the public interest.

The only cloud on the horizon was the fact that the soils on which the field was built were incompatible with putting in a proper septic system. When so called alternative systems were investigated, it was found that appropriate intermittent-use public toilet facilities such as those planned for the field are prohibited for new construction. Soil was such that any septic system proposed would need a large mounded leaching field, perhaps a nuisance for a homeowner, but impossible for a base runner. Moreover, the use of acceptable alternatives: so called composting toilets, proposed by the state, were found to be associated with unreliable operation and high maintenance costs making them too costly from a maintenance standpoint. Public toilets in large towns and cities are used with sufficient frequency that a subsidized fee-based system is warranted. Such a solution for a small town doesn't make economic sense. Public toilets in cities cost hundreds of thousands of dollars and maintenance is equally prohibitive. For these reasons, the public toilet facilities planned for the ball field are on hold until the town can have a dialog with the state and reach an agreement that pleases everybody. Meanwhile, hold is the appropriate word. But the field is open and will begin to be integrated into our children's list of activities.

Perhaps, now is the time to reflect on the entire youth sports scene. Nowadays, our kids are bombarded with so much information and participate in so many activities that it's hard for parents to create an appropriate balance of all the requisites for their youngsters. Sports played on public areas form a commonplace part of your children's experience. Parents should expect that the rules, which exist in a public park, might be different from those to which the parent or the child is accustomed.

Code of conduct:

Developmental sports such as Little League provide "successful" experiences through fundamental skill development, not a "winning only" philosophy. Skill development ultimately provides the tools for a more competitive winning focus or experience. Parents of participants should refrain from criticizing or exhibiting frustrations toward opposing coaches, players, fans and officials in any way. This distraction will only have a negative impact on your child's, as well as other children's overall experience. However, it's appropriate to discuss any concerns regarding the activity with the coach or league supervisor before or after the event in a courteous and respectful manner. The National Youth Sports Coaches Association has issued a Parents' Code of Ethics Pledge that is designed to promote a "successful experience" in sports as follows:

- Encourage good sportsmanship by demonstrating positive support for all players, coaches and officials at every game, practice or other youth sports event.
- Place the emotional and physical well being of my child ahead of a personal desire to win.
- Insist that my child play in a safe and healthy environment.
- Support coaches and officials working with my child in order to encourage a positive and enjoyable experience for all.
- Demand a sports environment for my child that is free of drugs and alcohol, and refrain from their use at all youth sports events.
- Remember that the game is for youth — not for adults.
- Do your very best to make youth sports fun for the child.
- Ask your child to treat other players, coaches, fans and officials with respect regardless of race, sex, creed or ability.

'North Cohasset is all dried up'

To the Editor:

As the North Cohasset resident who appeared before the Water Commissioners on Sept. 26, to discuss the North Cohasset water crisis, I would like to invite those interested in being kept apprised of upcoming discussions to contact me. I do not know where the discussions will lead to, but it would be productive to have an intelligent exchange of perspectives on possible solutions.

Whether you are from North Cohasset or elsewhere in town; you are a potential stakeholder in decisions that may arise from discussions. Certainly, the process will involve various town boards and the Aquarion Water Company. If you want to be in on the "ground floor," and contribute to solution(s); I encourage you to contact me: Telephone: 781-383-0505; Fax: 781-383-9762' email: cohjoe@aol.com; or by note/letter c/o Joseph R. McElroy, 59 Windy Hill Road, Cohasset, MA 02025. I would note that email is the most efficient mode of communications.

Halloween train start is safety issue

To the Editor:

In a recent, Sept. 27, article in the Journal regarding the inauguration of the Greenbush Line, it cites Oct. 31 as the first day of full service. I would very much like to suggest that the MBTA reconsider this particular day as the first full running of the trains.

As we all know, Oct. 31 is Halloween, a day when every child is champing at the bit to dress up and go out trick-or-treating. They start long before dark and continue into the evening hours going house to house, paying little attention to anything beyond the next front door and the treats that await them.

This night is dangerous enough not just for the children but drivers who must be extremely alert to these small children. The shortest distance to the next house is the way a child will go regardless of the difficulty in maneuvering a front lawn, a back yard or train tracks!

We have been reading for weeks about the train testing (with warning horns) and the dangers involved. There have been special meetings at the local schools citing the dangers. The police have had articles in the Journal citing the dangers to all regarding the trains and now the MBTA chooses Halloween day/night to inaugurate the first full running of the trains, (without warning horns), 24 trips per day and night.

I fully realize that of course these trains will be running next Oct. 31 however, after a year of familiarity we would hope that children would be fully aware of the trains and the dangers connected to them and would avoid the tracks at all cost.

Further thought should be given to this particular date. We have been living with the building of the Greenbush Line for years. One more day is not too much to ask. The death of a small child caught up in the excitement of Halloween, cutting over the train tracks to the next treat would be a tragedy beyond comprehension, all for the sake of one day.

Please MBTA executives, reconsider this date and start Nov. 1.

Save commercial fishing in Cohasset harbor

The following is a copy of a letter sent Sept. 18, 2007, by Cohasset Harbor Committee member Adam Donovan to Gary Vanderweil, Chairman of the Cohasset Board of Selectmen:

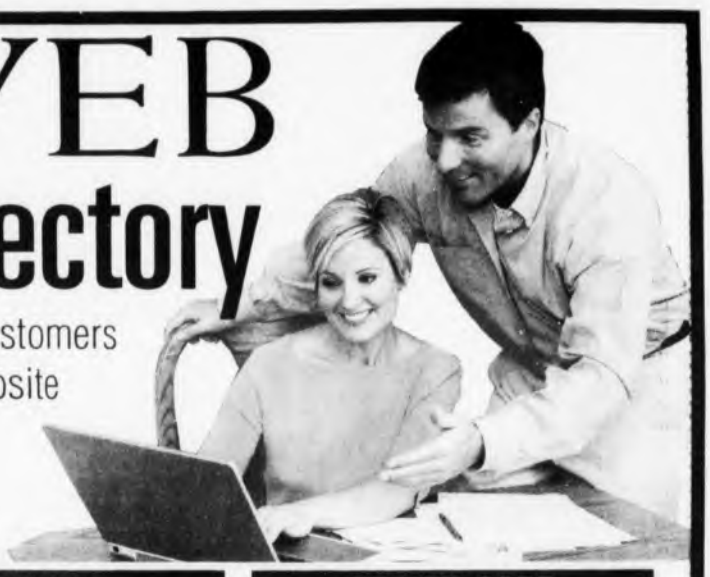
To the Editor:

I would like to use this letter as a way to introduce myself as well as to address an issue facing the town. My name is Adam Donovan. I grew up in Cohasset and in the past few years have started a fishing business based out of Cohasset harbor. I am a member of the Cohasset Harbor Committee. I disagree with the letter sent to you from the Cohasset Harbor Committee. The meeting at which the letter was outlined was never brought to my attention, so I was not present to add my comments. I would like to take this opportunity to add my thoughts and opinions.

The issue faced in the harbor today with regard to the commercial fleet is ultimately about the sustainability of the local fishing economy. These small business owners have been a part of the fabric of Cohasset since its early history. Commercial fishing is a part of this town and through its history fishing has never been an easy job. There are many variables and factors that go into running a fishing operation and now we must contend with the larger issue of ensuring a sustainable fleet. Many fishermen are forced into "leasing" a mooring to operate out of their homeport. These are men who have spent countless hours, just like any other small business owner, at their craft. It is not as simple as just throwing a boat in the water and heading out. It takes a great amount of time and experience to achieve the level of knowledge necessary to be successful. Losing a mooring in Cohasset could severely cripple or even destroy an individuals operation if they were forced to leave and find another port.

I acknowledged this risk when I started fishing in Cohasset. I grew up in this town, I have some of my fondest memories here, and I want to remain a part of Cohasset. The issue of one day losing a mooring in the harbor was a risk that I had to take in order to start my career in Cohasset. Does this mean I made a bad business decision? It could. I am not looking to anyone for pity or a handout, I want to bring this situation the attention it demands. I am not the only one in this situation. Many fellow fishermen have taken the same path I am on. If they lose their mooring, they have to leave. These are people that have been fishing a long time in Cohasset and have families to support. They have cultivated a vast knowledge of the waters off Cohasset, been a part of the community and the local economy, many of them for several generations.

The commercial mooring regulations need to be revised. At present, there is a waiting list for the moorings, just like any other mooring in the harbor. There is no distinction between a commercial and recreational mooring. But, as we all know, commercial moorings are used for vastly different purposes than recreational ones. To a fisherman, the mooring becomes an integral part of ones business. As part of an individuals business, as well as to maintain the sustainability of the commercial fleet, it is important that these moorings be accessible to individuals who are actively engaged in or want to start a career in commercial fishing. The only other options are to incur the large risk of one day losing a mooring that an individual has "leased" or decide you want to start a career in fishing in Cohasset, wait 10 to 20 years on a waiting list, and then, if you are lucky, start fishing.



The current mooring regulations have put the sustainability of the commercial fleet into question. What happens when we start losing boats? Or when the son of a fishermen can not continue the family business in Cohasset? People are being forced into a situation that has a solution, but that solution has been left unaddressed for far too long. It would be very unfortunate to see business owners forced out of a community that they know so well because of a flawed mooring system.

This issue needs the attention it demands. I would very much enjoy the opportunity to discus what could be done, as well as listen to your thoughts and answer any questions you might have. I know this is a problem we can solve and in doing so make our town a better place.

Skippers hard to handle

Defense takes off in route of rival

By Joel Racicot
JRACICOT@CNC.COM

It's been 10 quarters of football since Cohasset has allowed an opposing team to score a point. That was back in the first half of the Archbishop Williams game three weeks ago. To go ahead and keep that streak going against Scituate during Saturday's 28-0 drubbing at Alumni Field proves the Skippers are for real.

The Sailor offense prides itself on putting points on the board, but for all its unusual formations and trickery, little was garnered.

"I want the kids to be confident but I also want them to be focused," Cohasset coach Pete Afanasiw said about his defense.

Afanasiw took over the Skippers defense at the beginning of this season and implemented a number of different schemes, all the while instilling an attitude that each player is responsible for the defense's success as a whole. With a 4-0 record heading into South Shore League play, it's clear the team is taking to the revamped D.

The biggest play in Saturday's game came early in the fourth quarter when Scituate faced a fourth-and-goal from the Skippers 5-yard line, trailing 13-0. Scituate quarterback Joe Barisano went back to pass, attempted to dump a short pass in the end zone, when Mark Flibotte jumped in front of the receiver and intercepted the ball, returning it 100 yards for a Cohasset touchdown and ending any chance the Sailors had for a comeback.

The biggest play in Saturday's game came early in the fourth quarter when Scituate faced a fourth-and-goal from the Skippers 5-yard line, trailing 13-0.

Facing Scituate is a defensive back's dream. Cohasset took full advantage, Flibotte finished with two picks, while John Maher added a beautiful one-handed snag near the Scituate sideline in the second quarter.

"During the week we were deciding whether to go zone or man-to-man, and we decided on man," Afanasiw said. "We applied what we did in practice well, guys were where they needed to be and we got a good pass rush."

P.J. McCaw and Cliff Musto kept the pressure on Barisano, forcing him out of the pocket and putting him on his back a number of times.

Stephen Hurlbut, Jake Cuneo and Nick Lieberman also played strong on the line. Barisano completed only three passes in the first half, 11 total for the game. Anyone familiar with the Scituate offense knows how impressive those defensive totals are. Kyle Pinkus led Cohasset with 12 tackles.

The offense also played very well. Pinkus scored the first touchdown of the game on a 22-yard draw play. The 7-0 score would remain until Cohasset took the opening drive of the second half 60 yards for a

Win streak at two

Boys soccer rebounds from string of losses with big wins

By Joel Racicot
JRACICOT@CNC.COM

"Our goal is to make the tournament so we have to stop getting the minimum for wins."
Cohasset head coach Jim Willis

After losing three games in a row, this week provided an opportunity for the Cohasset boys soccer team to right the ship. So far they have done that in impressive fashion with a 4-0 win over Hull and a 5-1 win Wednesday over Mashpee.

The Skippers are now 3-3-2 overall, 3-3-1 in South Shore League play.

Sam Roth scored two goals against the Falcons and added two assists against the Pirates. Mike Grimm notched a pair of assists against Mashpee and two goals against Hull. Ivan Sceery totaled three goals this week, two coming against the Hawks.

"We have to get ahead a little," Cohasset head coach Jim Willis said. "Our goal is to make the tournament so we have to stop getting the minimum for wins."

Getting back to .500 is important and now the Skippers face most teams for the second time around. Those prospects sound enticing to Willis, who thinks his team is only getting better with each new game.

"We are playing so much better, the team's confidence is high," Willis said. "We just have to play together as a group, and we have done that over the last couple days."

There were no lingering affects from a 2-0 loss to east Bridgewater and a 3-0 loss to Carver. The boys started playing to each others feet, rather than over their heads. Captains Grimm, Roth, Ryan Crough and Evan Deutch will have to play well in the second half of the season if the Skippers want to qualify for the postseason.

Matt Burgess anchored the defense during the two wins this week, and he along with Will Wise in net, Conor Ofsthun and Own Landon must provide strong play in the back.

"There are no excuses now," Willis said. "If we continue to get better we will make the tournament."

Field hockey team sets pace

Girls 5-2-2 as they prepare for second half of season

By Joel Racicot
JRACICOT@CNC.COM

The Cohasset High School field hockey team continues its impressive start with a 5-2-2 overall record. The Skippers tied East Bridgewater, 1-1, Tuesday after beating the Vikings the first go-round at home. Cohasset coach Deb Bostwick is pleased with the overall play from the team, but wasn't too thrilled with Tuesday's outcome.

"We didn't bring our 'A' game in the first half," Bostwick said. "I could tell when we got off the bus we weren't ready to play, we came out flat."

The slow start was spelled with a dominating second half. Senior captain Paige Strecker scored early in the half on an offensive corner. Alyssa Mullin turned in a very strong game in net, saving 9-of-10 shots against her.

"She played outstanding," Bostwick said of her goalie.

Olivia Kimla, Izzy Franklin, Kaleigh Teague and Lucy Noble also contributed to the effort with solid play.

"I told them at halftime that this was 'horrendous' and that 'I didn't know this team,'" Bostwick said.

She was particularly happy with the second half effort of senior captain Sally Meehan, who controlled the end of the game.

The girls routed Hull, 7-1, Friday. Kimla and Katina Martone both scored a pair of goals, while Franklin, May McCarthy and Lesen Haracz scored the rest. Meehan added three assists.

"Sally had good strides, Lauren Mack and Marissa Tangherlini had good performances as well," Bostwick said.

Chrissy Kent got the win in net.

Cohasset beat Carver, 3-2, at home last Wednesday. Kimla and Meehan scored in the first half with Martone netting the game winner. Mullin and Kent combined for the win in net.

The goal now for Cohasset is to qualify for the state tournament and possibly a league crown.

"When they dig down and play with their hearts they are effective," Bostwick said.

CYBSA Major League Tryouts

The try-outs for the 2008 CYBSA major league baseball season will be held Saturday, Oct. 13 at Barnes Field from 1:00 p.m. to 3:30 p.m. All boys and girls who are age 10 prior to May 1, 2008 and no older than age 12 on April 30, 2008 and who are not currently on a CYBSA major league baseball team are invited to try-out. All 12 year olds (born between May 1, 1995 and April 30, 1996) who attend the tryouts are automatically selected for a Major League team, provided that these players attend the tryout. Players should register at Barnes Field beginning at 12 noon. This will be the only opportunity to try-out. The rain date will be Saturday, Oct. 20. Please visit our website CYBSA.net for more information. Questions regarding the tryouts may be directed to Liam O'Connell @ (781)383-9538 or Nancy Froio @ (781)383-1897.

Recreation Notes

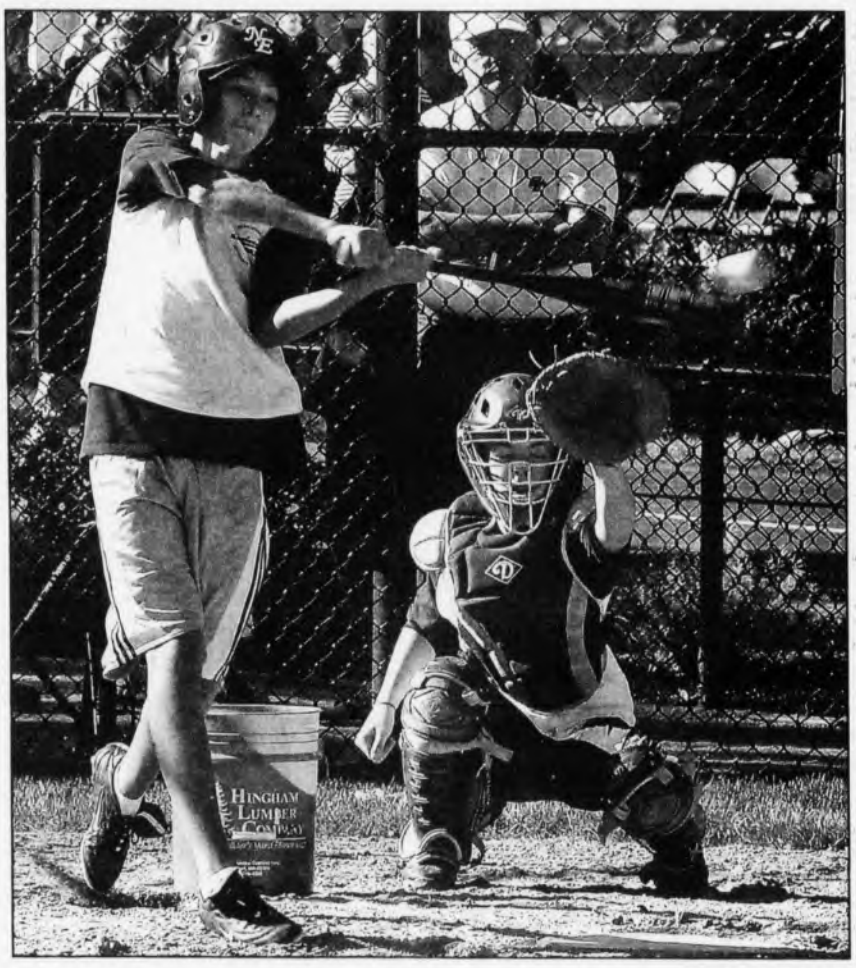
The Cohasset Recreation Commission in the Cohasset Town Hall at 41 Highland Ave., Cohasset is accepting registrations for the following programs. For information call 781-383-4109.

Open Gym – This program, for boys and girls in grades 8 through 12, conducted by CHS Head Boys Varsity Basketball coach, Dorian Bryant, and coaches from the Cohasset Basketball Boosters Club, will take place at CHS from 5:30 to 8 p.m., Tuesday and Wednesdays, Oct. 9, through Nov. 14. No pre-registration is necessary.

Cohasset Recreation/-Boosters Basketball – Cohasset Recreation Department Booster Basketball registrations, for boys and girls in grades 1 through 8, will be held from 9 to 11 a.m., Saturday, Oct. 13, at the Town Hall. The fee for the program is $75 and checks can be made payable to Cohasset Basketball Boosters Club (CBBC). A shirt charge is included in the fee. Details on the Basketball Program will be available at registration. Games are played on Saturdays, but not during any vacation periods in order to avoid any conflicts.

The Recreational Basketball Program is made available via the joint efforts of the Cohasset Basketball Boosters Club and the Recreation Department, and will provide youngsters with both a learning and a recreational opportunity. Coaches and sponsors are needed and may sign up at registration. Every effort should be made to register Saturday, Oct. 13, as there is a limit to the total number of players and teams that they can accommodate.

Fall Basketball Tune Up – For boys and girls in grades 5 through 8, this four-session basketball program, directed by CHS head Varsity Basketball coach Dorian Bryant, will be held from 5 to 7 p.m., Mondays and from 8:30 to 10:30 a.m., Saturdays beginning Monday, Oct. 15, through Saturday, Oct. 27, at the CHS gym. The program will focus on fundamental skills; shooting gun machine, drill stations, dribbling and offensive skill development. Participants will be grouped by age and skill level.



Registration material and detailed information are available in Cohasset Town Hall foyer outside the recreation office. The cost of the program is $55 for four sessions, $30 for two sessions and $15 for one session. Checks can be made payable to the South Shore and Cape Basketball Academy and may be left in the Recreation Department office.

Learn to Ski Program – The Cohasset Recreation Department in conjunction with Buckles and Boards Ski Shop of Marshfield will hold registrations for the Learn to Ski and Snowboard Program from 3 to 5 p.m., Tuesday, Nov. 13, at the Cohasset Recreation Department office. Trips will be to Waterville Valley and Loon Mountain. The program will be open to all ages, but children must be able to participate on their own. There will be an adult chaperone to assist however, children must be able to function with minimal assistance. Ages 7 and over are recommended for participation in this program.

For security purposes, Buckles and Boards will require a current 2 inch by 2 inch photo of your child. The photo wilt be affixed to the registration form and used for identification purposes.

The fee is $289.99 per student, which includes four-one and a half hour lessons, and five full-day ski lift tickets The program will include a trip Sunday, Dec. 9, and four Saturday trips, Jan. 5 and 26, Feb. 9, and March 1. Skippers perfect early touchdown. Sam DeGiacomo rumbled in from four yards out for the score.

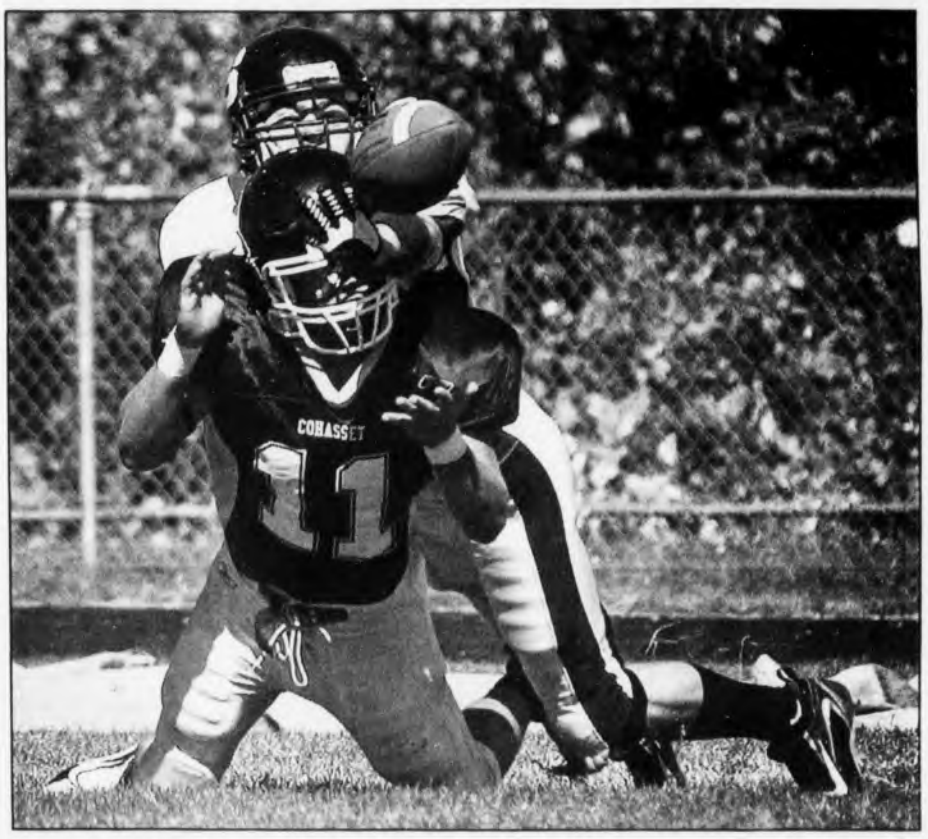
"It meant a lot to have them chasing two scores instead of one," Afanasiw said.

Dana Valentine added a score late in the fourth quarter.

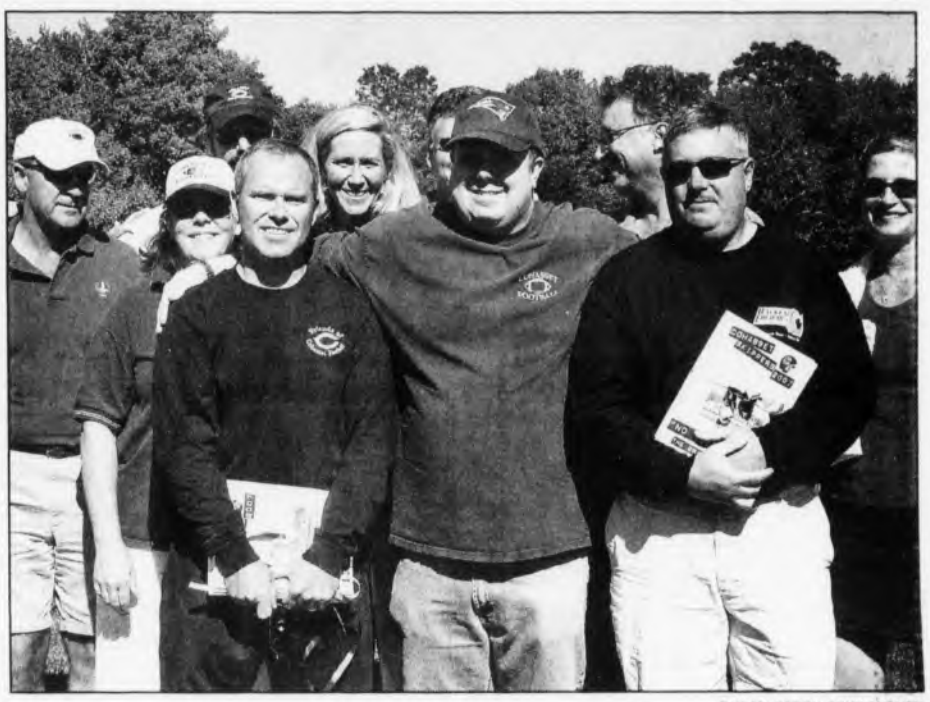
Cohasset didn't turn the ball over once. That consistency and discipline starts with quarterback David Snowdale.

"He did a good job," Afanasiw said. "Scituate was committed to shut down the option but David found open receivers when he had to."

Snowdale finished with 47 passing yards on four completions. Pinkus rushed for 81 yards, while McCaw (40 yards) and Valentine (30 yards) did the rest.



Cohasset hosts Carver tonight (Friday, Oct. 5) at 7.



The battle against the Crusaders is the opening game of the South Shore League schedule. East Bridgewater, Abington and Cohasset are all 4-0 heading into league play.

The Skippers are at the top of the class but they understand there will be no easy courses.

"Now we are a marked team," Afanasiw said. "We are not under anyone's radar."

CORRECTION

Pat Doonan was the star defensive player from last week's win over Cardinal Spellman. His name was inadvertently spelled wrong in the story "Showdown Saturday" in the September 28, issue of the Cohasset Mariner. We regret the error.

SCHOOLS

Students should remember the Golden Rule

LIFE AT CHS

CHRISTINE KENT

Attention students! Put your dukes down and open your eyes to the real world. Though this concept was taught in kindergarten it is evident by a recent disgusting act of violence against a CHS sophomore that the Golden Rule, related to treat others the way you would like to be treated has become forgotten by some. I would just like to say, all of us have a responsibility to make sure this type of event does NOT happen. We all deserve to be treated kindly by one another, so relax.

On a lighter note, the varsity football team is currently a force to be reckoned with, as they stand undefeated. Their triumphant win over Scituate in the much anticipated weekend match marks the teams fourth consecutive win! Soon enough, other teams will be taking pictures of our footballers or possibly asking for autographs.... Great job guys.

In the middle school, the sixth graders returned from their pilgrimage to Camp Bourndale, with no broken bones or illnesses it's safe to say the trip was a success! Apparently, rocketry took center stage as the favorite activity. Hmm, I guess we have some up and coming rocket scientists in the making so seventh graders watch out. In addition, the winners of the Student Council elections were announced. Congratulations to eighth-grader, Steven Bumstead, who won the coveted title of President. Seventh graders cleaned up as Andrew Barrett won the role as Treasurer, and Nick Brown for Secretary (younger brother of High School's Student Body President, Lenny Brown). The Browns may be the next big name in politics with all their political success!

Now for the week's top stories:

• Monday, Oct. 1: The National Honour Society started to sell tickets for a raffle. The prize, a new Ipod Nano. Students, you better hurry and get tickets now!

• Tuesday, Oct. 2: The girl's varsity field hockey team faced off against rivals, East Bridgewater in a nail biting game. On their home turf EB proved to be up for the challenge and took the lead with the first half of the game. However, the end result was a tie of 1-1.

Wednesday, Oct. 3: Student Council for the high school met after school to discuss the super fan shirts which will be sold as a senior class fundraiser. The shirts will be available to parents, students, faculty, and one else interested in purchasing a stylish new t-shirt!

Thursday, Oct. 4: HALF DAY for students!

Friday, Oct. 5: No school due to Professional Day!!

Christine Kent is a senior at CHS. Her column appears weekly in the Mariner.

Ban on outdoor school activities lifted

The Cohasset Public Schools has decided to lift the ban on all outdoor activities on school property between the hours of 6:30 p.m. and 7:30 a.m.

Due to public health concerns this past summer regarding the EEE Virus, the Cohasset Public Schools made the decision, as a precaution, to ban all outdoor activities on school properties between the hours of 6:30 p.m. and 7:30 a.m. This ban took effect on Aug. 20.

Since that date, ongoing monitoring of the test results of mosquito traps in the Cohasset area have been received from the Plymouth County Mosquito Control Project. No positive cases had been found. As of Monday, Oct. 1, they shut down their mosquito-spraying program due to a lack of activity in the traps. This status could change if any positive cases are found. The Cohasset Public Schools has decided to lift the ban on all outdoor activities on school property between the hours of 6:30 p.m. and 7:30 a.m.

Parents are reminded that there are still risks associated with mosquito borne illnesses. Parents are urged to use caution and follow the EEE Safety Fact Sheet. Copies of the EEE Safety Fact Sheet will be available at all Cohasset Public Schools and at the following website mass.gov/dph/snv/wnv1.htm

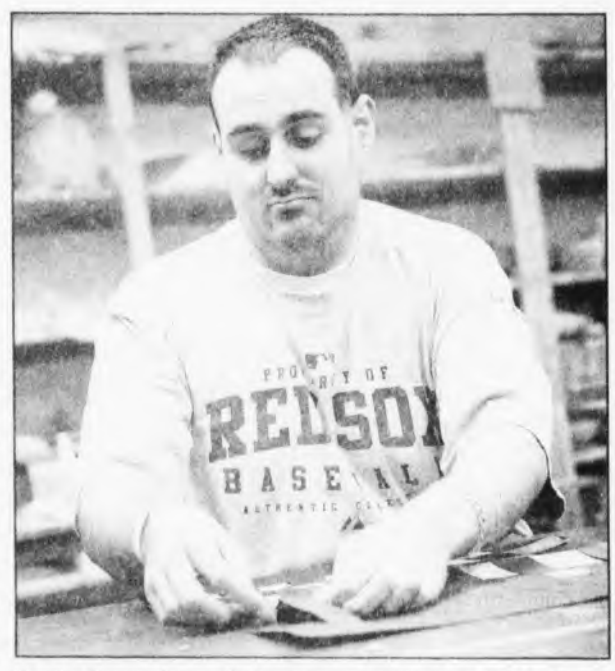
Arc of the South Shore to host fundraiser

Arc of the South Shore announces it will once again host Art from the Heart Art Show and Wine Tasting. Presented by South Shore Co-operative Bank, the third annual fundraising event will spotlight the artistic talents of children and adults with intellectual and developmental disabilities. It will take place from 5 to 8 p.m., on Oct. 13, at Thayer Academy, 745 Washington St., Braintree. The event, which has been at South Shore Art Center in Cohasset for the past two years, will be at Thayer Academy to accommodate the demand.

Attendees will be offered an array of art that will be for sale, while being treated to wine, a variety of international beers and s hors d'oeuvres from the evening's restaurant partner Bia Bistro. Guests will also have the opportunity to bid on silent and live auction prizes while enjoying live entertainment provided by the Haley School of Irish Step Dancers. Some auction items up for grabs this year include a one-week stay at the Beach Club on St. Simons Island in Georgia, a Vera Bradley tote bag and a Lyn Evans for Potpourri Designs wardrobe party for six.

In the past two years, Art from the Heart has raised more than $80,000 for Arc of the South Shore. For the first time in the event's history, this year's proceeds will benefit the Early Intervention and the Community Recreation programs.

"The Early Intervention and Community Recreation programs are at the heart of our organization," said Daryl Cook, executive director of Arc of the South Shore. "This event will help raise money to support these departments which have traditionally been dramatically under-funded."



In honor of this upcoming event, Arc of the South Shore and local libraries have teamed up to promote the event and educate the public on services provided by Arc artists' during September. Paintings from the event will be on display at the Tufts Library in Weymouth, Thomas Crane Library in Quincy, Scituate Town Library, Paul Pratt Memorial Library in Cohasset, Hull Public Library, Hingham Public Library and Norwell Public Library, along with the libraries' books on early intervention and developmental disabilities. Artwork will also be on display at South Shore Co-operative branches in Quincy, Weymouth and East Bridgewater.

The community is invited support this cause. Tickets to the Art from the Heart Art Show and Wine Tasting are $50 each. To purchase tickets or to make a donation to Arc of the South Shore, make checks payable to The Arc of the South Shore and mail to 371 River St., Weymouth, MA 02191. For more information, call Claudia Cuscianna at 781-413-2230 or email ccuscianna@arc-southshore.org. Corporate sponsorships are also available for this event.

Annual Bark 'n Howl Ball Fundraiser

Join WATD's news diva Christine James and the hard-working 3A Farm Fund volunteers from 7 p.m. to midnight, Saturday, Oct. 27, at the third annual Bark 'n Howl Ball that will rock the rafters at the Hatherly Country Club in Scituate. The annual ball is the highlight of the fall season and the popular local band, Section 8, promises to keep you hopping. James, a faithful longtime supporter of the shelter, will be welcomed back for her third stint as the master of ceremonies.

Tickets are $50 each and are available at the Scituate Animal Shelter on the Driftway. The Bark 'n Howl Ball is a fun evening with great food, music and dancing, live and silent auction prizes and all proceeds help the Scituate Animal Shelter relocate from the Driftway to the 3A Farm.

The land at the 3A Farm where the new shelter will be built has been purchased, but fundraising efforts continue to pay down the mortgage received from Rockland Trust. As of May, 2007, the capital campaign met the initial goal of $800,000 in gifts and pledges. The group now needs to sell a one-acre lot and raise another $180,000 to complete the project. Thanks to a generous donation of architectural services from Artisan Architecture, the shelter design is nearly complete.

"We're almost there" is the group's motto; and the Friends of the Scituate Animal Shelter are very close to realizing this wonderful gift to pets in need and residents of the South Shore.

For more information and to follow the progress of the relocation, visit www.town.scituate.ma.us/animalshelter, www.3afarmfund.com, or call the shelter at 781-545-8703, between 3 and 5 p.m., Wednesday through Friday, and from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m., Saturdays.

Legion seeking donations for those deployed

Donations may be dropped off at the Legion Post on Summer Street daily after 3 p.m. or at Pilgrim Cooperative Bank branches on 3A or in the village.

The George H. Mealy American Legion Post 118 is seeking donations of toiletries and other items for those deployed to Iraq and Afghanistan. Donations may be dropped off at the Legion Post on Summer Street daily after 3 p.m. or at Pilgrim Cooperative Bank branches on 3A or in the village.

Monetary donations are also accepted. Checks should be made out to the Sons of the American Legion, with "Soldiers Project" written in the memo line on the check. Checks can be mailed to Sons of the American Legion, PO Box 118, Cohasset, MA 02025. The following items are being collected at the American Legion for deployed servicemen and women:

Batteries - AA and AAA, razors, mouthwash, Chapstick, nuts, shaving cream Ziploc bags of all sizes, hand warmers, baby wipes, pens and notepaper, Pringles, toothbrushes, toothpaste and floss.

Also, sports magazines, local newspapers, socks, T-shirts, candy (no chocolate), phone cards, peanut butter and crackers, dry tuna in a bag, deodorant, winter hats and gloves, gum, mints, Lifesavers, Q-Tips, sunscreen, soap and body wash, dry soup, beef jerky, Tylenol, Advil, Excedrin and cameras.

Also, athlete's foot cream or spray, bandanas, socks, Bounce dryer sheets, chap sticks, ground coffee, CoffeeMate, antibiotic cream, duct tape, used CD or DVD's, paperbacks, knee-hi hose, cologne, Band-Aids, a variety of shoe inserts, playing cards, black pens, writing pads, envelopes, puzzle magazines, flea collars, lens cleaner for glasses, Ramen noodles in the cup, breakfast bars, gum, single-serve packets hot chocolate or soup, Pringles, hard candy, and microwave popcorn. Personal notes or cards are encouraged.

Coffee with the authors

Buttonwood Books and Toys will host a coffee with the authors from 9:45 to 11:30 a.m., Tuesday, Oct. 16, at the Atlantica Restaurant on Cohasset Harbor. This event will feature three authors, John Elder Robison, Leah Hager Cohen, and Michael C. White.

John Elder Robison will discuss "Look Me in the Life: My Life with Asperger's," his memoir that describes his own incredible journey from a tumultuous childhood through a dark adolescence to adulthood, with Asperger's. Robison is a keen storyteller, and is the elder brother of Augusten Burroughs, the author of "Running with Scissors."

Leah Hager Cohen has written successfully in fiction and nonfiction. Her latest work is fiction, but the feelings and relationships she describes are painfully real. "House Lights," set mostly in Boston and Cambridge, is a poignant account of a tight-knit family whose perfect world is abruptly changed. Cohen beautifully captures the invisible threads that bind people together.

Michael C. White emphasizes the complexity of character in his new book, "Soul Catcher." A Civil War-era novel, it is a story about a man whose talent is tracking and finding prey, particularly slaves. However, like many people there is more to the bounty hunter than his public persona. White's story is imaginative and provocative.

Reservations and tickets are required. Tickets cost $15 and may be picked up at Buttonwood or by sending a self-addressed stamped envelope with your check to Buttonwood Books & Toys, Shaw's Plaza, Route 3A, Cohasset, MA. 02025. Call Buttonwood at 781-383-2665 to reserve or order a signed copy if unable to attend.

Stop & Shop to offer flu and pneumonia vaccinations

The Stop & Shop Supermarket Company in partnership with Maxim Healthcare will offer influenza and pneumonia vaccinations in the pharmacy departments of select stores through Saturday, Nov. 17.

According to the Centers for Disease Control, it is especially important that individuals at higher risk for severe complications of the flu receive vaccinations. High risk individuals includes a person who meets any one of the following criteria: 50 years or older; resides in a nursing home or chronic care facility; has lung, heart, chronic metabolic disease: kidney, blood, or diabetes, or asthma; has any condition that can compromise respiratory function or the handling of respiratory secretions or that can increase the risk of aspiration; and pregnant individuals. For additional information, visit www.cdc.gov.

Maxim will provide Stop & Shop with the personnel and vaccines for the vaccination clinics. The cost for each flu vaccination is $30 and pneumonia vaccinations will be available to customers for $40. There is no charge for Medicare beneficiaries with Part B coverage.

Customers interested in receiving vaccinations may obtain additional information by calling 800-767-7772 or visiting Stop & Shop's Web site at www.stopandshop.com for specific clinic locations and times. No appointments are necessary, and Stop & Shop offers convenient evening and weekend hours.

Your dog can help cure cancer

By Larry Lindner
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

Scott donates 10 percent of all his earnings to cancer research, meaning that Lulu not only helped to heal him, but now she helps others, too.

When Scott Leaver of Hingham was recovering from brain surgery to remove a cancerous tumor the size of an apple, it was his dog Lulu who kept him company through the many hard months of chemotherapy. Between bouts of weakness and nausea, Scott started painting whimsical portraits of Lulu as a way of keeping his focus off the negative possibilities the future held. In a very important way, she helped him through the healing process.

Then, people started asking him if they could buy his paintings, and out of that grew his Web site, "Heal Good Dog," a virtual store that sells Lulu paintings, T-shirts, and other paraphernalia. Scott donates 10 percent of all his earnings to cancer research, meaning that Lulu not only helped to heal him, but now she helps others, too.

Through the Romp for Research, which will be held from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m., Sunday, Oct. 7, your own dog can also help to heal cancer patients. Scott has partnered with the Jimmy Fund at the Dana Farber Cancer Institute to devise a dog walk through Wompatuck State Park on Union Street in Hingham to raise money for a cancer cure. Music, coffee, bagels, and books on puppy care will be served up to the humans while the dogs mingle. The registration fee is $25.

Scott's South Shore roots go way back. His mother lived in Scituate and he and his wife, Sharyn and their daughter, Maggie lived in Hingham and now reside in Marshfield.

About Sunday's Romp for Research

Heal! Good dog presents the first Romp for Research, a dog-friendly fundraiser for The Jimmy Fund. This first of a kind event will be held from 10a.m. to 3p.m., Sunday, Oct. 7, at Wompatuck State Park on Union Street in Hingham.

"This fundraiser is unique because it's the first ever, dog-focused fundraiser the Jimmy Fund has ever officially recognized," said Scott Leaver of Heal! Good dog, and manager of the event. He added, "I wanted to organize a cancer fundraiser that was fun and underscored how much our pets contribute to our quality of life. As a brain cancer survivor and dog owner myself, I can attest to their amazing power to heal." Heal! Good dog is an online store featuring Leaver's artwork and "empowered" apparel, the sale of which helps fund cancer research.

The event will feature organized dog walks around scenic Wompatuck Park, which will include hidden raffle tickets to be returned for a chance to win great prizes. In addition, there will be raffle tickets on sale, face-painting, balloons, vendors featuring a variety of pet-focused and non-pet focused products, goodie bags with each registration, music, and prizes for top fundraisers. Coffee, bagels, soda, regular and flavored bottled waters, light fare and gourmet, human-grade doggie biscuits will be served.

Donations are $25 per adult with children under 12 free. All qualifying proceeds will be donated to the Jimmy Fund in Boston.

For more information call 781-974-7616, or visit www.healgooddog.com. The event is also featured on the Jimmy Fund Web site at www.jimmyfund.org and on the Town of Hingham events calendar at www.hingham-ma.com.

Obituaries

June E. DiGiacomandrea

Former office manager at Cardigan Nursing Home

June E. (Leith) DiGiacomandrea, 76, of Scituate, died suddenly Sept. 22, 2007, at South Shore Hospital.

Born and raised in Boston, Mrs. DiGiacomandrea graduated from Jamaica Plain High School, and moved to Scituate 39 years ago.

She had been employed as an office manager at Cardigan Nursing Home in Scituate for 25 years.

Mrs. DiGiacomandrea enjoyed gardening, bird watching, the ocean and Scituate Lighthouse. Her favorite memories were going with her family and grandchildren to Disney World, traveling to Aruba, the Poconos and weekends at the Cape. She loved to have her family and friends come to her home.

She leaves her husband, Daniel DiGiacomandrea; her children, Jean DiGiacomandrea of Scituate and Daniel DiGiacomandrea Jr. and his wife, Diane, of Fairport, N.Y.; her sister, Jean Gibson of Quincy; her grandchildren, Jonathan and Christopher; and many nieces and nephews.

A funeral service was on Thursday, Sept. 27, at Second Congregational Church, 43 Highland Ave., Cohasset, followed by burial in St. Mary's Cemetery, Scituate. Arrangements are by Richardson-Gaffey Funeral Home, Scituate.

Memorial donations may be made to American Diabetes Association, 1 Bromfield St., Boston, MA 02108.

CIA is focus of Inter-Religious lecture at Abbey

Glastonbury Abbey, 16 Hull St., Hingham, will present "Listening to Other Voices: Prophets of Compassion: Who Cares?" as part of their Inter-Religious Lecture Series, at 7:15 p.m., Thursday, Oct. 11, in the Glastonbury Conference Center.

Lloyd D. Salvetti will present a lecture on the CIA. "And ye shall know the truth, and the truth will set you free," is the CIA motto engraved into the marble on its Langley, Virginia headquarters, which is meant to show that the agency was created and exists to provide truth to our nation's leaders. What happened to that sense of purpose and does it still exist? What about the CIA and U.S. military engaging in activities which many view as contrary to core American values and universal ethical and moral principles? Where does compassion for others and a moral and ethical obligation fit into the mix?

A CIA officer for 32 years, Lloyd, who is now retired, will speak of his personal experiences, doubts, conflicts and the obligation of CIA officers to truth and truth telling. Mr. Salvetti served on the staff of the Sept. 11 Commission and presently is a consultant to the U.S. government and U.S. and foreign defense firms.

Reservations are recommended and can be made by calling 781-749-2155. Although the lecture is free, donations will be gratefully accepted.

'Arthur' author on the move

Brown now calls Martha's Vineyard home

By R. Scott Reedy
CORRESPONDENT

Halloween will be a little quieter in Hingham this year. And trick-or-treaters canvassing Main Street for candy probably won't find any front doors being answered by Arthur the aardvark, now that Marc Brown — creator of the famous cartoon character with the full name of Arthur Timothy Read — has moved to Martha's Vineyard.

"Each Halloween, I used to wear the Arthur costume and give away books instead of candy. After the story got play in the local and national news, people started coming from all over and it just got out of hand. The crowds got so big that we had to stop."

And the house got too big, too, for Brown and his wife, artist and psychologist Laurie Krasny Brown, his co-author on the Dino Life Guides for Families non-fiction series.

"After about 25 years living on Main Street in Hingham, we decided that it was just more house than we needed. Last year, we moved full-time to Martha's Vineyard where I could put my skills as a serial antique house renovator to work," explained Brown by telephone from his studio on the Vineyard last week. "Our house in Hingham is Arthur's house, of course, and I always think of Hingham as Arthur's hometown so that has the made the move easier. I'll still be drawing and writing about the area even though we aren't living there anymore."

Although Arthur's hometown has always been the fictional Elwood City, South Shore followers of the talking aardvark have long recognized familiar local sites in the many books Brown has written and illustrated since first creating the popular character some 30 years ago. Arthur's favorite movie house looks an awful lot like Loring Hall in downtown Hingham where one of Arthur's sisters, DW, took bike-riding lessons. In addition, the characters' bedrooms are modeled on the Main Street house where Brown brought up his own three children.

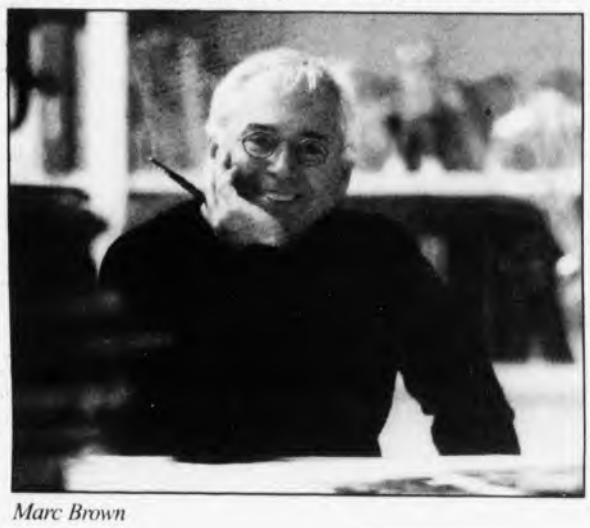
"Living in Hingham, which is such a beautiful place, made it natural for me to draw what was there. We may have left the wonderful house, but thanks to Arthur it will always be there. It's like taking it all with me."

For the 60-year-old Brown, who trained at the Cleveland Art Institute and worked as a truck driver, soda jerk, actor, chicken farmer, actor, short order cook, and college professor, Arthur has been a near-constant companion since he first wrote his first children's book about the character in 1976. It was based on a bedtime story that Brown told his oldest son, Tolon, about an aardvark who had problems with his nose. The aardvark was named Arthur and the story became "Arthur's Nose." Since then, Brown has written more than 100 best-selling books about the adventures of the anthropomorphic aardvark, his sisters, his good friends, Buster and Brain, and his nemesis, Francine, with 60 million books now in print in just the United States. Since 1996, the character has also been featured in a PBS-TV series, which has won six Emmy awards. This week, Arthur and company are at Boston's Colonial Theatre on the first stop of a two-year North American tour of "Arthur Live!," an interactive musical stage production on which Brown is serving as Executive Creative Consultant.

"With the success of the television series, we realized that Arthur also had great theatrical potential. He appeals to audiences from one-and-a-half to 12 years old. I sometimes even get letters from college kids who are still watching the TV show," Brown says with a laugh. "The live shows are a lot of fun for me. This time around we have more of a story. In the new show, we're bringing two of the books to life, 'Arthur's Tooth,' in which Arthur wishes to lose a tooth because all his friends have, and also 'Arthur Tricks the Tooth Fairy.' On-stage, Arthur will be dealing with his younger sisters."

Brown freely acknowledges that his own sister, Kim, is among the people on whom he has based his characters.

"My youngest sister is the real DW and other friends that I've had since third grade have been my inspiration, too."



A lot has happened since Brown's own childhood in Erie, Pa., and his work reflects that even as his favorite character remains ever youthful.

"The world has changed and so has Arthur, but he will always be in third grade. Arthur will never have to take the SATs."

"Arthur Live!" will be at the Colonial Theatre, 106 Boylston St., Boston, for five performances only, Oct. 6-7. For tickets and information, visit the box office, call 617-931-2787 or go online at broadway-acrossamerica.com.

Arthur and freinds.

Cook Estate

Planning Board to vote on project Wednesday

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

After nearly five months of hearings and continuances the Cook Estate's fate will finally be determined at the Planning Board's meeting next Wednesday, Oct. 17. The Planning Board closed the public hearing on the Cook Estate after reviewing outstanding issues remaining on the project plans.

The applicant, Abbott Real Estate and Development, purchased the 19-acre property located off Sohier Street. The plans are to transform the property, which now has one single family home, into a 27-home community under the town's residential cluster development bylaw.

The residential cluster development district allows for homes to be built closer together with open space on the edges. Despite the "cluster" of homes, there will be no more units built than would be allowed under normal subdivision.

Bia Bistro has grown

Village restaurant now offers private parties

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Bia Bistro is closing in on four years and in its very short tenure has won over many a stomach with its award-winning fare. Now, there is even more to love with a recently completed 30-seat dining room. The expansion will not only allow more patrons to frequent the restaurant, but also allow for a function space for private parties.

Chef Brian Houlihan, who owns Bia Bistro with his wife, Tristen, began receiving numerous calls in the spring asking if the restaurant could accommodate private parties. But, limited space precluded them from doing private parties. Essentially, a private party would necessitate shutting down the restaurant for an entire evening. When changes were imminent on the other side of the Samuel Bates House (35 South Main St.), Houlihan took the opportunity to expand his space by approximately 600 square feet.

The expansion has allowed him to have a separate and versatile 30-seat dining room that can be closed off for private parties or filled with patrons on the restaurant's busy Friday and Saturday nights.

"We still wanted to keep the bistro feel with the expansion," says Houlihan. Although Bia has nearly doubled in seating capacity, smaller rooms maintain the intimate atmosphere patrons have come to expect.

Combined with other recent changes, like the addition of a bar and an accompanying menu, Houlihan says Bia offers three distinct experiences. A couple can enjoy a romantic evening together with a bottle of wine. Friends can gather at the seven-seat bar to catch up with beers and burgers. While in the new dining room can hold a special function — birthday party, rehearsal dinner or business luncheons — for about 30 people with a customized menu.

Cohasset artists, Richard and Kimberlee Aleman, have a joint show, "On the Road: Italy and France" at the Dolphin Gallery at the Hingham Public Library. The photographs and oil paintings feature scenes from their travels.

Capturing the art of travel

Cohasset couple has exhibit at Hingham library

By Nancy White

Combining photos and travel is not a new idea; cameras and tourists have long been an inseparable pair. For Kimberlee and Richard Aleman photography has become not only a way to chronicle their trips, but also to capture the feel, colors and sights of their travels. As artists, the husband and wife duo find endless inspiration for their individual artistic pursuits.

The Cohasset residents visited Italy and France last September and found enough inspiration to fill the Dolphin Gallery at the Hingham Public Library. The gallery, "On the Road: Italy and France," will begin display through Oct. 27. The gallery features the Richard's photography and Kimberlee's oil paintings.

The combination takes the viewer through Northern Italy with the cypress trees of the countryside, the canals of Venice, the stunningly blue waters of Nice, to the colorful streets of Paris, the serenity of Monet's garden in Giverney and the immensity of the Eiffel Tower.

"We want people to walk away with a feeling of wanting to go to visit these wonderful places and an appreciation of the way we have seen Italy and France," says Kimberlee. For those who have visited Italy and France, "I hope they think we have captured what they saw," adds Richard.

Kimberlee works as the South Shore Arts Center graphic and web designer, but her first passion is painting. She was trained as a painter and considers it her first profession. Richard has been shooting photos since he was a teenager and it is more than a hobby for him. Both are juried at the South Shore Arts Center's 160 gallery artists.

Instead of hanging the gallery according to a more academic approach of lining up the pieces by city and country, the Alemans stressed the visual aspect of the gallery by placing like colors next to each other. There is a flow of luminous

DOE: 'Circuit breaker' overage goes to general fund

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

In the Department of Revenue's review of the town's finances, it found the schools had carried over too much money in their special education reimbursement account. As a result of the DOR order, the schools have returned $260,765 to the town's general fund to be accounted as free cash.

The state special education reimbursement fund, or "circuit breaker," is a revolving account established by the state legislators for use on special education costs. The account is outside of the operational budget exclusively for monies reimbursed by the state for special education costs. The circuit breaker can be used to pay (or pre-pay) out- of-district tuition or costs associated with special education in-district.

In December 2005, the state Department of the Education informed municipalities it would be changing the rules on circuit breaker grants in the upcoming months. In June 2006 after a public comment period, the state formally adopted new regulations regarding the circuit breaker grants. The regulations, which are enforced by the Department of Revenue, stipulated the amount of circuit breaker funds carried over couldn't exceed the DOE reimbursement from the previous fiscal year. Any amount exceeding the appropriation from the previous year would have to be returned to the town's general fund.

Finance Director Michael Buckley said the regulations went into effect too late to affect the end of the fiscal 2006. However, at the close of the fiscal 2007 this past June the DOR included the new regulation in its review.

Consequently, Buckley had to remove all but this year's circuit breaker grant ($310,000). A total of $260,765 was transferred to the town's free cash account. The town's free cash will be certified at Special Town Meeting.

The school department has already sent a memo to the School Committee and other town boards (Selectmen and Advisory Committee) requesting the money be returned to the schools after the free cash is certified at Town Meeting or at least earmarked for special education.

"Special education is a very fluid account," said Superintendent of Schools Denise Walsh in a phone interview. Students who move in and out of the district or change curriculum making the estimate for special education hard to predict, said Walsh

The circuit breaker funds were not intended for any other pur-

New contract for school chief

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

The Superintendent of Schools has inked a new contract to head the Cohasset Public Schools for three more years. This is Dr. Denise Walsh's first contract renewal since signing her original three-year contract in 2004.

Although the contract was signed on July 23, the salary and other conditions are retroactive to July 1, 2007. The contract runs through June 30, 2010 and will automatically extend in one-year increments after that point. Like all contracts, the 10-page document outlines the conditions and terms of her employment.

The Superintendent's salary will be $151,000 for this fiscal year. The second year of the contract will be $157,085, and the final year will yield a salary of $163,416. Walsh's original salary in 2004 was $120,000.

As a result of the new contract, Walsh receives 36 days of sick leave initially, then 18 days for each year of the contract. Unused sick time can be accumulated from year to year, up to 180 days, or the equivalent of an entire school year for students. However, the contract states there will be no reimbursement for unused accumulated sick leave. In addition, Walsh receives 30 working days, or six weeks, annual vacation, exclusive of legal holidays. Fifteen can be carried over during the term of the contract. In the prior contract, Walsh has five weeks vacation.

Superintendents side-by-side

Town	Yearly salary
Duxbury	$150,000
Norwell (FY07)	$142,331
Hingham	$137,442
Scituate	$131,171
Cohasset	$151,000

The contract, signed by School Committee chairman Rick Flynn and Walsh, states the Committee must review the Superintendent's performance on a yearly basis. The review consists of a written review, a discussion of job description, performance and working relationship with the Committee. The evaluation will primarily be based on her performance on mutually agreed upon goals.

If the School Committee intends not to renew the agreement, they are obligated to give Walsh a year's notice. The contract can be terminated by mutual consent at any time, or with Walsh's 90 days written notice, or by the Committee for "good cause."

The contract allows the Superintendent of Schools to undertake speaking, writing, lecturing or other engagements of a professional nature for compensation, as long as it does not take away from her responsibilities as Superintendent.

The breadth of duties is outlined, describing the Superintendent's role as the "Chief Executive Officer" of the School Committee. The Superintendent will be reimbursed for reasonable expenses occurred during her performance of duties, including attending conferences and paying membership dues. A professional development fund of $1,500 is also provided for in the contract.

Chief Hussey said [illegible] will host an event [illegible] Tuesday, Oct. [illegible] Scituate Police [illegible] accompanied [illegible] now in the process of charging those individuals, Hussey said.

Train noise

Residents have been calling the police to complain about the noise from the train. Last week police received a call from a Sollier Street resident at 9 p.m. saying that she did not like the train running so late and she asked "How am I supposed to sleep?" Another call came in at 10:30 one night last week in which the North Main Street resident complained about how late the train was running and that she could not get her kids to bed.

Chief Hussey said the MBTA complaint line is 617-222-3200.

He said he thinks once people get used to the train it will become "background noise" and people will get used to it. "We anticipate it is going to take some time for people to get used to the train," he said.

Peace restored

An officer restored the peace during a verbal argument on Elm Street between two neighbors who had a dispute over spraying water and a loud radio, last week. The argument was heated enough to generate a call from a person who thought the two were involved in "road rage." The officer spoke to both people involved.

Parking lot

An employee at the Golden Living Center off Route 3A came out after completing her 7 a.m. to 3 p.m. shift to discover that someone had dented the driver's side door of her 1986 Honda that was parked in the lot. Police have taken a report and are investigating. The other driver did not come forward. Anyone who may have witnessed the accident on Saturday, Oct. 6 or should contact the police.

Cohasset Village restaurant now offers private parties

"It should open a new avenue for the restaurant," says Houlihan.

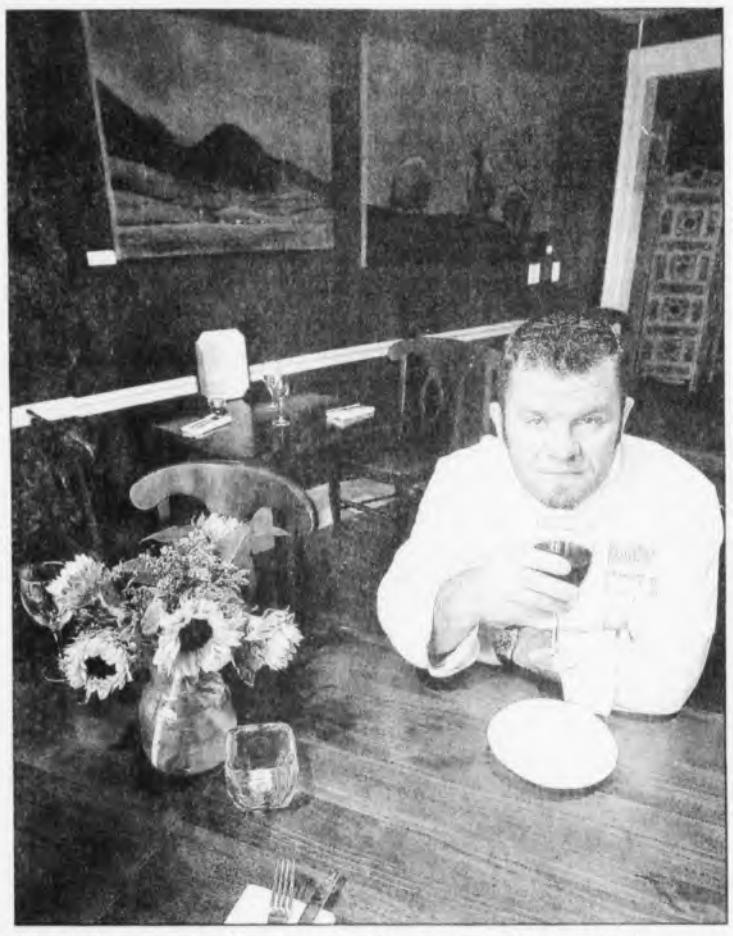
Houlihan hopes to use the new room to bring back bi-monthly bistro wine dinners, something he did when Bia Bistro first opened its doors. The mid-week event would entail five to six course pre-set menu, with each course paired with a different wine.

"For a little restaurant hidden out of the way, we've done really well," he says crediting the good food, good service and casual atmosphere as the reasons people keep coming back.

Positive reviews and press hasn't hurt either. In recent years Bia Bistro received Boston Magazine's prestigious Best of Boston award for best bistro south of Boston. Most recently, Bia Bistro scored a 28 out of 30 on their Zagat rating — no other restaurant in Massachusetts has a higher rating.

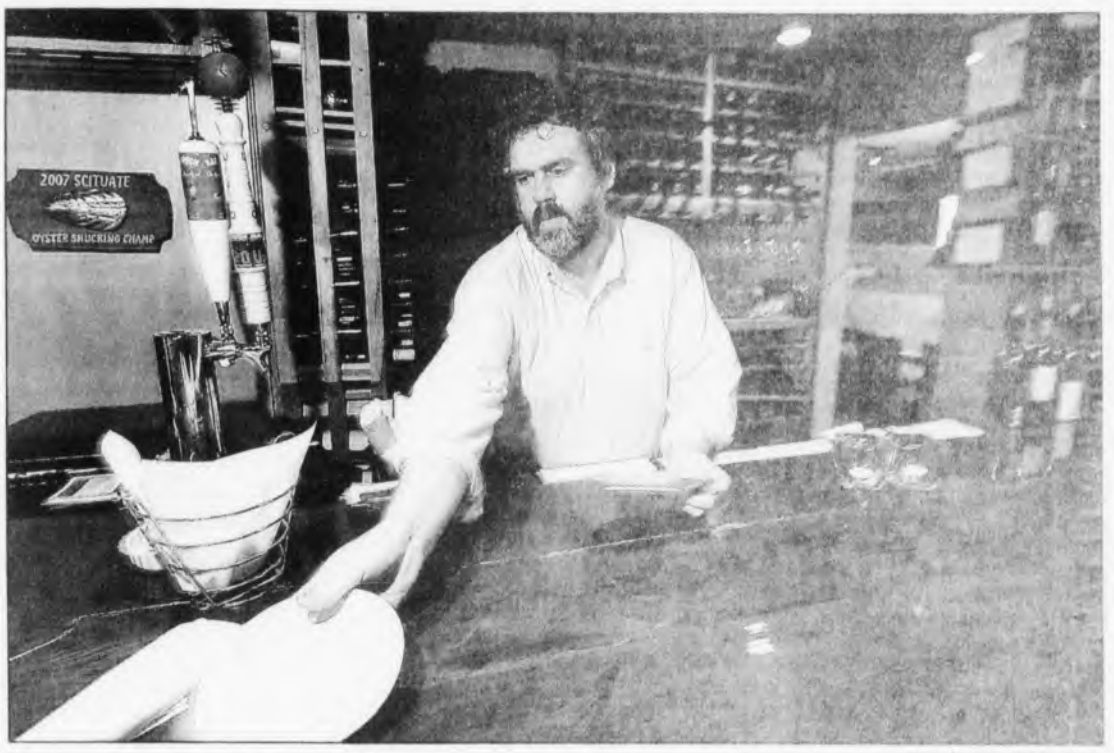
The Bia menu is Mediterranean inspired and always changing depending on what's available. He says his signature dish has become the citrus glazed Long Island duck served with confit. He buys all his seafood locally, typically straight off the boat in Scituate Harbor.

To complement their new bar area, Bia is in the process of getting a full liquor license. Houlihan expects to hear back from the state on their full liquor license application shortly. The Board of Selectmen approved the application back in August.



"We want to give people the opportunity to start with an aperitif or finish with an Irish coffee," said Houlihan. Previously, Bia Bistro only had a license to serve beer and wine. Once the liquor license is finalized, Houlihan plans on developing a martini and specialty drink menu.

"Restaurants are scouting [Cohasset] out" for possible locations, explaining his restaurant along with Bernard's and the Red Lion Inn have brought attention to the area.



In his four years' time in Cohasset, Houlihan feels Bia Bistro has become a staple in the Cohasset restaurant scene, "my customers are very loyal."

Although most of his customers reign from Cohasset and its surrounding towns, he does get many patrons who make a trek from Boston and the North Shore to dine at Bia Bistro. For example, a well-traveled couple from Newton comes down to Bia Bistro at least once a month to dine.

"They tell me this is the closest they can get to a bistro in Paris," Houlihan says with a smile.

Chef and owner Brian Houlihan sits in the new expanded section of Bia Bistro. Along with more seating capacity for busy restaurant nights, Houlihan plans on doing private parties for up to 30 people in the new dining room.

Barkeeper Scott Dahill places a plate in front of a customer at the new seven-seat bar area in Bia Bistro. A bar menu, tapas and nightly wine specials complement this new area.

More changes possible at Samuel Bates

The Samuel Bates House has been a familiar site in the village since 1811. The building has undergone many transformations in its nearly 200-year life. It was constructed as a residence and then went the way of the majority of village buildings with residences on the second floor with retail on the first floor.

Village frequenters have noticed work being done on the building throughout the summer. Bia Bistro has expanded to a new dining room with 30 additional seats. Carmela Drew, a new shop to the village, will be opening later this month (see related stories).

The building's owner, Wayne Sawchuk, expanded the building as much as possible within its existing footprint. He had more significant renovations on the table last winter, but the Zoning Board of Appeals stopped them in their tracks. A lot size of 40,000 square feet is currently required in the Village for any expansion and his lot does not meet that requirement. Sawchuk had plans to build a second building with first floor retail, second floor residential but his plans could not go forward. If the village zoning bylaw amendments pass at the upcoming Special Town Meeting (Nov. 13), Sawchuk could move ahead with a similar plan.

In the meantime, the first floor is handicap accessible, with a new handicap bathroom as well. Upstairs Sawchuk is currently renovating two apartments — a two-bedroom and a one-bedroom unit.

Sawchuk's plans for his property, which includes a large parcel facing the town parking lot, may not come to fruition in exactly the way he originally intended. But, he does plan to do something with the back area.

"I'm going to finish the building so it looks good on a four sides," says Sawchuk.

Food and family: Carmela Drew opens Oct. 29

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNE.COM

Bringing together the finest ingredients can often yield extraordinary results. The ingredients may be a part of a recipe, a fine cheese or unique pasta, or the ingredients may be part of a greater scheme of bringing friends and family together for a meal. Michele Rizzo and Maria DePaoli, sisters and owners of the new village shop, Carmela Drew, hope to provide the former and, in turn, spur on the latter.

The shop, located inside the Samuel Bates House (39 South Main St.), will officially open on Monday, Oct. 29. They are currently wrapping up finishing touches on the space, which has undergone a complete renovation in the last few months.

"The space was bare bones, there was nothing here," says Rizzo, but they were able to see beyond the plywood, sawdust and relative emptiness to their vision of a gourmet food shop. Although the renovations have been on-going ordeal since July one of the most gratifying aspects for them has been seeing it all come together. The store is almost ready to be filled with product and fully decorated. The wall colors are a rich and inviting golden brown, set off by white shelves and display areas.

The sisters never really envisioned themselves as small business owners, but started thinking about the possibility last winter. Rizzo comes from a financial services corporate background where she held positions in marketing, sales, communications and event planning. DePaoli's professional experiences stems from the academic and healthcare arenas. After nearly 18 years apiece in the 9-to-5 routine, both sisters decided it was time to try something new.

However, the sisters did not jump into small business on a whim. Together they did extensive market research to determine if a fine food store would be a viable business. Originally, they looked at larger spaces for their business where they though they could have a small sandwich shop/café. When they found the much smaller Cohasset Village space, they decided to narrow the scope of the shop to focus on fine foods and accessories.

"There is so much interest in food — high quality food — but most don't have the time to cook," Rizzo says and hopes Carmela Drew can bring out the gourmet cook in all of us.

Prepared meals were always a part of their business plan from the start, they felt it was really needed in this area. Right now, Cohasset residents have to travel to the Fruit Center or Whole Foods, both in Hingham, to find high quality prepared meals.

"Prepared meals are going to be a huge part of our business. They're going to be good, healthy and simple," says Rizzo. Lasagna, chili, soup, stuffed pork tenderloin, Chinese salads are just some of the offerings. Each meal will be available to serve two, four or six people. Prices will vary accordingly, but Rizzo says it will fall somewhere between the grocery store and restaurant costs.

The store's name Carmela Drew is a nod to both the sisters' grandmothers. Carmela was their paternal grandmother's first name and Drew was their materal grandmother's maiden name. Both women were great cooks in their own right.

"It's a nice way to honor our family," says Rizzo and complements their family business.

Specialty foods and kitchen gadgets will round out the rest of their product line.

"We're going to offer things customers will be very familiar with," like semolina pasta explains Rizzo, "but the whole idea is to provide options beyond the standard fare," such as whole wheat.

Imported cheeses, savory and sweet jams, specialty meats, organic coffee, pasta sauce, baking mixes and restaurant quality appetizers are just a few of the products. Where possible the sisters made contacts with local New England vendors. Kinnealey Meats, Jim's Organic Coffee, Deborah's Kitchen and Stonewall Kitchen all made the cut.

If an even more exotic ingredient is necessary for a special party, the sisters have relationships with dozens of vendors and can work with them to get that special product.

With their varied background and complementary skills, the sisters are confident their business and relationship will flourish.

"We won't be trying to do the same things, our strengths don't collide," says DePaoli.

"Besides we're sisters, we won't be able to get away with never talking to each other again," jokes Rizzo.

Since their sign was installed in front of the store a few weeks ago, passersby have been stopping in to see what they are all about. They feel the community has been very welcoming and excited about their opening, some even offering advice and suggestions.

The pair plans on continuing the welcoming attitude by having tasting nights with residents in the coming months. Each day a new sample will be out for customers to try, "we want people to taste the food and have a sense of what they are getting," says Rizzo.

The sisters are looking forward to greeting customers, guiding them through the products and being a part of the village community.

"This is a shop we would like to shop at, there's no place like it around here," says Rizzo.

Carmela Drew will open for business on October 29. Hours will be Monday to Saturday 10a.m. to 7p.m. and Sunday 10a.m. to 5p.m.

AROUND TOWN

READY TO GO

Hello Cohasset. Hooray, I am back and ready to go with all of your wonderful news, photos and event information that you have to share with all. Please make sure to send your information back to me at aroundtowncohasset@yahoo.com no later than 5 pm on Tuesdays. Mary (Ford) did such a great job in September with the column that it will be hard to get back up to her par but here goes.

HONOR SOCIETY

Congratulations go out to Ashley Faber, a senior at Connecticut College, who was recently elected to the Undergraduate Advisory Board for the Connecticut College chapter of Psi Chi, the National Honor Society of Psychology, for the 2007-2008 academic year. Ashley was a 2004 graduate of Cohasset High School and is the daughter of Stephen and Lesley Faber.

LATIN DANCING

Warm up this autumn to the authentic rhythm of the Grupo Chevere Band! Come enjoy a fun evening of live music and Latin dancing (including some instruction & demonstrations) sponsored by the Cohasset Diversity Committee. Proceeds of the event will help fund the Peer Leadership Program at the Cohasset Middle High School. This lively event happens Saturday, Oct. 20 from 8 p.m. to midnight at The River Club, 78 Border St., Scituate. Cash bar, complimentary tasty hors d'oeuvres! Tickets are $35 person and are available at Buttonwood Books & Toys (Shaw's Plaza) and Paperscapes, 47 South Main St. (in the village). For more information please call Connie Afshar at 781 383 6006.

IT'S A GIRL

If you see Abigail and Ken Greer of Hill Street out shopping for tiny "pink" outfits, be sure to congratulate them. In fact they may have their brand-new baby girl with them! Katherine Jackson Greer arrived at precisely 5:37 a.m. on Sept. 29, 2007. She tipped the scales at 9 pounds, 11 ounces and measured 21-1/2 inches at birth.

Ready and waiting with open arms were Katherine's big brother Will and big sister Molly.

Available for extra hugs are grandparents Bill and Marilyn Adams of Quincy and Jim and Pauline Greer of Plymouth.

Congratulations all!

BULB ORDERS

Attention goes out to all Gardeners. The Community Garden Club of Cohasset is now taking orders for a unique selection of quality spring flowering bulbs that will enhance the color and beauty of the garden. The assortment of bulbs includes tulips in a variety of beautiful colors; sweetly fragrant double narcissi; exotic allium; rock garden iris; and petite favorites such as chinodoxa, muscari and scilla. The bulb orders are accompanied with directions for planting. The bulbs are being sold at the Cohasset Farmer's Market on Cohasset Common on Thursdays from 2:30-5 p.m.. All purchases help fund club programs and community services.

1957 FOOTBALL

The Cohasset Football team has begun its 2007 season. Fifty years ago, another Cohasset High School Football team played and completed its season with an undefeated record! Many of the players still live in town or are close by. The Cohasset Gridiron Club would like to spread the word that the Cohasset-Abington game being played at home on Nov. 2 at 7 p.m. will be dedicated to this very special undefeated team. If you know a player or family member, please pass on the invitation to attend this game so we can celebrate a 50-year-old memory with them! Oh, and be sure to wish them a happy anniversary!

BRICK FUNDRAISER

The Beechwood Ballpark is complete. There is a brick fundraiser under way to help pay for maintaining this wonderful new space. Engraved bricks are $100 and will be placed in the grassy area behind the outfield scoreboard. If you are interested, please contact Michelle Loughlin at mloughlin521@hotmail.com.

PUMPKINS!

The Pumpkin Patch, sponsored by Cohasset ASP, is open! Buy a pumpkin and support a great cause.

The Pumpkin Patch will be open from 10 a.m. to 7 p.m. through Oct. 31 in Wheelwright Park off North Main Street. The Pumpkin Patch supports the Cohasset Appalachia Service project that sends about 200 people, adults and teens to Appalachia area to repair homes each summer.

NIGHT OUT ON MAIN ST.

Join the merchants of Cohasset's Main Street for a night out on the town from 5 to 9 p.m., Thursday, Oct. 18. Shop extended store hours, enjoy the festivities and refreshments, and pick up a raffle ticket at each merchant you visit for a chance to win prizes. Increase your chances to win prizes by looking for the pink balloons. Drop your raffle tickets off from 8 to 9:15 p.m., at Bia's. The winning ticket will be drawn at 9:30 p.m.

Participating stores include Bia, Carmela Drew, Cindy Vallino Photography, Darilynn's, Ephiphany Designs, Hernan's, Paperscapes Ports, The Red Geranium, Twist, and Village Wine and Spirits.

In addition, 10 percent of all sales will be donated to Hope in Bloom, a nonprofit organization which provides indoor and outdoor gardens to those undergoing breast cancer treatment. For more information, visit www.hopeinbloom.org.

That is all I have for this week but expect to be back in full swing for next week. Please make sure to get all that news in to me by next Tuesday at 5. This could be school related, items that are going on in and around town, special well wishes for birthdays, new babies, anniversaries and more. I am happy to be back on board and can't wait to go forward.

EMAIL: aroundtowncohasset@yahoo.com

All photos should be dropped off at Cohasset News on Brook Street in an envelope marked, "Cohasset Mariner, Around Town" by Tuesday am. Have a great week.

ANNIVERSARY

Betsey and Bob Detwiler on their wedding day, Sept. 30, 1957.

Betsey and Bob Detwiler on the 50th wedding anniversary, Sept. 30.

Detwilers celebrate 50th wedding anniversary

Bob and Betsey Detwiler of Norwell celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary with their family Sept. 30. The five Detwiler sons, four daughters-in-law and eight and a half grandchildren filled the front rows of First Parish Church in Norwell to celebrate with Bob and Betsey, who are longtime members of the choir and congregation.

The clan progressed to the banks of the North River to enjoy a day of sunshine, champagne and lobster. Andy, Kathy, Peter, Julie, Jon, Laurie, Chris, Jeff, Ryan, Chad, Kelsey, Conor, Liam, Forrest, Harry, Allie and Belle wished them well on their 50 years together.

Betsey owns Buttonwood Books in Shaw's Plaza in Cohasset.

Cohasset couple has exhibit at Hingham library

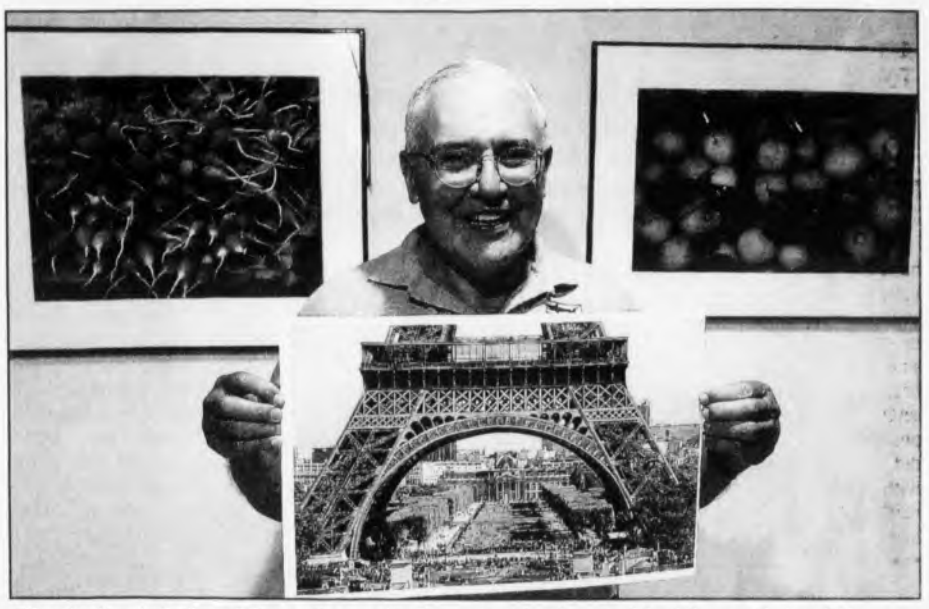
color into the next piece. Oranges, blues, greens and the rich neutrals of the Italian landscape draw the eye from painting to painting. By utilizing this mode of transition, the display of Richard's photographs move seamlessly to Kimberlee's oil paintings and then back again.



"A show always looks better when the colors and shapes work together," says Richard.

Bold colors and geometric shapes are found throughout Richard's photography, Kimberlee says her husband has a natural eye for finding interesting shots.

"I look for repetition, textures, colors and diagonal lines," says Richard. One of his favorites in the exhibit features a painter with a white suit brushing on a bright blue to a storefront in Paris.

"I love the stark white against the blue backgrounds," and the diagonals of a stepladder add even more interest to the photo, says Richard. The couple stumbled upon the photo opportunity while walking in Paris.

"My eye is looking for [interesting photographs] all the time…I do all my traveling through a view finder," says Richard, "if you look closely you begin to see things you didn't see before."

"On the Road: Italy and France" is on display at the Hingham Public Library. Richard Alemian holds a print of the Eiffel Tower, just one of the prints hanging in the gallery show. Alemian says he does all his traveling through a camera's view finder.

STAFF PHOTOS/ROBIN CHAN

Kimberlee Alemian mixes paint in her home studio for her latest piece of art. A selection of pieces depicting Italy and France is currently on display at the Hingham Public Library.

Richard takes all his shots through a single reflex digital camera, after largely giving up film about three years ago.

By his side during the taking of the majority of the photos, Kimberlee is often snapping away herself. Photos help her when she gets back to her Cohasset studio to paint. She often does pencil sketches and takes notes on lighting and colors to keep the landscape fresh in her memory. On her trip last year she did do some "on location" painting while on the French Riviera, but found the effort more trouble than it was worth with the equipment and paint drying time.

"From now on I'm going to rely on sketches, photos and color notes," says Kimberlee. However, one piece in the gallery, "Villafranche-sur-Mer," was painted while overlooking the landscape.

In two of Kimberlee's larger oil paintings, "Monet's Garden (Giverney)" and "Venice Canal," she took a more free form approach to the painting. She covers the canvas as quickly as possible, focusing on creating a feeling rather than replicating the landscape, "it's more about the process," she says. After the initial rush of covering the canvas, she sits back, re-evaluates what she has done and adds as she feels is necessary.

Kimberlee and Richard often go to great lengths to find that perfect perspective. While in Rome they walked for over a half-mile to find a unique angle of the ancient Colosseum. Both artists captured the view using their individual mediums; both are on display in the gallery.

The couple has found traveling in September to be ideal. The weather is still good, the sun is at a great angle and the summer tourists have gone back to school and work. They have visited France nine times and Italy four times, but they continue to return. Although they say there are many beautiful places in the United States, they are drawn back to Europe in part because of the history that lingers behind every corner. They seek out the stories behind the sights they visit and try to discover places off the beaten track — or find new angles on tourist haunts.

Kimberlee and Richard have a strong working relationship where they can rely on each other for constructive feedback.

"I have someone I trust who has my best interests at heart," says Kimberlee who says they both are creative people and like to talk to each other about their work.

"It's a great form of communication," agrees Richard. With such talent in one home, Kimberlee and Richard often are vying for wall space to hang their work.

Next September, they plan on visiting a new part of Europe — Poland, Austria and the Czech Republic.

Community invited to 'drumming and spirituality'

Percussionist Matt Meyer will lead a workshop on "Drumming and Spirituality" in the Parish House of First Parish Unitarian Universalist this Sunday, Oct. 14, from 11:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m.. This workshop for all ages is open to the entire community and follows the 10 AM morning worship in the Meeting House also led by Mr. Meyer. "Drumming and Spirituality" is a chance for people of all skill levels to participate in hands-on rhythm-making. Says Matt: "We will experience the spirituality of community music-making through different activities, stories, games and discussions as well as look at how rhythm and music intersect with Unitarian Universalist values." He suggests bringing your own drum (if you have one!). If not, drums will be provided!

Matt Meyer is a graduate of the Berklee College of Music and has studied music in Cuba, Ghana, and sites in Central America. Matt plays percussion for several bands around Boston, as well as giving private lessons and workshops for schools and churches. As an active member of the Unitarian Universalist Young Adult movement, Matt is always seeking new and better ways to combine music, spirituality, and social justice work.

This Sunday's community-wide workshop is co-sponsored by First Parish's Religious Education Committee for Children & Youth and Adult Education.

Village shops host special night

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

What could be better than a night out in Cohasset Village while supporting a good cause?

Shop owners want to generate excitement about "downtown" Cohasset by staying open late next Thursday (Oct. 18).

"I thought about doing something in October and mentioned it to Beverly (Bielewicz) and it mushroomed from there," says Darilynn Evans of Darilynn's.

Bielewicz of Paperscapes is one of the "new kids on the block" having opened her shop last April.

"Our objective is to get people down to the village," she says. "We want to create some excitement."

So the two women hooked up with Nancy Levanchy of Twist and Lisa Lynch of Ports & Company to turn their idea into reality.

"At first we thought of having a 'ladies night out' but since our businesses are all on Main Street – we turned it into a 'Night Out on Main Street'," Bielewicz recalls.

The women describe it as an "October stroll" not unlike the holiday stroll in December. In addition to posters and word-of-mouth, they have sent out 2,000 cards to customers.

In recognition of October being Breast Cancer Awareness Month, 10 percent of sales will be donated to Hope in Bloom, a nonprofit organization which provides indoor and outdoor gardens to those undergoing breast cancer treatment.

Levanchy of Twist, which has been in the Village three years, says the Village is better than ever. "Everyone who comes in makes it better," she says.

Lynch of Ports & Company says Cohasset has been a great town. "The support of the people in town has been great – the town has a lot of offer. "This is our way of giving back," she says.

Night Out on Main Street

Join the merchants of Cohasset's Main Street for a night out on the town from 5 to 9 p.m., Thursday, Oct. 18. Shop extended store hours, enjoy the festivities and refreshments, and pick up a raffle ticket at each merchant you visit for a chance to win prizes. Increase your chances to win prizes by looking for the pink balloons. Drop your raffle tickets off from 8 to 9:15 p.m., at Bia's. The winning ticket will be drawn at 9:30 p.m.

Participating stores include Bia, Carmela Drew, Cindy Vallino Photography, Darilynn's, Ephiphany Designs, Hernan's, Paperscapes Ports, The Red Geranium, Twist, and Village Wine and Spirits.

"This is our way of giving back."

Every year Phil Lehr of the Appalachia Service Project designs a Halloween-related motif for the Pumpkin Patch at Wheelwright Park. As you can see this year, Phil has outdone himself! Thanks also go to Margot Cheel for this great photograph. The Pumpkin Patch will be open from 10 a.m. to 7 p.m. through Oct. 31 in Wheelwright Park off North Main Street. The Pumpkin Patch supports the Cohasset Appalachia Service project that sends about 200 people, adults and teens to the Appalachia area to repair homes each summer. For photos from last Thursday's "pumpkin arrival" see page 21.

Cohasset Cabaret tickets are on sale now

Talented cast members from the South Shore area will perform songs from artists such as Sonny and Cher, Frank Sinatra, and the Dream Girls, as well as numbers from productions including "Fiddler on the Roof," and "Chicago."

The Cohasset Cabaret will make its debut Friday, Nov. 2, and Saturday, Nov. 3, at St. Anthony's Parish Hall, 129 South Main St. Each evening will begin with a social hour from 7 to 8 p.m., featuring a raffle table with items from local artists and merchants, followed by the cabaret.

Talented cast members from the South Shore area will perform songs from artists such as Sonny and Cher, Frank Sinatra, and the Dream Girls, as well as numbers from productions including "Fiddler on the Roof," and "Chicago." Don't miss the opportunity to see the talented local cast, which will feature Cohasset's own Lily Sestito, John Campbell and daughter Catie Campbell Laitinen, and Barbara Baumgarten and daughter Ellie.

Members of the audience may bring their own snacks to enjoy or purchase a snack box for $10. A cash bar will serve wine, beer, and soft drinks. Proceeds benefit the Friends of Cohasset Elder Affairs.

Tickets cost $25 each and are available from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m., each Sunday, at St. Anthony's Parish Hall. Tickets are also available during the week at the Parish Hall, and at the Cohasset Elder Affairs office at the South Shore Community Center on Main St.

For information, call 781-383-0752.

Vampire's Ball is Oct. 27

Join the fun at the Vampire's Ball, on Saturday, Oct. 27 at 7p.m. when the Cohasset Basketball Boosters Club raises money to support basketball in Cohasset. Will Charles, owner of Cohasset Mortgage Company Inc. and father of two high school basketball players, will be sponsoring the event by hosting the fundraiser in his newly purchase property, 25 Ripley Road, once the historic Ripley Road Hospital where many a Cohasset native was born.

Atlantica will be catering the event and complimentary beer, wine and specialty drinks will be served. The night will include dancing in the "Night of the Living Dead Discothèque" plus haunted tours and high jinks. The event will also provide televised coverage of the Red Sox battling for the World Series. Tickets are $40 per person and can be purchased during Recreational Basketball sign-ups on Saturday, October 13 from 9 to 11am at Cohasset Town Hall or by mailing a check payable to the Cohasset Basketball Boosters, PO Box 231, Cohasset. Festive seasonal attire is suggested. Check out Cohasset Basketball.com for more information.

OPINION

EDITORIAL

Cohasset trees

I think that I shall never see
A poem lovely as a tree.

A tree whose hungry mouth is prest
Against the earth's sweet flowing breast;

A tree that looks at God all day,
And lifts her leafy arms to pray;

A tree that may in Summer wear
A nest of robins in her hair;

Upon whose bosom snow has lain;
Who intimately lives with rain.

Poems are made by fools like me,
But only God can make a tree

Joyce Kilmer

Fall is perhaps the best time of year to appreciate trees. We are fortunate to live in New England where trees are not only in abundance but they can exhibit glorious colors every autumn. Due to the drought, this autumn may not be as spectacular as others but perhaps we will even appreciate our trees more, knowing that they have been stressed due to lack of water.

Here in Cohasset trees are an integral part of the landscape and an important part of the town's character.

The Cohasset Department of Public Works is the caretaker of thousands of town trees.

A proposal to cut down even one public shade tree in town requires a public hearing (unless the tree is dead or diseased beyond treatment).
